

A N INSTITUTION OF P. 7. 22
General History, OR THE HISTORY
OF THE Ecclesiastical Affairs OF THE WORLD.
Contemporary with The Second Part.

CONTAINING
That of the Roman Empire, its first countenancing and receiving Christian Religion.

FROM
The Conversion of Constantine the Great, to the Fall of Augustulus and the Ruine of the Empire in the West.

WITH An Account of the Polity of the Church, and the several Laws and Canons of Moment made, during the Reign of the Emperours both in East and West to this period.

By WILLIAM HOWEL, LL.D. sometimes Fellow of Magdalen College in Cambridge.

L O N D O N,
Printed for the Authors Widdow, by Miles Flesher, 1685.

TO THE HIGH and MIGHTY PRINCE,
JAMES the II.

King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c.

GREAT SIR,

AMONG the Crowds of Loyal Counties and Corporations that Address themselves unto Your MAJESTY, vouchsafe to permit a Desolate Widow to approach into Your Sacred Presence, to congratulate Your Happy and most Just Possession of the Throne of these Kingdoms, by laying a small Present at Your Royal Feet

Which is due to Your MAJESTY by a double Title: both by Right of Succession to our Late Gracious Sovereign, by whose Royal Bounty this Work was encouraged, and also by the Designment of the Author, who intended, had not His Death prevented it, to have Dedicated this Book to His Royal Highness JAMES the Duke of York, which I now most Humbly offer to the Sacred Majesty of King JAMES the Second.

Whom I beseech the King of Kings long to Preserve Beloved of all His Subjects, Dreaded by all His Enemies, and Renowned to all Posterity in the History of future Ages.

So Prayeth with due Reverence,

Your Majesties

Most Loyal Subject

Mary Howel.

PREFACE.

THE Author having all along in his first part, intermixed the Ecclesiastical Affairs with the Secular, thought it would be most useful now, to represent them by themselves, separately, in a distinct Volume, which is here presented to the Reader ; wherein he hath brought down his account of them, to the Fall of Augustulus and the ruine of the Empire in the West (where the Second part ends) setting forth how the Great Emperour Constantine was converted to the Faith, and what means and methods he took to propagate the Christian Religion, and destroy by degrees the long practised Idolatry of the Pagan World. With an account of the Church Polity ; what was its Government, who were its Governours, their severall Offices, Degrees, and Orders. The Affairs of the Church follow from the first General Council of Nice against the Arians, to the Apostacy of Julian ; thence to the Second General Council, summoned by Theodosius the First at Constantinople, against the Heresie of Macedonius : thence to the Third, call'd by Theodosius the Second to meet at Ephesus ; against the Heresie of Nestorius ; and thence to the Fourth, called by Martianus to Chalcedon, against the Heresie of Eutyches and Dioscorus ; and so down to the deposing of Augustulus, and the Fall of the Empire in the West, with the division of the Church into the East and West. The Decrees and Canons of each Council are set down, both for the settling good Order and Government, and for suppressing those Schisms and Heresies which the Devil raised by his aspiring Agents, that by sowing such Tares he might spoyle Christs Husbandry.

P R E F A C E.

In particular, that supream Authority usurped by the Roman Bishop is represented, how, and by what means it was first pretended to, but ever rejected by the whole Catholick Church: Which gives to each Metropolitane the sole jurisdiction over his own Flock; not any General Commission to any one whatsoever, for the Supervising of all, their Authority being equal, and their Power the same;

Thus far he proceeded, and left it finished under his own hand, as we testifie; who have seen the Original.

H. London.

Tho. Ruffen.

Sy. Patrick D. D.

Will. Denton M. D.

Rich. Ashfeld Gen.

T H E

THE Church History, OR THE ECCLESIASTICAL AFFAIRS Contemporary with the Constantinopolitan Roman EMPIRE.

CHAP. I.

The History of the Reformation of Religion by Constantine.

Sufferings had hitherto been the Character of the Church, and the Professors of Christianity, the more Active and Vigorous they appear'd, the more exquisite Torments they were sure to undergo; the Kings and Potentates of the Earth instead of being her Nursing-Fathers, had all along made use of their utmost Power and policy not only to Curb and Check her growing Greatness, but utterly to extirpate her from off the face of the Earth; so that what Advances she yet made were in despite of the Malice of her Persecutors, and the Fruits she brought forth were the blessed product of the Blood of her Martyrs. But now in compassion to her Afflictions, and in pity to the Pangs and Struggles she laboured under, God rais'd up Constantine, not only to be a Protector, but himself a Professor of Christianity, that so his Church might have some respite, and enjoy at least a breathing-while in the midst of these her Terroures and Agonies.

The Church and State united.

2. The Name of Christ had mightily prevail'd, and the Church of God was upheld by a most powerful Support before ever she lean'd on the Roman Scepter, the Wings upon which she was Born, and under which she was Cherish'd and Defended, were stronger and more large than those of the Roman Eagle, which hitherto had improv'd the Vigour of its Eyes, strength of its Beak, and sharpness of its Talents in vain, against this Bird of Paradise. Neither was it out of need of Reputation, that the Roman Faeces now was to be vail'd to the Cross, the Churches Majesty and Glory never more appearing, than when she was most clouded by Sufferings and Worldly Prejudice; as the deepest and blackest Clouds are most capable of receiving the reflection of the Suns Beauties, and a thick Air the best Medium to discover the Brightness of Heavenly Bodies. These stupendous Miracles that stopp'd and diverted the course of Nature her self, both in the bigger and lesser World; in that by the production of Wonders to the outward Senes, in this by working Effects perceivable both by the outward and inward Sight, to such as were not blinded by ignorance, prejudice or affectation, demonmonstrated such incomparable Beauty, as would dazzle all the Glories of the World though contracted into one Sun. Miracles wrought upon material Subjects, and such as neither the Art of Pagans, nor Skill of the False Gods (who were also obnoxious to the same Commands) could work, carried with them sufficient Evidence; but those that appeared in Mens minds, transformed quite from their ordinary Condition, by such Virtues as were but Antiently Pictured on the greatest Philosophers, carried along with them absolute demonstrations to unprejudiced Judgments, and left others without excuse. But contempt of the φθέρων φθέρων made much more sure by the Circumstances attending it; Triumph I say over Death, manifested not only the Reality but Glory of the Truth, which struck the World with admiration and conviction, for that the only Prodigy now, that Man seemed, who could be so stupid as not to believe. Greater were the Conquests the Church made by her Spiritual Weapons, viz. Prayers and Tears, than by the accession of Secular Arms, and stronger her Natural Power (that is also Spiritual) Reputation, than that she obtained by the addition of a Temporal Crown.

3. Yet was she to try all Conditions, and be now refreshed after so great Conflicts as she had sustained. Gods Power is also seen in calling those that have the greatest Temptations, and in giving light to such whose Eyes are put out by too near Approximation to Worldly, but dazzling Objects: Neither were such Functions as he Established by his own Institution to be disowned by a want of real and the best Acknowledgments, nor such as were Gods in this Life by his appointment, to be the only Persons that were to be Devils in that to come. Therefore after 312. Years or more (during which space we have no assurance that any Roman Prince unfeignedly became a Christian) Constantine the Emperour the Son of Constantius and Helena a British Woman Converted to the Faith by a Vision of a Cross seen in the Air, wherein was this Greek Inscription, ἐν τούτῳ νικά, or, In this Overcome, as he Marched against Maxentius the great Persecutor of Christians. This all Christian Writers affirm, and as (a) Eusebius tells us, Constantine himself by Oath affirmed; neither need we at all to question the Truth of it; For that God made use of Miracles upon extraordinary Occasions, we must not doubt, and such we must confess this to have been, if the extraordinary Condition of the Person, and the vast Consequences be duly considered. That Miracles as at this time were not ceased utterly, we may believe from that reason which was ever the final Cause of them, and from the Testimony of several Writers, who discourse of the first Plantation of Religion amongst Barbarous Nations long after this Season, whom it is little less than arrogance to Condemn of Falseness (although perhaps too Credulous in some Particulars) because as extraordinary means seem necessary for the Conversion of Later, as were used for the Conviction of former Disciples. This Conversion of Constantine was in the Seventh of his Reign, the Fourth Year of the 272. Olympiad, of Rome the 1065. A. D. 312. He himself the Second time, and Licinius his Colleague also the second time being Consuls.

4. Being fully instructed in that way into which he had been so Miraculously led, he resolved to proceed in despite of all opposition, he found the Church in such a Case as required an Healing, helping and delivering, not an adorning hand, her Wounds were deep and her Enemies strong, and many who lately had got such success, as they esteemed it, that puffed up in their Imaginations they determined to think of opposition for the future, although the Blood of the Martyrs, contrary both to their expectation and desire, still proved the Seed of the Church. Knowing therefore, like a Skillful Physician, the true Method of her Cure, he first applied such a Medicine, as both should heal her Wounds, and what was more, make her Sword Proof for the time to come; Publishing an Edict both in his own Name and that of Licinius, (after the Victory obtained against Maxentius) whereby it is declared, that (a) Liberty henceforth be denied to none, of Choosing or Following the Christian Service and Religion; but that Liberty be granted to every one, to addit his mind to that Religion, which he thinketh fit for him. A flow but sure pace in things of such Consequence and difficulty is the best, all sudden and Violent Mutations are as to the Body Natural, so also to the Civil and Spiritual very dangerous, one very Plethoric and weak is gently to be Purged, left together with some Humours, Life it self is forced out; neither is a quite contrary Dyer allowed all on a sudden, by that genuine saying of Esculapius Festina lente, Constantine had learnt from one of his Predecessors; and sat cito, si sat bene, he knew agreeable to Christian Politicks. It is true that Idolatry is not to be per-

Constantine Converted to the Faith.

(a) In vita Constantini,
cap. 22.

By an Edict given Liberty of Conscience.

(a) Eusebius
lib. 10.
cap. 5.

permitted a Moment, and the first Minute is the fittest to abolish it: But a possibility must then be allowed. Idolatry had taken too deep Root to be Eradicated in an instant, nay, many Years were required to do it as we shall see in due time and order, Long Prescription and present Possession are great obstacles to dissuade, especially when backed with Dignity and Power. And such was the Tenure Idolatry held by at this time, Fool-hardiness and fury are the greatest Enemies to Religion; a thing of the greatest Sobriety and profound Prudence in the World.

5. Constantine having thus secured the being, as much as in him lay, provided for the well-being (a) of Christians, not only by his private Contributions; but by an (b) Edict in his Name and that of Licinius, directed to Anulinus Proconsul of Asiatick, whereby it is decreed that Possessions or any Goods belonging to the Church in former Times, should be restored, (c) and Freeing the Bishops and Clergy-men from publick Burthens, such (d) as were Banished into Islands, or elsewhere, or (e) Condemned to the Mines, were restored to their Natural Freedom; Honours (f) both Military and Civil, were restored to such as had lost them upon this account. The (g) Estates of Martyrs, Professors of Religion, or such as forsook their Country for the sake of it, were appointed to the next a Kin; and to (h) those that had not Kindred, the Church became Heirs; provided that whatsoever they gave in their Life-time should stand good. Those (i) that possessed their Lands, Orchards and Houses, were Compelled to restore them back, but not to make any satisfaction for the Rents or Fruits which they had received. All Church Lands or Goods in possession of the Imperial Crown, he restored. He (j) desired all Men to be Christians, but compelled none, striving by the greatness of his Example to draw them to the Truth; for his Palace, m resembled a Church, where Godly People assembled together; and he refused to celebrate the Secular Games which fell in his Third Consulship, to the great grief of the Pagans, who accounted them Instituted by their Gods, and presented by the Sybilline Oracles for remedies against Famine Plague and VV war, they accounted therefore this Omission of them as an Ominous sign of the Ruin of the Empire, and Zozimus most bravely avowed it such, having no other Design as he himself wittnesseth of Writing his History, then to show for sooth that the Ruin of the Empire came by the means of Christians.

6. The Original and cause of all Mischiefs, he maketh the Omission of this Solemnity by Constantine, whom like an Heathen and prejudiced Person, he loadeth with all sorts of Calumnies out of Malice; whereas it's clear by Testimony of all Writers, that the Ages wherein these Secular Games were Celebrated, neither wanted Plague, Famine nor War, but conflicted with all sorts of Miseries; and in the contrary, this present was vow'd of them being very Fortunate both to the City and the World; so many Tyrants and Barbarous Enemies being Suppressed; but when through the importunity of the Gentiles these Games were restored by permission of Honorius the Christian Emperour, the former Evils returned as we shall see in due place. But the Pagans grievously Troubled and Afflicted with this prosperity of Christianity, which they saw could not be Extirpated by such and so many Persecutions, to divert their Grief, invented certain Greek Verses, as given out to one that consulted an Oracle wherein they declared Christ innocent of this Error of Sacrilege as they called it, but accused St. Peter as Author of that wickedness that he might be worshipped in Christ's Name, for the space of 365. Years, after which time this Worship was to have an end without delay.

7. Constantine continuing his Reformation as the Times and import of the matter would bear, in the Tenth Year of his Reign, and the Third of his Conversion, he published an Edict whereby he prohibited, that any Christian Maid-Servants should be delivered into the hands of Bawds, which (a) is yet extant. He made also another mentioned by (b) St. Hierome and Sozomenus, though not extant in the (c) Code, whereby he put down the filthy Stews in the Fornices where amongst Whores, Boys also stood and were publicly exposed as Merchandise for Lust: As also another mentioned by (d) Lampridius, hath persified which forbade Eunuchs (the plague of Princes of those times) to bear any Offices of Majesty; he also thought a thing suitable to Christian moderation (that we may mention a thing not altogether so proper to this Subject) to mitigate the Severity of punishment formerly due to Malefactors, Repealing by an Edict of this same Year, that (e) Law and Custom whereby such as were condemned to the Gladiator's School, and the Mines were to be branded in the Face, ordering the Cause of their Condemnation

Orders the Church Lands to be restored, and is further kind to the Church.

Omits the Celebration of the Secular Games.

Prohibits Christians to be sold for prostitution.

(a) Ench. Hist.
lib. 10. cap. 22.
& 6.

(b) Item i.
bid. cap. 5.

(c) Item i.
bid. cap. 7.

(d) Item i.
bid. cap. 30.

(e) Item i.
bid. cap. 32.

(f) Cap. 33.
34.

(g) Cap. 35.
(h) Cap. 36.

(i) Cap. 37.
(j) Cap. 39.

(k) Item i.
bid. cap. 55.

(l) Item i.
bid. cap. 17.

(a) e. lib. de temen. lib. 1.

(b) in Epist.
lam.

(c) Lib. 1.
cap. 8.

(d) in Alex.

(e) L. 2. cod.
de poenit.

should be marked either in their Hands or Legs, least as he saith the Face which is formed according to Celestial Beauty, should be disfigured; which Custom by him thus brought in, is still observed amongst us, except in cases of some Heinous offence deserving a publick Character of Infamy; although the (f) Thracians accounted it (such is the diversity of thoughts and manners) a note of Nobility to have their Hands Marked (whence came the Proverb Thracia nota) as also the Sarmacians and Dacians, according to (g) Pliny, and the Tentans as (h) Tertullian writeth. The Syrians were wont also to be Stigmatized in their Hands or Necks.

8. This Year also (that we may return to our proper Subject) Constantine by an (a) Edict, refrained the Sawey impudence of the Jews, who were wont when any of their Sect turned Christian, to throw Stones at him and abuse him, with other sorts of Violence. Such as should do the like for the time to come, he commands to be Burnt with all their Abettors; and subjects all Christians to the same punishment that shall turn to their Religion. About this time it appeareth from Chrysostom, that the Jews Rebelled though in what Year is not exprest, for which crime Constantine Caused their Ears to be cut off, and led up and down in all places, as Fugitive Slaves that their Brethren might be advised how to carry themselves towards Christians; but afterward they were quiet, and living in Dutiful Obedience, had the same favour as other Subjects, which his Rescripts made in their behalf sufficiently declare.

9. Such was the Progress Constantine made in the Reformation of Religion, whilst as yet he Governed the Empire in Conjunction with Licinius, which at first seeming to joyn with him, afterwards turned Persecutor in those Dominions that were subject to him. He being overthrown, taken Prisoner, and put to Death, he proceeded with greater Vigour, having by several Edicts recalled Christianity, Banished as it were out of those Parts; Established the Church almost utterly Overturned and Desolate, restored such as had either been forced or Fleed for safety from their own Countrys, Released them that were Condemned either to Prison or the Mines, restored such to Liberty as had been made Slaves upon the account of Conscience; restored all to their Estates and Dignities, and provided for the Heirs of Martyrs that they should Succeed them according to Law and Conscience; and if they had no Kindred, then their Estates should fall to the Church, provided that whatsoever they gave in their Life-time should stand Firm. All those things were included in an Edict, which presently he put in Execution, disannulling whatsoever the Tyrants had done, so that restitution was made to the right Owners according to Law and the Tenour of the said Edict.

10. Now the Bishops were restored to their Sees, and Idolatry was more opposed then ever. Constantine (a) proceeding to other matters of great Moment, conferring many Dignities on Christians, and making them Governours of divers Provinces, but such as were devoted to Heathenism he prohibited to sacrifice to Idols: For he made a new Law, that if they were Christians all Governours of Provinces should behave themselves as became that glorious Title; but if they were otherwise affected, he commanded that they should not Sacrifice to Idols. Not long after he published an Edict (b) against Aruspices or South-sayers, who privately in other Mens Houses followed their Trade: And about the same time he freed (c) all Clergy-men from Offices, except such who for to thun all civil Employments, had upon design betaken themselves to that Function. But when many abused this Privilege and Immunity granted to the Clergy, the Emperour (d) commanded afterward that such only should Succeed them that Dyed as were poor and not liable to publick Employments.

11. The Year following being the 16 of his Reign, the 13 of his Conversion, Claudius Caesar the second time and Constantinus Caesar also the second time being Consuls, he published an Edict for the observation of the Lords Day (a) forbidding all Artificers to work in Cities, but permitting the Exercise of Agriculture (b) as also Manumissions and Mancipations to be made on that day.

Eusebius in the History (c) of his Life (a Treatise written in an Encomiastick way without Method or order) tells us how he ordained that the Lords Day should be Consecrated unto Prayer, being the chief and first Day of the Week, chose Grave Religious Men to be Deacons and Chaplains in his Court, and had a strong Guard about his Person, who as they were faithful to their Prince, so by his example learnt to be Religious towards God, and to observe the Lords Day, by devoting it to Prayer. And this Gracious Prince, saith he persuaded others to this pious Duty; still praying that by degrees he might bring all Men to the knowledge ledge of God: Wherefore he Commanded that throughout the Roman Empire, they should forbear to Labour on the Lords Day, and that they should have a respect to the days immediately preceding the Sabbath, in regard of our Saviours memorable Actions performed on those days; here is the Sixt Ferie or that we call Fryday, especially meant as Sozomenus (d) telleth, is because on that day Christ was Crucified. But whereas Constantine in his Edict calls it not the Lords Day after the Ecclesiastical manner, but Dies Solis or Sunday, thence some (e) collect that this Law was imposed as well upon Gentiles as others.

12. (a) Eusebius indeed tells us that he instructed his whole Army to reverence and observe this Holy and Happy day, which was called Sunday, giving Liberty to those by a Divine instinct, who had imbraced the Faith, that they might freely frequent the Church of God; and that without any Molestation offer up their Prayers unto him. But others that have not yet tasted the sweetness of Divine Knowledge, he commanded that on the Lords day they should go into the Fields, belonging to the Suburbs of the City where they should meet, and joyn together in Prayer to God: For he said that they ought not only to use their Spears, or put their confidence in Weapons or strength of Body, but to acknowledge God to be the giver, and as of all other things, so of Victory; to whom with Hearts and Hands lifted up to Heaven, we ought to render due Praise and Prayer, to beseech him who is the giver of Victories, to Keep, Protect and Defend us. He prescribed also to his Souldiers a certain Form of Prayer in Latin, which he commanded them to use after this manner. (b) We acknowledge thee the only God, we confesse thee to be our King; we invoke thee as our helper; by thee we have obtained Victories, by thee we have overcome our Enemies, from thee we enjoy our present Happynesse, And hope we shall obtain one that is to come, we all become thy Suppliants, beseeching thee to preserve long our Emperour Constantine safe and Victorious, with his hopeful Progeny. This Form of Prayer he commanded his Souldiers to use on Sundays, and in their daily Devotions; (c) causing also the Sign of the Crofs to be Ingraven upon their Armour, and to be carried before the Army, which it was to follow, and not any Golden Standard as formerly. And he not only sent this Edict for observation of the Lords Day to all Governours of Provinces, but also for (d) keeping such Holydays as were Consecrated to the Memory of the Martyrs; and for the solemn observation of the Feasts of the Church, all which was performed according to the Emperours Commands.

13. This Year he also published a (a) Constitution against Witches, Inchanters, and such as by Invocation of Devils, raised Tempests or disturbed the Brains of Men. By (b) another he gave Liberty to any one to leave by his Will to the Church whatsoever he pleased, whereby the Riches of the Clergy so vastly increased with time to the great detriment of the Civil State, that Succeeding Princes, were forced to make Laws of Mortmain, for restraining of such Liberality as we shall see hereafter, by an Edict (c) also he pressed the Re-edifying of Churches. But he seemeth in the latter end of this Year, to have pulled down some of the Buildings he had raised, by another Constitution (d) or Rescript to Maximus Praefect of the City, whereby then residing at Sardica, he commanded the Aruspices or South-sayers to be Consulted about some Prodiges that had lately happened, and permitted this to be done publicly by all others, a Fact unworthy of a Christian Emperour, especially so Zealous as he seemed to be, for it's one thing to Connive at a fault, which there is not sufficient power and opportunity to punish, and another to restore an unlawful Custom formerly prohibited, and to Establish Iniquity by a Law. Hence Zozimus might be so bold as to assert that Constantine till this time although against his will, to please the Senate followed the Pagan Superstition.

14. That this his Assertion is false, the former Laws sufficiently declare, and not only our own Historians. Yet hence take occasion to observe that Constantine by reason of difficulty and importance of the thing, was Constrained to Act with great care and Circumspection, both towards the Senate as yet Pagan for the most part, and the People, and so to have observed his own Religion as in so ticklish a time, not to undo all by once doing, but insinuating things by degrees, as the publick Affairs and Exigence of times would Comport, to have constrained none to his own (though best) way, and proceeded but slowly and warily in overthrowing Idolatry, as we shall farther see hereafter, however some Writers out of their own Zeal magnifie what they themselves desired, measuring his Commendation by the Standard of their own inclinations, whilst they looked more at what should, then what could be, and being better Church-men and Polit-

Politicians (even in a Christian Sense) by their Panegyric Flourishes, extoll that zeal, which had it been practiced might through the unfeasonable application, proved the overthrow of that they most desired should be established.

15. By their præcipitancy and imprudence (as in such Cases Princes never want those about them of such Temper, and would beat their Journeys end ere they can well set out) might the Emperour be brought to do what he might be tempted afterwards to recall, and thereby both Sin in Establishing that by a Law, which it might have been no Sin to permit with sorrow, when he could not hinder it: As also discourage Professors, and cast a great blemish upon Religion; or else not only venture the overthrow of Religion, and reducing it to its former afflicted Condition, but endanger his Crown and Dignity by Seditions. For the occasion of this Rescript, appeareth to have been a great suspicion the Pagans had, that by degrees he would Eradicate their Superstition; because about a Year ago he had the second time written against Auspices, which exercised their Art in private Houses. Leaving them to be accordingly Alarmed, hereby it is probable that by an Insurrection or some dangerous attempt, he recalled what he had formerly done, and established the thing he prohibited. For as (x) one observeth, seeing that in this Rescript he declareth that all have Liberty to follow that way of Divination, so they abstain from private Superstition and Domestick Sacrifices; he plainly signifieth that by some other Edict he had prohibited the publick Exercise of Auspicina, which it seems had wonderfully incensed the Pagans and excited them to Seditious Attempts, the Auspicina being of vast Esteem and Authority at Rome, as it is evident from the Law of the 12 Tables which x^o Cicero reciteth and explaineth. But some pretend to observe that after this ungodly Edict, whereas Constantine formerly had all things according to his hearts desire, so that none ever were more happy and prosperous in Government, now began to feel Gods indignation, such a Domestick Frowd arising (as David formerly had been punished) that he polluted his hands with the Blood of his dearest Relations, and was in danger of utter Ruin, had he not expired the Offence committed against Christian Religion, by a certain Remedy.

16. For, whereas by the forementioned Rescript, he had ordered the Soothsayers to be Consulted, the Gentiles taking heart hereat, were so puffed up that hoping the Emperour had returned to their Superstition, they endeavoured to force the Christians to a partaking of their Mysteries: Whereupon Constantine published this Constitution following.

The Emperour Constantine Augustus to Helpidius.

Whereas we have found that certain Ecclesiasticks, and the rest that obey the Catholic Party, are compelled to the Sacrifices of the Lustræ, by Men of several Religions; We Ordain by this Constitution, that if any one go about to Compell those who are Subjects to the most Holy Law, to any Rite of a strange Superstition, if his State and Condition bear it, he shall be beaten with Rods publicly; but if the Condition of his Degree or Honour do withstand this as an Injury, let him be Fined to publick use, as much as possibly he may. Given at Sirmium, on the 8. of the Calends of June, Severus and Rufinus being Consuls, that is, A. D. 323.

17. From this Constitution we shall first observe, that the Gentiles had their Sacrifices and Heathenish Rites, either Entire or for the most part preferred as such to this time, and that publickly Celebrated, especially in Rome and Italy; which were most Tenacious of Pagan Superstition throughout the West, as appeareth also by other (a) Constitutions of Constantine. For Helpidius to whom the Constitution is directed, for the prevention and punishment of the Injury, was then Vicar of the City or Italy, being two Years before called the (b) Vicegerent of the Præfectus Prætorie, and in (c) another directed to him, mention is made of the Lustræ (Lustrorum Sacrificia) are not to be meant the Lustrations of private and common Solemnities, properly so called and Celebrated on certain days proper thereunto, neither such as Fathers of Families made in their Corn Fields, that these Calamities, Mors lates nubila impetigo pestifera (or Pestilence) which de- were most proper Terms as (d) Festus witnesseth to these sorts of Solemnities; might be prevented, as in an old Rustick (e) Calender it's found Written, in the Month of May, Segetes Lustrantur, and in that of April, Oves Lustrantur. Neither are in this place, to be understood the Lustræ, which were wont to be Celebrated at Rome by the Censors, after the Census of Citizens was made by a Sacrifice of the Suonetaurilia; for they had ceased long ago, as appeareth by what Censorinus writeth in his Book de Die Natali; at which time the Office of Censors also Ceased, which some endeavoured, though in vain, to re-establish.

18. By the Sacrifices of Lustræ, here are meant Publick and Solemn Lustrations, which were Celebrated about the Pomarium of the City and the Fields, in a Procession called Amburbia and Amburbalia: The Beasts to be Sacrificed, being led about with certain Verses uttered in a Set and Solemn Feast-day; these were Solemnized upon several Occasions, as for the Fruitfulness of the Earth, and Plenty of Grain; upon inspection of the Sybilline Books, and a Lectisternium made for the procurement of the Peace of the Gods, as it was termed, or upon Threats of great Dangers, for Defence of the Country against Foreign Enemies; in which Solemnities there was a Lustration by intervention of a Torch, Sulphur, and Water, and Water was sprinkled according to: Tertullian; of this sort Anciently were the Armillæ, whereby the Army in the Campus Martius was Lustrated by Sacrifice, as were Navies, Temples, Altars, and Pipes called Tabe, whence came the word called Tubilustria, concerning which the Testimonies of the Antients are very obvious.

19. That this Constitution not only respecteth such Lustræ as were made against the Plague, or for benefit of the Villages; but also for Victory against an Enemy, the Characterism of the Date of it seemeth sufficiently to Witness. For this same Year, and the Consulship of Severus and Rufinus, the Goths made an Incurion into the Empire, and waited Thrace and Mæsia, whom Constantine Repulsed, and thence were Celebrated the Gothick Sports, whereof Porphyry in his Panegyrick, Ancient Coins, and other things written concerning those Times bear mention, as the Calender called Calendarium Hemagianum, the Author of Constantine's Life, and an Anonymous of Sirmundus or Valesius. Now the Pagans thought they could more easily force Christians to those Solemnities, because they were Celebrated without the more Superstitious Rites and Ceremonies; as perhaps without mutations of the Victimæ, and Circumductions already abolished, neither Sacrifices of the Hæstia (for it is requisite to expresse those things in their proper Latin Terms) so that it seemed not so clear, but that Christians, without wounding their Consciences, might be present at them: And the publick Profit was pretended, as the welfare of the Prince and Empire; in which case to them, as Apuleius saith in his first Apology, nothing seemed Criminalous.

20. And indeed Constantine himself in another business, seemed to Subscribe to their Opinion, before the making of this Law; by giving way to those Spells and Inchantments which were used for the Health of his Subjects, left Divine Favours or the Labours of Men should be abolished. Which Constitution Justinian is justly wondred at for putting into his Code, and Leo Philosophus abolished out of as just Indignation. Although that Constantine afterwards receded from it: The Learned Gorbifred doth not doubt, seeing he Abrogated the use of the Auspicina, which he had formerly Tolerated as we have seen, under pretence therefore of publick Safety, especially the Gentiles believed that Christians were to be Compelled to the Sacrifices of the Lustræ, Old Customs and Rites used by Ancestors Time out of mind, carrying ever a great weight of Reason, if meant out of Devotion to Prince and Commonwealth; which pretence Theodosius Junior Condemneth by a Constitution, concerning the observation of the Lords-day, as we shall see in due time and place: So that the Pagans objected to Christians Impiety and Irreverence towards their Prince and Country, who on the other side refused to joyn in this Solemnity, or be defiled by Idolatry; rejecting Communion in all such Cases, however such things were covered by a specious Pretence of the Publick Safety; whence the Calumny of Zozimus appeareth manifest, who writes that Innocent Bishop of Rome, in the Time of Honorius amongst such Fears and Dangers as were then great, because of the Gothick War, consented to certain Pagan Rites for defence of the Empire, preferring the Publick Safety, saith he, before his own opinion. And like to this is his other slander of Constantine himself, who he saith till this time gave Credit to the Auspices though a Christian. But by those Slanders of Zozimus we may learn that the true and proper Judgment of Christians, was to abstain from Communion with Gentiles.

21. But

The occasion thereof.

Which tend- ing much to the prejudice of the Church.

By another Law he forbids Christians to be forced to partake there- of.

The several kinds of the Lustræ

(x) Baroni- us ad. A.D. 322.

(x) de legi- bus, lib. 2.

The Go- thick sports are celebrated by the Pagans.

Nihil quod forendum solu- tu gratia sit criminisum.

C. 76. l. 5.

de. malis & Blasph.

Novellæ. 65.

C. 76. de. Spectaculis in l. dominico ubi.

Lib. 5. p. 816.

(a) Tit. de maleficiis & Maleficis & Paganis, Sacrificiis & Templis.

(b) C. Just. in l. 6. de e- dictionibus privo- rum.

(c) C. 76. l. 4. de navis- wharis.

(d) C. 76. l. 1. de feriis.

(e) C. 76. l. 1. de viciis.

(f) C. 76. l. 1. de feriis.

(g) C. 76. l. 1. de feriis.

(h) C. 76. l. 1. de feriis.

21. But it's made a question who they were that the Gentiles would compel to those Solemnities, and consequently whom the Emperor protects from their violence by this Law. He nameth certain Ecclesiasticks and the rest that Serve the Catholic Self, then afterward such as Obey the most Holy Law, by whom it's questioned, whether the Clergy alone, or all Christians promiscuously be meant. But who can believe that Ecclesiastical Persons are barely meant, or that they only rejected Communication in those Sacrifices, and not also the rest of the Christians? The general Inhibition of the Law sufficiently declares it, which takes care that no such be compelled to the Rite of a strange Superstition, who serve the most Holy Law, wherefore the Phrases Catholica Seſſa ſervientes, and Sanctissima legi Servientes, are such as Imbraced the Christian Faith and lived accordingly, not such only as Ministred in Sacred Offices. But Constantine by a great Penalty prohibits this Disorder, viz. by beating them with Clubs, if of vile condition, or imposing on them an heavy Fine, if Noble, which should Issue to the Publick not to the Exchequer, but the publick Treasury of the Cities concerned, as this same Emperor allotted another Fine two Years after; and then the Cities of Italy must here be meant, wherein Helpidius was Præſectus prætorio, to whom the Law is Inſcribed.

22. Hereby may both the Mind of Constantine and the Discipline of that Age be fully discovered; there being Canons also made at Ancyra, by a Council held there Ten Years before, to this same purpose, whereby not only Sacrificing to Idols but also eating in their Temples and Feasting with Pagans is forbidden, the Ninth Canon being made against such as Conſtrained their Brethren to do it, or gave cause of that Compulſion; not to speak of those pretended to be made at Elberis, of the Credit of which many justly doubt. Julian the Emperor afterwards knowing the Carefulness and Stuness of Christians in this respect, laid what Gins and Snares he possibly could for them, exposing the Faces of Princes (afterward called Labratæ) amongst the Images of their Gods for the People to Worship; and putting them upon offering Incense which he knew was all one with denying Christ.

23. As for that which some object concerning several Offices born by Christians, and mixed with Idolatry, whereby they would make it appear that all Communication with the Gentiles was neither forbidden nor shunned, it's apparent that the Offices of Centenarii and Dendrophori, were never born by Christians, but at length abolished as Fragments of Pagan Superstition, and the other of Synarchæ and Asiarchæ were not at all contaminated by any Superstition belonging to the care and oversight of Game and publick Mirth, which though at first might have been Inſtituted upon Superstitious Grounds, yet now was only improved to innocent Recreation, whereof this Age was very cautious, especially Antioch the Metropolis of Syria, where the Synarchæ resided, and the Games called Synarchia were exhibited.

24. But the main objected in this Argument, and that which requires a serious scrutiny in this matter of Reformation is, that Constantine as also his Successors Valentinian, Valens and Gratian for some time bore the Title of Pontifex Maximus, and therefore neither esteemed a Pagan Name, nor employment unfitting for him. For this Accuſation Zozimus is brought as a Witness, who Writes (a) so much in expreſs words, with whom accords (b) Baronius in his Annals, though formerly in his Notes on the Roman Martyrology, he gave him the lie as to this particular. And more reason he had so to do, then at length thus to pass over to his Party, that Historian having neither any probable Author or Ground for his Assertion, he himself confessing that he had not this Fable from any Creditable Person, but taken it upon hear-say and common Discourse, then which nothing is more vain and uncertain. Then what a worthy Author Zozimus is, how much to be Credited in such Cases we may see, both by his inveterate hatred to Christianity; moved wherewith he wrought his Book, which is stuffed with such Fables and Calumnies against Christian Emperours, and others of that Religion, especially Constantine and Gratian, because he began the Reformation, and this Emperor more effectually enforced it by stopping the allowance formerly given to Superstitious Ceremonies, the Stipends allowed to Priests, destroying the Altar of Victory, and other Portentous Images, as St. Ambroſe, St. Hierome and Symmachus do Testifie.

25. Yet could it be granted that Zozimus was not at all guilty of Spleen and Malice, how can he be Credited who so palpably Erred in a matter of greatest Concernment? Concerning Gratian, Writing that for fear of Maximus the Ty-

A Canon prohibiting Sacrifices to Idols, concurring with the Emperour's Edict.

The taking of Pagan Offices objected to Christians.

And that Constantine and his Successors were styled Pontifex Maximus.

C. Th. di. in l. null. 2. a. Julian. 1.

Vide Jacobum Gothofredum de Institutionibus Christianorum cum Gentilibus communibus.

(a) Lib. 4. p. 760. 761. (b) ad A.D. 321.

Both which are sufficiently confuted.

From the Constitutions and Coyns of those Christian Princes.

rant; having passed the Alps, Rhetia, Novicum, Pannonia into the upper Mysia, he was slain at Singidunum, whereas other Historians unanimously agree that being worried near Paris, he fled and was slain about Lyons. Farther if we Consult other Writers, a deep silence there is, not one word of this Story of the Pontificate which Zozimus tells us, but in a matter of such Moment, who can imagine they should say nothing? Would Pagan Writers, especially the Panegyricists, whereof those Times were fruitful, have omitted this Title so great, so plausible, when they extol Christian Emperours to the Skies, and pass not over things of slight consequence? On the other side would the Fathers and Ecclesiastical Writers have omitted to reprehend them for so scandalous an Office and Title, who are not wont to dissemble lesser Faults of Princes? Or who can think that by Hereticks, or one or another, this would not have been laid to their Charge?

26. Then if we look on the Constitutions of those Christian Princes, their Coyns and Medals, as also such Inſcriptions as are not Calſified, there's nothing in them that gives the least pretence to this Assertion, although by them, especially the Titles of Emperours be largely set out. If we consider their minds and Inclinations, we shall find that by various Constitutions, they endeavoured to Eradicate Paganism out of the minds of their Subjects, as the Times and necessity of Affairs would permit, forbidding to all Christians Communion with the Gentiles, in their Superstitious Rites; how then could they themselves practice what they disapproved in others? and by ill examples Enervate their own Laws? Ecclesiastical Writers as (a) Theodoret and (b) Sozomenus note it in Julian as a new thing, that he called himself Pontifex Maximus, as he also styles himself in a (c) Fragment yet extant, not to mention Inſcriptions where this Title is found. These things seem sufficiently to Convict Zozimus of Calumny and Falshood, as to his Assertion that those Christian Princes assumed this Title. As for what he adds that Gratian rejected it, who can believe that so memorable a thing would have been utterly forgot, or never mentioned by Christian Writers, who are ready enough to give Commendations where due, as mightily extoll the Piety and Christian Zeal of Gratian, especially St. Ambroſe and Aufonius; then the distance of place makes against this Assertion. For if the Pontifical Habit was observed to Gratian, by the inferior Pontifices, and presently rejected by him, then must this have been done at Rome, where they resided and where we do not Read that Gratian ever came.

27. Notwithstanding some there are who go about to gain Credit to Zozimus his Story, being willing to believe that Gratian first rejected this Title, and for this reason you must know, because the Bishops of Rome then began to Challenge it as their due, Baronius a main Stickler for it in his Annals, though of another mind in his Notes upon the Martyrology, brings his first Testimony out of Aufonius, whence he will make in his return of thanks to call Gratian, Pontifex Maximus. But this faith Gothofred, is said gratis. For in two Places (a) indeed Aufonius equalleth Gratian with a Pontifex Maximus, but for his Religion and Chastity as he plainly expreſseth it. And in a (b) third he calleth him Pontifex Maximus, but by a certain allusion in respect of the Old Pontifical Comitia, to which Gratian by Letters seemed to allude. The Second Testimony he fetcheth from Ancient Inſcriptions; wherein besides other Titles of Emperours, this of Pontifex Maximus is found, and he instanteth in several, to be met with in the Collection of Inſcriptions, by Græterus. Great heed is indeed to be given to ancient Inſcriptions; but we must also consider that in them these Emperours assume not that Title to themselves, but it's given them by others, viz. The Superstitious Romans and Italians, as Pagans in this Age; Sacrificers who made Inſcriptions to the Entrails of Beasts; for Christian Emperours (who certainly approved no such things) as we have hinted formerly from (c) Ammianus. And we must further know that some of those Inſcriptions, had been formerly made for Pagan Emperours, whose Names being Erased, afterward those of Christian Emperours were Ingraven in their places.

28. This is evident from an (a) Inſcription belonging to Constantine, and taken notice of by (b) Baronius himself, wherein in a Marble at Rome is read, Magno Et Invicto Imp. Cæs. C. val. Aurelio Constantino Pio, Fel. Invicto, Aug. Pontif. Max. Trib. Potest. Cos. III. PP. Proc. D. N. Corpus Coriariorum &c. That this Inſcription first belonged to some Pagan Prince, is evident because in the left side of the same Basis are also read Dedicata Kal. Jan. DD. NN. Diocletiano III. Et Maximiano Coss. For this Conſulſhip was before the time of Constantine, as is most clear to all, and his Name afterwards inserted; for there are C. Val. Aurel. VWhich

(a) Lib. 3. cap. 1. (b) Lib. 5. cap. 11. (c) pag. 546.

(a) cap. 10. (b) lib. 20. & ca. 18. (c) cap. 12. (d) lib. 18.

(a) Lib. 21. (b) ad A.D. 312. (c) fol. 281.

Prenomina never belonged to him, his Praenomen being Flavius, but are proper to Maximians, not Dioclesian as Baronius imagined. This change of Names is also found in Money which was stamped anew with the Name of another Prince, and was used also in Statues and Images, which were made to serve for the Honour of another Person, their Heads or Titles being changed, as Gothofred observes, and is clear from many Witnesses.

29. So weak are the Testimonies brought by Baronius and Morinus, (a) who follows him herein; of no greater strength are their Arguments. They believe that Christian Princes reserved this Title, and might lawfully do it, without any Spot sticking on them from the Ceremonies, for the amplitude of Power therein contained; not out of love to Superstition, but for preservation of their Authority, without the Crime of Idolatry; not to perform any Ceremonies, but for the maintenance of their Prerogative. They urge, that without this Title, the Emperours should have been as no body, for that the Senate and People of Rome, would have presently conspired against him, as one who was not a Follower of the Religion of their Ancestors and Country. That the Authority of this Pontifex, was most ample above the Consuls, and therefore seemed necessary to the Emperours, that thereby they might, as by the chiefest Point of Religion, curb and restrain the Senate, which was often refractory towards Princes; and it seemed more necessary to them, as Christians, who might well perceive they reigned against the mind of the Senate; and by their Religion, raised the Envy and Malice of the Gentiles against them.

30. But to Divines this we leave to be discussed, whether it were an innocent Mystery of State only, or a Crime; and whether Christian Princes could, with a safe Conscience, and without Idolatry or Superstition, envy the Title and Office of Pontifex Maximus. Concerning the necessity and utility of this Sophism, it is not amiss to say something. It is true that the old Pagan Emperours assumed this Title, as a strengthening of their Powers, so that they themselves, sometimes, performed the Ceremonies, and indeed exercised the Function of a Pontifex, as (a) Domitian, (b) Adrian, and (c) Alexander Severus. Yet for the embracing of this Title, which could not possibly be separated from a mixture of Pagan Superstition, there was no necessity for Christian Princes, as if otherwise they could not be secure; seeing that then at Rome their Party became daily strangers, and Pagan Superstition daily decreased, which by the omission of such a thing, could not gather much advantage, the Pagan Superstition being restrained, and the Imperial Power confirmed, so that the Senate and People from Constantine, looked on them as Protectors of the City, and Authors of Peace and Quietness, receiving them gladly, and celebrating their Praises with all sorts of Pomp and Commendations; being permitted to enjoy some of their Follies, lest too great strictness and severity should raise such a Tempest, as could not easily be dispelled, though by degrees a Reformation might be tolerated.

31. As for Constantine, could he take the name of Pontifex, a Pagan Title; (who (as the Author of his Life falsely heretofore thought to be Eusebius, witnesseth) professed himself Bishop, ἐπίσκοπος, or those that are without) certainly it finally agreed with those Constitutions that were made against the Sacrifice of the Lustra, and his neglecting the Secular Games. Baronius addeth that the Christian Bishops granted these Emperours Power to assume that Title, but whereby doth this appear? Because they do not blame them upon this account, as for several other things; but it may justly be Argued on the contrary, that this was never done by Christian Emperours, because we do not find them, upon this account, Chidden by the Fathers, who are not wanting to reprehend them for lesser Faults. For that which Baronius urgeth as his greatest force, that Christian Emperours did not, as Pagans, assume the Robe and Title of Pontifex Maximus, being not initiated as others were, by drinking Bulls Blood, and otherwise, nor by Sacrificing to Jupiter Olympius, or other gods, (which had been an open Apostasy from Christian Religion, and not to be covered or dissembled by any pretext) but only as Zozimus saith, that receiving the Robe, he used also the Title. But Zozimus his meaning is, not only the Habit and Title was assumed, but he mentions the Habit, as the Ensign of the Pontificate, as Princes by receiving the Purple, took on them also Imperial Power.

32. However, we mean not here the most heinous Crime of Apostasy (although Baronius objects that also to Constantine very strangely) nor inquire into the most wicked act of Superstition that could be thought; from which

Baronius

(a) In Eccl. lib. liberata.

(a) Plin. lib.

(b) Spartian. p. 11.

(c) Laurens. p. 118.

Baronius would endeavour to clear the assuming of this Title. But Superstition he must be guilty of, had he assumed it; neither can one be accounted free from Idolatry, that is not guilty of the highest Crime of that nature, that doth not Sacrifice himself, or encourage that abominable Rite by his Authority. Although a Prince used only the Habit and Title in Baronius his Sense, yet consider seriously what this Habit was; a Pontifical and Priestly Stole, ἱερατικὴν στολὴν, as Zozimus calls it, a Sacred Vestment, Sacerdotal and Pagan Ornament; a painted Robe, not with any History out of the Gospel; doubtless as Asterius writes, the Clothes of Rich Men in Cappadocia, in his time, were wont to be neither wrought with the Images of Emperours as that Trabea or Palmeta was, which Gratian sent to Ausonius, when he had designed him Consul, but were wrought and painted after the Pagan Fashion, such as was Mystical, and such as the Pontifex Maximus received from the hand of inferior Pagan Pontifices, as Zozimus witnesseth, which for a Christian to put on, was counted wickedness by Gratian, as that Pagan Author relates.

33. What account is to be made of Zozimus his Story, and the defence of Baronius, we may perceive by those things, both who make this Title to have ceased in Gratian. But there are some that proceed farther, and will have the Title of Pontifex Maximus used by Princes after his time, which they would prove from an Edict of Valentinian and Marcian, inserted into the third Action of the Council of Chalcedon, wherein these Emperours are called Pontifices Inclyti; so the Edition (a) of Colan, and such as have been printed from it: But that this is false, appears from the (b) Greek Copies, wherein no such matter appears, but those Princes are only styled ἀνάτορες αὐτοκρατορες. That it was added by some foolish Writer or Printer it is clear, from other Demonstrations of his Folly; as there it is said that Marcian had repeated the Tribunal Power seven and twenty times, whereas he Reigned but six Years and fix Months; and the Tribunal Power being a Consequence of the Imperial, now had been left off, and not mentioned. And there we find Consul Semel, a Form of Speech that was never used.

34. From all that has been said, it appears that Constantine, though the Year foregoing he had permitted the use of Aruspicina to the Pagans, yet neither allowed Communion with them in himself nor other Christians, but disapproved of whatsoever carried Superstition or Paganism with it in show or Title. As for such things as had been instituted by the Gentiles, yet in their name had no appearance of Superstition they continued, as certain Temples cleansed of all Superstition afterwards when Paganism by degrees was banished, were suffered to continue for Ornament to the places where they stood. Naked and simple Names and Appellations of Things, Times, Temples and Places, were still used by Christians without any harm, or any Fellowship in Heathenish Rites, being established by common Conversation and Use (the Law and Rule of Speech.) The Holy Ghost hath not disdained to apply unto Sacred Purposes words of Art as it were, used by Pagan Writers, as Paradysus, Hades, Apotholus, Clerus. The false Divinities of the Gentiles they still called Dii or Gods. So the first day of the Week they still called (a) Sunday, although sometimes adding something whereby it might appear that they could like better the Christian name, as Theodosius the younger chose rather to call it absolutely the (b) Lords-day. So the Pantheon was still so called, and the Atrium castrorum, where also Christian Princes exposed to view their Constitutions, because of the concourse of People thither made; all which things (c) Tertullian long before, when the Emperours were Pagan, although severe in his Censures, would not condemn, so that there were Approbation not Participation in the thing.

35. That we should use this Form of Speech, saith he, Custom and Conversation exalts from us. For we must say, He is in the Temple of Alculapius, in the Street of Iliis, and he is made Jupiter's Priest, and many other things of this nature, seeing that Men are thus named. Neither do I honour Saturn, if I call any one by that name; nor Mars, if I call him Mars. If Gods are to be mentioned, something is to be added, whereby it may appear, that I of my self, do not so count them, as the Scripture names Gods, but adds, their Gods, or of the Nations. As Tertullian thus excuseth these things, so he affirms it to be a Prevarication in Faith, for any Christian to swear by the Gods, which Custom and Ignorance sometimes extorted. But as in other things, Christian Princes took special care, not to joyn in Communion with Pagans; so they Christians not suffering to swear by the Gods, or by their Gentile.

(a) P. 826.

(b) P. 442.

(a) C. Th. de servit. l. 1. c. 2.

l. 1. c. 2. de exco.

l. 2. de spoliaof Minerva.

(b) C. Th. lib.

de spectandis.

(c) Lib. de idol.

c. 20.

would not suffer their Subjects to swear by their Genius, yet by their Health or Safety, they did according to the ancient Custom of Christians, by which kind of Oath they witnessed that the thing was as true and certain, as they desired the Safety and Prosperity of the Emperour.

36. But (to return to our Prosecution of such particular Acts of Constantine, as respected the Reformation) our Emperour, in the Twentieth of his Reign, by an (a) Edict, commanded the bloody Combating of Gladiators to be taken away, willing, that such as for Offences committed against the Laws, had been wont to be subjected to such Conflicts, should be condemned to the Mines; although the Times were such, that this Exercise could not presently be abolished, continuing a long time, but at length it was quite taken away, upon what occasion we shall see hereafter. The Punishment of Malefactors by the Cross, he also forbid, as (b) Socranus tells us, who addeth, that he caused his Image upon Coins or in Pictures to be done with a Cross; as the Lance he was wont to use in Battel, some say (c) he caused to be fashioned into the Form of a Cross, which being left to his Successors, defended as low as Henry the Emperour, and his Son Orto.

37. After the Celebration of the Nicene Council, which was in the same Year, the former Edict was made, he more vigorously prosecuted Idolatry, though he constrained no Idolaters, as we said, to his own Religion, but only exhorted and sought to turn them by gentle means. Eurapius Sardinianus complains that he overturned the most famous Temples in the whole World, and every where erected Christian Structures. That this was done presently after the Council of Nice; Eusebius, or the (a) Author of his Life testifies, as also Socrates. The former tells us, that some of the Pagan Temples, were, by his command, untiled, and the Gates pulled down; others were quite demolished, and the Tiles and Timber carried away. And some Graven Images, which the Heathens had of a long time ignorantly adored, were erected in the Market-place of Constantinople as opprobrious Spectacles. Here Pythius was placed, there Sminthius, in the Cirque the Tripes of Delfos, and the Heliconian Muses in the Palace. Having once resolved, he thought not fit to effect his Intentions by any hostile Violence, but making choice of certain trusty and approved Persons, sent them into all Places to suppress their inveterate and anciently received Errors. This they did, which must be understood in part, and as the times would give leave, for all Idolatry was not abolished, nor all Pagan Temples broken down a long time after.

38. But mention being made by the forecited Writers of Constantinople, how Images were in derision erected in the Form of it, we must not forget to signify, that the Reformation of Religion gave occasion to the building of that City, if Zozimus may be believed. He writeth, that a certain Festival-day being come, wherein it was the Custom for the Army to ascend into the Capitol, he spoke against the Ceremony contumeliously, and condemning it, incurred the Hatred both of Senate and People, whose Curses not able to bear, he sought where he might find a City equal to Rome, wherein to fix his Imperial Seat, and at length pitched upon Byzantium, which happened to be Dedicated afterward in the Five and twentieth Year of his Reign. In his One and twentieth Year, having taken away the publick Schools of Lust, he published an (a) Edict against private Uncleanness, Ordaining, that if any Woman lay with her Slave, she should be put to death, and he burnt. A little after he took away the use of (b) Concubines, which yet came in fashion again, and was permitted in the time of Justinian, so a Man was unmarried, and had but one, which thing being a great flaw of that Age, and very scandalous to Christianity, was by Leo Philosophus removed, (c) Ordaining, that it should not be lawful for Christians to have Concubines, subjoining that excellent Reason out of Solomon's Proverbs: "That it was an unworthy thing, when Water might be had out of a pure Fountain, to seek for a muddy a distempered one; neither could it be difficult for any to find a Confort and Yoak-fellow. Whole example Constantinus Porphyrogeneta imitating, that amongst Christians there should no difference be accounted betwixt a Concubine and an Whore; and that it should not be lawful for any Christian to have one, as Edarmenopolus witnesseth.

39. Constantine his new City being perfected, was a great Monument and Testimony of the Reformation. For he (a) purged it from all Superstition and Idolatry, so that no where therein were Statues of Idols in their Temples, nor Altars defiled by the Blood of impure Sacrifices, nor Feasts of Devils celebrated. St. Augustine (b) reckoning up the several parts of Constantine's felicity; amongst other Accounts this not the least, That God granted his desires in building a City, which should be as the equal or Daughter of Rome, but without any Temple or Image of Devils. He Adorned it with many Churches, whereof one was called the Church (c) of the Apostles; another of Peace, being also called Sapience; and another (d) built without the City, and named Michaelium, in memory of St. Michael the Archangel, who is said, there to have appeared; besides others mentioned by (e) Nicephorus; all which he took care should be well furnished with Books, the charge of which Work, he imposed on Eusebius Bishop of Caesarea by this Letter.

40. Seeing (a) that by God's Divine Providence, a great multitude of People in this City, which is called after me Constantinople, have devoted themselves to the true Church; it is fit, that as their number increaseth, so more Churches should be erected. Know therefore, that we thought it necessary to signify to your Wisdom, that you should provide fifty Church Books, containing those parts of Scripture which you think most useful and profitable to the Church, and most portable, being fairly and legibly writ in smooth Parchment. And we, our of gracious Clemency, have sent our Letters to the Governour of your Province, to furnish you with all things necessary for the charge thereof; you ought only to take care the Books be written with all speed. And we give you Power and Authority, by these our present Letters, to take up two Waggon's for carriage of the Books. Moreover, when they are fairly written, I would have them brought to me by a Minister delegated to that purpose out of your Church, whom when he comes, we will reward. God keep and preserve you dear Brother. The Emperours command was speedily performed, so that we sent him, faith our Author, fifty Books curiously written in Parchment, as may appear by his Letters of Answer, wherein he signified his joy and gladness when he heard that Constantia (formerly called Gaza in Palestine, but upon this change, named by him after his Sister) was Converted from Idolatrous Superstition, to the true Religion.

41. But not only at Constantinople, but in Italy, at Rome, and throughout the Empire, great was his Magnificence in the building and endowing of Churches, concerning which, a Book was written, which Anastasius the Vatican Library keeper published out of it; several are mentioned by the Author of his Life, and other Writers. He commanded one to be built in the very place where our Saviour's Sepulchre was, which the Heathens endeavouring to deface, had there built a Chappell to Venus. Vast was the Magnificence of this Church, as it is described in his (a) Life; wherein are also mentioned others built at one at the (d) Oak of Mambre, where it was thought our Saviour appeared to Abraham; another at (e) Helipolis in Phenicia, where was demolished the Image of Venus. Others speak of the (f) stately Church from the former called Constantiniana, but more commonly Saviour's at Rome, below his Palace called Constantian, having before caused to be built a more stately one at the Confession of St. Peter, where he himself first opened the Ground, and in memory of the Twelve Apostles, bore upon his shoulders so many Burthens of Earth; as Vespasian had formerly done, at the re-edifying of the Capitol. Many, besides these, were raised in Italy, Gall, and other Parts, so Manifestly built, splendidly furnished, and plentifully endowed, that Pagan Historians hence accuse him of immense Profusions, and extravagant Building of unprofitable Places.

42. Yet notwithstanding these vast Expences, such was the Abstinence both of him and several his Successors, that having the Wealth of the Idol-Temples in their Power, though such a thing might have been done upon a Religious account, and to make amends for all the Injuries and Losses the Christians had sustained from the Pagans, for above three hundred Years, they abstained from it at Rome; although in the last, where the Influence of the Senate was not so great, sometimes Constantine, as he justly might make bold with it, as the Author (a) of his Life writes concerning Golden Images which he caused to be melted, and reserved the Metal to his own use. Such also was his Modesty, that although he had Erected so many Monuments of his Glory, yet upon none of them was his Name engraved, condemning that which most of his Predecessors had so earnestly thirsted after, of whom Trajan, though accounted the best, caused his Name to be affixed to all his publick Works, so that Constantine facetiously and wittily called him herba parietina, as Aurelius Victor tells us.

43. Such was Constantine's Care and Cost for the publick Worship. For the encouragement of private Persons, we read, (a) that (besides what we have formerly mentioned) he Ordained, that such Sons or Slaves that were born in Superstition, should not be forced to keep to it against their minds: that Maintenance out of the Exchequer was plentifully allotted to such as turned Christians: in the first place a white Garment for Baptism, and twenty Solidi were allowed, provided (you must know) that they brought for their admittance, a Ticket from the Bishop of Rome. (b) Nicephorus writes, that in one year at Rome, were Baptized above twelve Men, besides Women and Children. In the former Treatise is found, that Constantine at the same time in the Ulpian Palace, made an Oration to the Roman Senate and People, 'Concerning the Faith of Christ to be embraced by all, leaving yet a free choice to every one, what Religion they would cleave to; but declaring, that they were more acceptable that turned Christians. To the same purpose he published an Edict, which we have exemplified in his (c) Life, directed as well to the Princes of the East, as those of the West, wherein he asserts the truth of divers Arguments first, and then invites all to embrace it, declaring that none should be forced, but received if coming on their own accord, and permitting others to frequent the Temples of their Idols, and use their Rites. From which it appears that such are mistaken, who suppose that all Temples were shut up, and their Ceremonies banished utterly, especially in Italy, and those places where the Roman Senate had the most Influence. Yet did he forbid such Magistrats, publicly to Sacrifice to Idols, as were chosen from amongst the Pagani; by a Law prohibited Divinations, and Commanded, as we have said, Churches to be built, as he had given example at Rome, larger than ever.

44. We must also account the Munificence of Constantine, which he shewed towards his new Citizens of Constantinople; not only an encouragement to such as should inhabit that City, but also to the Profession of Religion, if we consider the reason alledged by Zozimus for the founding of it, and the great care the Emperour took to have it clear from Idolatry, making it a Christian Colony, and the first Christian City (universally such) throughout the Empire. First of all he bestowed Bread (a) on such as had Houses at Constantinople, which Loaves were called (b) Palatine. Others (c) he assigned to Soldiers that also had Adorned the City with Buildings. And other Loaves (d) that year wherein he was Consul, he caused every day to be distributed to the common sort, to which he added Wine, Fleih, and Oil, as Suidas (e) tells us, which was observed for many years. (f) One says he daily bestowed on the Poor eighty thousand Loaves, (g) another eighty thousand Modii of Wheat. This Bread was coarse, weighing two Ounces and an half. But Valentinian gave it pure weighing six Ounces, and the allowance was increased afterward, both by (h) Theodosius the Great, and (i) Marcian. For the distributing of it, Scaffolds were erected in many places, to which the Poor ascended by Steps. For one only place being not capable of such a vast Multitude, one hundred and seventeen Marble Stairs or Steps throughout the fourteen Regions of Constantinople were made, as we find in the Ancient Description or Survey of that City placed before the Notitia, whence this Bread was termed gradilis, it being unlawful for any to receive it, but on the Stairs according to assignment.

45. For to every Tribe certain Stairs were assigned, which it was unlawful to change; the Officials of the Præfæctus Annonæ, to whom (a) the care of this distribution was committed, strictly looking into it. These Loaves are called Civiles, because they were bestowed on Cives or Citizens in distinction from the Palatine, and others that were given to certain Schools or Academies of War: this Annona or Provision was also called (b) Popularis and Civica. The same sort of Liberality, but not in such a measure, had Trajan shown at Rome, allowing Food to (c) twelve thousand Boys and Girls, of which Aurelian increased the number, as Popiscus saith; whereupon in most of the Coins of Trajan and Hadrian, these Stairs are seen, by which the People ascended to receive Bread, on the top whereof is feen a Scribe, and another with a Badge

(a) Alia Sylvester ubi supra.

(b) L. 7. c. 34.

(c) L. 2. c. 47.

(a) C. Th. de annon. Civit. l. 8. c. 9.
(b) C. eodem l. 12. c. 13.
(c) C. eodem l. 1. c. 10.
(d) De mun. Civit.
(e) In voc. modicior.
(f) Metaphras. in Pauli Petri archie. Constantinop.
(g) Socrates. l. 2. c. 15.
(h) C. Th. l. penult.

(a) C. Th. l. 2.

(b) De annon. Civit. l. 2. c. 15.
(c) Plin. in Panegyrica.

of distinction, who distributed the Loaves. At first this Allowance could neither be alienated, nor transferred from one to another; but afterwards being alienated, Theodosius confirmed the Contracts, and permitted it to be removed from one to another, so that afterward they might both be alienated otherwise, and given in Dowry.

46. Yet his care extended not only to the Living, he thought it a Point of Christian Prudence and Piety to provide for the decent Interment of the Dead; and therefore Instituted a company of Men, who were to take care of it gratis, being called Leitnarii, for carrying the Dead out on Beds, and Decani, perhaps because they were divided into Decads or Tens. For the maintenance of this Company, he gave to the greater Church of Constantinople Nine hundred and fifty Shops, to which Anastafius afterward added One hundred and fifty, with certain other Revenues. The Prefect of the City had the inspection over them, whom Iulianus ordered to restore some of them to the Church which had been usurped by private Men, and appoint to the Defenders of the Church (Defensores) Eight hundred, to the Oeconomi or Stewards Three hundred, who out of their Revenues should monthly allow Four hundred Aurei to Religious Persons, viz. to the Decani One hundred eighty two, those called Acetarii or Eight Moniales, who sung after the Beire Ninety one, to Acelythi that carried Lights Ninety one, to Canonical Women that served the Hospital and Sung, Thirty six; which Sum yearly amounted to Four thousand eight hundred Aurei. Such as would be at a greater Expence, both for Beds (or Biers) and more Acetria too, were to pay what is specified in the Novel of Iulianus, which will have an Acetrium to consist of Eight Moniales and Three Acelythi. But the Leitnarii bore the Body, made the Grave, and did other things belonging to this Office, whereupon they were called nomotaxi or Labourers, being put in their places by the Prefect of the City. At Constantinople, it is not certain where their Residence or Habitation was, though it be probable that they lived together, that so they might the more easily be found out, as at Rome, where they lived in one place (in the Fourteenth Region of the City) called Castra Leitnariorum. As for their number, it doth not appear.

47. Thus much did Constantine really do for a Reformation, first removing Penal Statutes against Christians, then encouraging them by Restitution of their own, afterward by discouraging Idolatry, as much as the necessity of times would permit, and by his Liberality towards Professors of the true Religion. The Pastors or Bishops thereof, he embraced with singular kindness, and a tender Fatherly care, not sowing amongst them Discord, but composing their Differences, not by owning a Monarchy in a Monarchy, or making one Lord of the rest, and of all Gods Inheritance; by giving him encouragement in earthly Dominion, or affording fuel to that flame of Ambition, which should at length prey upon the whole Christian World. Yet some Men have proceeded to that Vanity, as having first fancied to themselves a Spiritual Monarchy by Divine Right, in the next place, to impose a necessity upon the same Providence, for the maintenance of it in a Secular way, and Constantine, the first Reformer, Incourager and Indower, must have the Honour, not only to provide for the Body due maintenance, but a Crown also for the Pride and Haughtiness of a Supposititious and Prodigious Head. The good Man dreamed of nothing less. He knew no Head of the Church but him in Heaven, and though priority of place he might account reasonable to him who governed the Church in the Metropolis of the Empire, yet he perfectly understood the quality and limits of his Power, not judging his own concerns in Religious Matters, less than those of the Kings of Israel in old time, nor imagining that our Saviour, who said his Kingdom was not of this World, had designed the lessening of Temporal Power, or subduing it wholly to a Spiritual Empire.

48. Yet is he made a great and voluntary Agent in such a prodigious Design, and as a Testimony thereof, a Constitution of his is produced, whereby a vast Temporal Dominion is bestowed on Sylvester Bishop of Rome and his Successors. Great difference there is amongst the Assertors of the Spiritual Empire, concerning the Authority of the Edict, and even the verity of the Donation, the reputation of it being almost extinct, till a little revived of late times by one Marta a Doctor of Naples, who is so confident of the certainty and truth thereof, that he saith, Non esse alterius dubitandum, None ought hereafter to doubt, but that it was really made by Constantine. But that which gives greatest countenance to the Edict, is the Decretal Epistle of Pope Leo this

He provides for the interment of the Dead.

He further kindness to Christians and its Religion.

Novell. 59. c. 43.

the Ninth, who verbatim almost, repeats it whole so far as concerns the Donation.

49. As namely how Constantine wrote in his Edict, that he would exalt the most Holy See of Peter more than his own Empire or earthly Throne, giving unto that See, Potestatem dignitatem & honorificentiam Imperialem, Imperial Power, Dignity, Vigor and Honour, (whereby the Pope, of a Bishop, is made an Emperor, and above the Secular Emperor himself.)

How he Decreed, that the Roman See Principatum teneat, should be Chief of other Churches, and have Principality above the See of Alexandria, Antioch, Jerusalem and Constantinople, and of all other Churches in the whole World, (whereby the Spiritual Principality above other Patriarchs and Bishops is conferred on the Pope.) How he gave to Sylvester and his Successors for ever, his Lateran Palace, which is preferred above all Palaces in the World, his Diadem and Crown, his Mandilion, his Cloak, his Coat, & omnia Imperialia indumentâ, all Imperial Robes which he himself wore, his Imperial Guard, his Imperial Scepter, & omnem processionem Imperialium cultû, minis, & gloriam potestatis nostræ, and all the residue of his Imperial Dignity, Honour and Power. There is his Estate such, and so Pompous, that Constantine himself, (as the Charter saith) held the Pope's Bridle, and performed the officio Stratoris, the Office of a Groom of the Stable, or Yeoman of the Stirrup unto the Pope. Here to the end that the Pontifical Height should not seem vile, but be Adorned more than the Dignity and Power of the earthly Empire; he gave unto Sylvester and his Successors for ever, both the City of Rome, and all the Provinces, Places and Cities of Italy, and the Western Countries, Decreeing all these his Grants to be kept inviolable and unchangeable, usque in finem mundi, even to the end of the World. Here's the Popes Revenues, and the Rich Patrimony of St. Peter.

50. Thus much and far more doth Pope Leo verbatim recite, out of the Edict or Charter of Constantine, all which he saith, he sets down, left any scruple of doubt should remain, touching the Popes earthly Dominion, Neve leviter suscipiemini inceptis & anilibus fabulis sanctam Romanam sedem velle sibi incommensurabilem honorem vendicare & defendere aliqua tenuis; Left any should so much as but lightly suspect, that the Roman See would challenge, or any way defend their Honour, by foolish and uncertain Fables. Yea, he adds of this Edict, and that which he cites out of it, that he therefore relates it that hereby, Veritas fundetur & confundatur Vanitas; That Truth may be confirmed, and Vanity confounded, and that all Catholics may know, nor, himself and other Popes, to be the Disciples of that Peter, who saith of himself, We have not followed Unlearned, or sophisticated or falsely devised Fables. And yet more to Commend this Edict, headjoins; "Know ye that we do inculcate unto you these things which we have not so much recovered, Relatu quolibet, by any Relation or Hearsay, quam quæ ipso visu & tactu comperta sunt; as which we have found out by our own sight and feeling. Thus writes Pope Leo for the Certainty, Truth and Credit of this Charter of Donation, so Pontifically and Assuredly, as one saith, as if he had seen Constantine set his Seal unto the same, or lay it with his own hand upon the Body of St. Peter, as the same Leo saith he did.

Which is plainly proved to be such upon these accounts.

51. This Charter carries in its own Face such manifest Tokens of Forgery, that the recital may well enough seem a sufficient Confutation of it, and to such as are conversant in Histories, and not ignorant of the State of Rome, and all the Western Provinces long after Constantine's time, and how they were governed, it cannot but seem exceedingly Ridiculous. But farther observe, that the very Ground and Occasion why Constantine is said to have made this Charter, is false and forged, viz. the supposed Leprosie, Persecution and Baptism of Constantine by Sylvester, as we shall see in due time and place. Secondly, who can abstain from smiling, to find the See of Constantinople mentioned in this Edict, as one of the Patriarchal Sees, whereas neither had it Patriarchal Dignity, before the second General Council, (that is more than fifty Years after the Donation is supposed to be made) nor was there at that time so much as the name of Constantinople; for the City was then called Byzantium, and several Years after, not changing its name till after the Nicene Council, as Baronius acknowledged. But this Donation of Constantine being made a little after his supposed Baptism by Sylvester (the fourth day, as the Acts of that Pope declare) fell into the Twenty ninth year of his Reign, and that preceding the Nicene Council.

Epist. 1. Lett. 9. c. 12. 13, 14.

Dr. Cræcker's story in his Defence of Constantine. p. 127.

One would therefore think that there was some Fraud used in the inserting of this name, but that there is an uniform Consent in all the Forms and Copies of the Charter, both Greek and Latin, kept safely in their Vatican, as they affirm, and ratified by the Decretal Epistle of Pope Leo for true and Authentic; so that there can be no suspicion of Corruption in those words of the Edict. The Error and Corruption was in the Author alone, who forged such a gross and uncredible Untruth.

52. But Thirdly, had Constantine given Principality to the Roman See above all Churches in the World, as the Charter saith he did, what Folly was in John Bishop of Constantinople, Cyriacus and others, to strive for that Preheminence? Why did not Boniface the Third shew this Charter made by Constantine? Why did he use so much intreaty and means to Phocas a Murderer (as Platina saith he did) that the Church of Rome might be called First of all Churches? When the same was long before almost three hundred years, granted by a fair Charter to the Roman See, by so worthy and renowned an Emperor. Fourthly, In this Edict Constantine is made solemnly to give to Pope Sylvester the Lateran Palace which Sigonius, Baronius and Binius (all) will have bestowed long before on Pope Miltiades his Predecessor, in the Seventh year of Constantine, viz. twelve years before he was either Baptized, or made this Charter of Donation. Fifthly, In this Edict Constantine is made to say, that he will have all People in the World to know, that he had builded unto Christ within his Palace of Lateran, a Church from the very Foundation, together with a Font; yet was the Edict made, as they themselves profess, in the fourth day after Constantine was Baptized, and how then was it possible that such a Stately Fabric should be raised in four days? Especially considering that the Acts of Sylvester having declared what Constantine did all the seven days he was in Albis after his Baptism, say, that he laid the Foundation of this Church on the eighth day. Whether then could that Church be builded on the fourth day, whose Foundation was but begun and the Earth first digged on the eighth day after his Baptism?

53. Further, Sixthly, This Edict, as by the words of it are evident, followed the Leprosie of Constantine supposed, and his Baptism, and therefore could not be made before the ninth year of his Reign, wherein both these, Baronius and Binius account to have happened. Yet is it dated in the fourth Consulship of Constantine, which he exercised with Gallicanus, whereas his fourth Consulship was in the Tenth year of his Reign, by which account he should have made this Edict and Donation eight or nine years before the occasion and cause thereof was presented; besides (see the Stupidity of the Forger) not Gallicanus, but Licinius the fourth time was Consul with Constantine in his fourth Consulship, as appeareth both by the Fasti and many Imperial Constitutions of this Year. And indeed forasmuch as Gallicanus was never Consul with Constantine, as by the Fasti is evident, this Edict supposed to be made in their Royal Consulship was never made.

From the Testimony of Cardinal Baronius.

54. To these reasons may be added the Testimony of their Cardinal Baronius, with whom agreeth Gretzer, who hath written an Apology for him in this very Point. He (a) proves it a meer Figment and Forgery, because first the ancient Popes since Constantine's time, though having many occasions to dispute against Princes touching the Rights and Prerogatives of the Church, yet none of them before the thousandth year after Christ, is read to have defended the same by Authority of this Edict, and yet they knew and make mention of Sylvester's Acts. 2. It is certain that the Emperours make no mention of that Edict of Constantine's Donation, and yet in the Charter of Henry the First, there is mention made of all the former Emperours who had made such ample Donations to the Roman See. 3. This Edict was not in the Ancient Acts of Sylvester, but was by Forgery inserted into them after the thousandth year of Christ, being feigned by some Græcian under the Name of Eusebius, and published by Theodorus Ballamon, whereas till then no Græcian had set it forth: and from the Græcians it came to the Latins and Western Church: Leo the Ninth being the first Pope that makes mention of it. Thus by the Cardinals acknowledgment, we may see what Truth there is in Popes, especially in Leo, who in his Decretal Epistle most solemnly commends this Edict for an Ancient and undoubted Evidence, such as he knew by sight and fence to be the true Deed of Constantine, which yet the Cardinal, after long sitting of Monuments and Records, testifieth to be a Forgery, and that of the Græcians first of all devised, as he saith, about Seven hundred, and published Eight hundred years after the Death of Constantine. Strenchus (b) against this

(a) Baronius ad Ann. 1191. Num. 52. &c.

(b) De Don. Constant.

Date asertheth it for marvelous Impudence in any to deny that this Donation or Edict is set down in those Acts of Sylvester, whereof Gelasius speaketh, saying, I can produce all Libraries for witness hercof, all which have, together with the History of Sylvester's Baptizing Constantine, this Donation Privilege or Edict.

55. This Stenchnus, who was also Library-keeper to the Pope, convinceth as an eye Witness his Fellow Baronius of Impudence and Untruth, for denying this Donation to be mentioned in these Acts of Sylvester, of which Gelasius speaks, and for slandering the Greeks as devisers of it about the Year 1000, which to have been in their Vatican before that in the time of Gelasius, he for a certainty assures us. Hence a Learned Man deservedly breaks forth into this Exclamation: How may we trust any Vatican Library-keeper, if Stenchnus, an Eye-witness, be not to be trusted in this Cause? And if we credit him, who ever hereafter will trust his Fellow Baronius, who thus notoriously downfaceth the Truth? However one may rightly affirm that both of them do in part say truth, and both of them in part do err. That this Edict of Donation is a very Fignment, Baronius rightly avoucheth, but Stenchnus and the rest holding the contrary with him, speak far amiss. Again, that this Edict was of Ancient time in the Popes Library, and in those Acts of Sylvester, which Gelasius mentioneth, in this Stenchnus deserveth to be credited. But Baronius, in saying it was not extant till the 1000 year after Christ, nor published till Balsamon's time, in those the Cardinal faith far amiss. So with Stenchnus we profess, and have proved also the same Edict to be nothing else but a Forgery and Fignment. What they say amiss we reject in either: what they rightly affirm, we accept of either, and upon the true Confession of Baronius, we conclude it to be a Forgery. And upon both these Truths, which they severally profess, we rightly and safely conclude it to be an Ancient Forgery.

56. But though the Edict or instrument of the Donation be forged or falsified, yet the Donation it self may be good, saith (a) Gretzer, who for such Labours to defend it, telling us that the Popes have other undoubted Charters for their Temporal Dominions, (which Cardinal (b) Albanus flatly denies) though their Rights justly rely also upon the Donation of Constantine. His strange reasoning lies in perhaps, an acute Logician saith he, will say, That perhaps the Donation was made by witnesses only without any Instrument. But though a frivolous caviling Sophistry may, yet no sober Man will say so. Where are these Witnesses, or who ever heard of them? Why may not the Bishop of Constantinople plead the like Donation by word of Mouth, of Rome and Italy from Constantine to him and his Successors for ever; and say it is proved by Witnesses, that now are dead without any Deed or Instrument to testify the same? And how can an acute Logician effectually overthrow the one and defend the other Donation? But to silence the Jesuits acute Logician, three several Popes, viz. Adrian, Leo the Ninth, and Nicholas the Third, are Witnesses that the Donation of Constantine was made by a Charter and Instrument, whereof the first faith of that Constitution, and others that they were kept in Lateranensis Scriniis, in the Lateran Registry; and this was about the Year 790. The second tells us he saw and handled the very Charter of Constantine's Donation, which was about the Year 1050. And the third faith that Constantine left unto Sylvester the City of Rome, and declared Per Pragmaticum Constitutum, by a Pragmatical Constitution or Writ of Record, that he and his Successors should have the disposing or Government thereof; which was about the Year 1280. To these might be added the Testimonies of Cardinal Albanus and several others, of whom some profess they were Eye-witnesses of that (forged) Constitution.

57. Gretzer his acute Logician will farther say. It may be that the Instrument or Charter is either perished or corrupted by long Continuance. A Saying every whit as worthy and rational as the former. So may also another, and as good a Logician say of the Donation of Rome and Italy made by Constantine to the Bishops of Constantinople. And whether is Stenchnus, with all Libraries, Pope Gelasius, and Leo the Ninth, so assuredly testifying the forged Charter not to be lost or perished: or Gretzer's Logician, coming in with another perhaps more to be credited in this Cause? After these so furious Assaults of Logic, he leads on his great and prevalent Arguments, which he is forced to call Probabilities or Conjectures. One of the best is taken out of Baronius, who saith, It is not for nothing that the French Kings in their Writs of Donation do profess that they restore to the Roman Church the Dominions which they took from the Lombards.

Dr Crack-
anth quo supra.

Another Perpith Argument for the Donation

Drawn from perhaps.

And from Probabilities and Conjectures.

(a) Append.
ad lib. de munific. Princip.
(b) Lib. de
Don. Constant.

But the Inference thence made, is neither necessary nor probable. They might be restored, though the Popes had got them by Invasion, wrongful Intrusion, Fraud, Robbery, Rebellion or Treason, as the Popes got them in very Deed, from the Eastern Emperour, not possessing them by Right or by any Donation, much less that of Constantine, as is clear from Sigonius an Historian of their own, and we shall particularly discover in due time and place. His other Conjecture is, Seeing it is most certain that before Pipin's time, yea before Aripert's (that is before the 704. year of our Lord) the Popes had drivers Provinces subject to their Dominion, and there appears no Evidence for any other Title, whereby they should have and hold these Lands, it followeth that the right to have them is not unprobably derived from the Donation of Constantine.

58. His Proof is only of the Patrimony of the Cottian Alps, and his Conclusion is of many Provinces, whereas that Patrimony was so far from (a) containing many or any one Province, that it was but certain Villages or Farm-houses in the Northwest Part of the Alps; and what is this to the Donation pretended from Constantine? A few Cottages or Farm-houses, as he himself calls them, to Rome, to all Italy, to all the Western Provinces and Kingdoms. And were there not many other means how the Pope might get them besides Constantine's Donation? Besides it is clear from Sigonius, that Aripert and Litprandus gave of their own to the Roman See, as well as restored those Farms, and how could they give what was its Right before? And farther, what is this Patrimony which their own Writers confess to have owned subjection to the Emperour by Tribute, to an Imperial Monarchical Supreme and Independent Dominion in all Italy and the Western Provinces? These Arguments are too frivolous to be insisted on: we shall come to those of our own against this Donation, which carry with them much more weight, and will, to any indifferent Person, put the question out of all Dispute. The first is drawn from the Testament of Constantine, wherein he is said to have divided the whole Empire amongst his Sons. To be sure whether it was divided before or after his Death, the Western Part fell to Constantine and Constans, the Eastern to Constantius, even by consent of the Pope's greatest Disciples Sigonius and (c) Baronius. Then is it all to be believed, that if Constantine had formerly made, either by Word or Writing, an absolute Donation of Rome, Italy, and the Western Provinces to the Pope (and that so Solemnly, that as Leo the Ninth saith, he Decreed that Donation to abide firm and inviolable unto the end of the World) so Pious and Prudent an Emperour would within twelve Years after do contrary to his own Act? Especially in his last Will and Testament, wherein he would rather have testified his Religious Affection and Love to the Church, by an Addition of some other Gift, than leave so eternal a Blemish upon his Name, of Inconstancy, Injustice, Impiety, Sacrilege, and making his own Children Inheritors of what he knew was neither his to give, nor which they, without open Injustice (if he had right to give it) Impiety and Sacrilege might accept, hold or Possess.

59. A second reason is, the perpetual Possession and Dominion which the Emperours had of Rome and Italy, with the Government thereof, which continued still in them, not only after Constantine's time, but even whilst he lived, till it was unjustly first taken from them by the Popes, and then confirmed by Pipin, Charles the Great and others. In the very next Year after this supposed Donation, was (a) Severus Prefect of Rome appointed by Constantine to govern it, with the Cities belonging thereunto, by Imperial Authority as it formerly had been: The next year after was (b) Maximus, the two following (c) Ancius Julianus and Optavianus, and throughout all Constantine's time, every Year he had his Lieutenants to Govern the City of Rome for him and in his Right. It were easie to express almost in each Year the several Prefecti urbi under Constantius, Valentinian, Theodosius and other Emperours, for more than One hundred Years after Constantine, and several have according to occasion been mentioned. After the time of Valentinian the Younger, when the Western Empire, through the Corruption of Barbarous Nations, began to decay, that the Supreme Government of Rome and Italy still remained in the Emperour his appointing Kings of Italy, after them Dukes of Rome, and Enarchs of Ravenna is a sufficient proof, and this is evident, not only from other Authors, but Sigonius (d) the Popes own Servant. Now can it be imagined that all these Emperours would so injuriously intrude into St. Peter's Patrimony? Can any one imagine that the Popes, Men of high Courage to defend their Right, would have put up so great Wrong, without so much as once checking de Reg. Ital.

(a) Sigonius
lib. 1.

(b) De testi-ment. Imp. l. 5.
(c) Ad dnm
337.

(a) C. Th. l. 2.
de iudicis.
(b) C. Th. l. 1.
ad legem com.
(c) Ouph.
in Festin. l. 2.

(d) L. 14. c. 1.

checking the Emperor for so open Injustice, Sacrilege, and Ufurpation? May not the silence of so many Popes, and continued Possession by so many Emperours, be thought a just reason to condemn that pretended Donation?

60. But the third Proof, that Constantine made no such Donation, is the Testimony of their own Writers, who seeing that neither Eusebius, Rufinus, Theodoret, Socrates, Sozomen, Eutropius, Victor, St. Jerome, St. Augustin, St. Edm., St. Chrysostome, nor Ammianus, the Tripartite History, Damascene, Bede, nor Orosius, nor any who have most diligently written the Acts of Constantine (being Authors of good Credit) not only do make no mention of this Donation; but further declare that he so divided the Roman Empire amongst his Three Sons; that all Italy was allotted to one of them. And own it as a Fable concerning the Testimonies of whom, as also the Arguments offered by Marta and others in vain, to confirm the Fictitious Donation, amongst many others who have written abundantly to satisfaction in this Argument, Dr.* Crackenthorp a most Learned Church Antiquary is especially to be consulted, we having rather by saying so much, transcended the Nature of our Design.

61. Constantine, though not guilty of such a Crime, as to found or establish a Spiritual Tyranny, yet sufficiently provided for the Patrimony of the Church, first by (A) restoring, as we formerly said, its Ancient Possessions, of which it had been robbed in times of Persecution, the Oblations and Treasures of the Church being before his time so very great, that the Bishops of Rome might easily purchase much more than that one Patrimony in the Christian Alps, containing few Farms or Villages. He became a very great Benefactor by that Law mentioned by the (B) Author of his Life, by Virtue whereof; If none of the Kindred of Martyrs Confessors and Exiles were alive, who might succeed them as Heirs, it was Enacted, that every where, and for ever, the Church should have and enjoy their Possessions. These Encouragements his own Example and the Religious Inclination of Christians, always affectionate in their first Conversion, were sufficient Foundations for ample Structures. Many private Men gave not only Goods, but Lands and fair Possessions both to other Churches and that of Rome. Prætor (C) writes, that the Church of Atles was enriched with the Possessions that many bestowed on it. So many and so ample Donations of Lands were made to the Church in St. Austins time, that both Aurelius (D) his Predecessor, and (E) himself also sometime, refused Lands that were offered to be given, sometimes record'd them, and that unasked, after they were given. The like Donations might be shew'd in other Churches, especially in the Roman, to which they were so usually made, that Christian Emperours (as Valentinian, Gratian and Theodosius) by their (F) Edicts did restrain them; and the like Laws were made in Spain and France in after-times, which were imitated by the Famous Statute of Mormain, Enacted here in England Novemb. 4. in the Seventh Year of Edward the First. But thus much of the Reformation of Religion by Constantine, carried on as the Times and Affairs would comport, the Progress and Perfection of it we shall discover in due time and order.

* In his Defence of Constantine and his Treatise of the Popes Temporal Dominion

(2) Euseb.
Ecc. Hist. I, 10.
c. 5. & vita
Constant. lib. 2.

(c) L. 2, c. 36.

(c) De vita Contemp. l. 2,
c. 9.

(d) Serm. 49.
de divers.
(e) Possideni- us in vita Aug.
c. 24.

(f) C. Th.
L. 20. de Epist.
Eccles. clericis.

Such large Gifts to the Church, that enforceth a Statute of Mortmain.

CHAP. II. The Constantinopolitan Roman Empire. Constantine. 21

CHAP. II.

The Church Polity.

Order and absolutely necessary.

1. THE Government and Order are necessary for the well being of Mankind, however distinguished into Parties and Societies, is too evident to be disputed; the Effects of them, and of their Contraries, are so convincing, that they equal the Causes of the most clear Demonstrations. Such is the De-privacy of Mens Minds and Inclinations, so violent their Tendency to all Mischief, that they can no more subsist without Government, that live without Disorders (if left to themselves) and mutual Injuries. Therefore hath the wise Creator and Disposer of all things, that he might regulate our Incontinency, and bridle the Extravagance of our wild and violent Affections, ordained his Deputies in the World, with a Rule for Direction, and a Rod for the Corruption of Manners, with that to lead, and this to drive us on in the right way, lest the disturbance of Order should bring Confusion, and Confusion certain Ruine and Destruction.

2. Such being Gods Ordinance and Constitution in Civil Society and external Commerce, can it be supposed that equal Care should be wanting for the Government of his Church, which is the House of God, the City of the living God, the Kingdom of his most dear Son. He that takes such Care for Kingdoms of the World, would he not make as good Provision for such as he hath taken out of the World? If Disorder, Confusion and Anarchy be a thing to be dreaded in the State, is it not as much to be feared in the Church? God is no where the Father of Confusion, but of Order and Peace, how much more than in that Spiritual Community? Where he Commands that all things be done Decently and in Order? But what Order can there be, where there is no Government, where there is none that obeys, where every one may do what is lawful in his own Eyes? Therefore hath he appointed Stewards over his Family, Leaders over his Flock, Labourers over his Harvest, Husbandmen over his Field, in sim, Diversities of Administrations both for the Building and Preserving of his Church, which is the Body of Christ. In it hath he placed, as in the Humane Body, several Principal Members in Subjection and Subordination to himself the Head, which being as Eyes, Ears, Mouth and Hands, the Body might not seem Deformed and Maimed, nor be unable, for want of Help and Conduct, to look to it self, or provide for its own Health and Security: But we must not suppose that Discipline is necessary in the Church merely for to contain the People in Obedience, for regulating the Flock, and not for the Government of the Pastors. This were to secure the Feet, and neglect the upper and most Principal Parts, which by how much they are more Excellent, the Diseases of them are more Dangerous. The House cannot stand, if the Builders themselves pull it down, the Harvest must be lost, if the Labourers Scatter, and Gather not: If the Salt have lost its Savour, wherewith shall it be Seasoned? If the Light of the Day be Darkened, how great is the Darkness of the Body? If the Leaders themselves go Astray, the Soldiers must needs go aside and Wander.

Yet in a thing of such Consequence, and wherein no less than the Welfare of the Body of Christ himself is concerned, a Policy and Government is not to be Framed according to the Pleasure of Man, neither is his Fancy to be the Standard, where Decency and Order are the utmost Bounds. An endeavour is to be used, ever that the same Administration of External Discipline be used in the Church, which our Lord himself hath taught, and from the Beginning of the World approved. Now that Policy which God appointed at the Beginning for the External Government of his People (the Internal by his Spirit in the Hearts of the Faithful we own) and middle (not with) consisted in the Authority and Power given to Fathers over their Families. For he would that the Fathers should be both Instructors and Governours to their Children, Nephews, and all under their Power, commanding their whole Offspring to pay them Honour, Obedience and Obediency, to acknowledge the Will of God revealed to their Fathers, and obey their Admonitions and Instructions in his Worship. A most

Order and Government absolutely necessary.

For Regulating the Pastors as well as the Flock.

Paternal Government first appointed by God himself

Consule Bil-
sonum Episcop.
Vintonensem
lib. de perpetua Ecclesiæ Christi Gubernatione
cap. 1. &c.

certain Reward of this Obedience, was the Blessing of God pronounced by the Mouths of Parents, who also foretold the Curse of God against Disobedient and Rebellious Children. The Patriarchs of old were Priests and Prophets for their Progeny, and Magistrates also for the Government and Refrainment of them, it being the Will of God in those times to have his People ruled only by Paternal Power. Hence in the Decalogue Moses comprehends Princes per Magistrates in the name of Parents, and in the Old Testament almost every where Princes and Governors are styled Fathers, the Holy Ghost signifying that Princes ought to embrace and tender their Subjects with the same Love and Care that Parents bear to their own Children, for as much as by Divine Institution all the Power of Princes flowed from Paternal Authority. From Adam to Moses we have descending a Power of Fathers over their Children, and Eldest Sons (except where by an extraordinary Providence the Case was altered) over their Brothers and the rest of the Family, in a continued Series for the Government of the Church established and approved by God, but of Equality or Colation in Government, neither any Precept nor Example.

4. The Family of Jacob being grown into a Nation, that Domestic Discipline, as more agreeable to a Family than a Nation or Region, was abrogated; and out of Twelve Tribes one was chosen for the Exercise of Priesthood, and the Charge of all Holy things; wherein, according to the Number and Order of such Princes as descended from their common Progenitor Levi, God Ordained several Degrees and Dignities, for the Interpretation of the Law and the Service of the Altar, which Degrees were so regulated, that not only the Levites were under the Priests, but also of both sorts some were inferior and subject unto others. Of the Levites were Princes such as were Chief of the Families of Gershon, Kobath, and Merari, the three Sons of Levi, after whom followed other Fathers who directed their Brethren the Levites in their Ministerial Function, and whereof some were made Judges and Magistrates, as well elsewhere as in their own Cities, not only in the work of the Lord, but the Kings business also. And some of them were Assistants in the Great Council or Synodrium of Hierusalem, to the Princes of the Priests and Tribes. Amongst the Priests themselves the Prime Dignity remained in the High Priest, who by Divine Institution was Chief or Prince of the Princes of Levi, and was over the Chiefest Judges at Hierusalem, as well Priests as others, in the Lords business. Which Honour was given him, not because herein he was a Type of Christ, but because this Form of Government was fittest for the Jewish Church: For neither Aaron nor any of his Successors represented the Kingly Office of Christ; otherwise our Saviour had been a Priest after the Order of Aaron, as well as that of Melchisedeck, if Aaron as well as Melchisedeck had obtained as well the Dignity of King as Priest: but it is sufficiently clear, that the Scepter belonged to Judah, and not to Levi.

A Select Tribe chosen to the Exercise of holy things.

5. To the High-Priest (who ever ought to be of the Family of Eleazar and Phineas) was adjoined another, as his Second or Deputy out of the Progeny of Itamar the other Son of Aaron, to whom were subject the Gershonites and Merarites in the Ministry of the Tabernacle. And from these two Roots as it were sprung those Four and Twenty (a) called Heads and Fathers of the Priests, amongst whom David caused Lots to be cast, that they might by turns serve in the House of the Lord. And as they were subject to the former, two Princes or Heads, so had they others (b) subject to them, as well Priests as Levites, whose Service they used in the discharging of their Courses. Their number sometimes failed both by reason of frequent Exile, and the decay of Families; but in the Old Testament they were called (c) Fathers and Heads of the Priests, and in the New Chief Priests or Apostles. Of both sorts we said not only Priests but Levites were Judges appointed and Governors of Cities as well others as their own Forty eight. And many Causes of greatest moment were brought before them alone, or for the most part, as those concerning Leprosy, Jealousy, Secret Homicide, False Witness and the like, in which Matters the People and Magistrates were bound to consult and expect the Sentence of the Priests. But we must not forget that the most Doubtful Intricate and Weighty Matters were referred to the greatest and gravest Council or Sanhedrim, which being to sit by Gods Command at the place where the Ark of the Testimony abode, in the time of King Jehoshaphat, consisted of the Levites, Priests, and Heads of the Families of Israel, had Amariah the High Priest, Prince or Chief in all Matters of the Lord, and Zedabiah Prince of the House of Judah, chief in the Kings business.

This

This Sanhedrim thus Constituted in the time of Jehoshaphat, a Prince most observant of the Mosaic Law, was but a continuation of that great Council of Seventy Elders whom God Ordained as Assistants to Moses in the great Burthen of Government. Now although we shall not deny, that by reason of the peculiar Constitution of the Jewish Commonwealth under the Mosaic Law, no * necessary Consequence can be drawn from the diverse degrees of Priests and Levites, to the framing of the very same Polity in the Church of Christ, yet for Preferuation of good Order, that the Pastors and Governors of Gods Flock may the better do their Duty, and not be found unworthy of their calling, either in respect of Depravity of Manners, or unsoundness of Opinion, the Wisdom of God that evidently appeareth in the Levitical Polity, is not lightly to be esteemed or rejected. For if in every well constituted Society Order is very necessary; and Confusion, of which God never is Author, is with all Industry to be shunned; we neither ought to inquire for, neither can we find a more excellent or perfect Pattern of Church Government (so far as time, place, and the Condition of Persons will bear) than what by God himself was settled and confirmed in the Church and Commonwealth of the Jews. And although that Government be not thoroughly known, neither is there necessity of being fully conformable to it, by reason of the many and various Differences and Disproportions betwixt that Commonwealth and the Christian Church, spread so far and wide amongst so many and various Nations; yet this is clear, that God would not have that Church governed by all the Priests and Levites qualified with equal Power and Authority, but that he subjected some to others, as well in the Sacred Function as the Civil Government, and that all fate not promiscuously in that great Sanhedrim of the Seventy Elders, but such only were chosen into that Assembly who were eminent for their Virtue, or Nobility of their Extraction. Hence it is evident from the Levitical Discipline, that the Government of the Church by Ministers of unequal and differing Orders and Degrees, is more agreeable to the Wisdom of God revealed in his word, than that which indifferently allows to Pastors equal, or one and the same Authority.

Subordinate to each other.

6. Whilst our Lord himself was upon Earth, although all Power in Heaven and Earth was given him, yet did he not manifest or challenge it till he was risen from the Dead, but the External Government of the Church he left to others, as not so proper to the Son of God as to Mortal Men. His Kingdom was not of this World, but Spiritual, exercising his Authority over all in the Power and Majesty of the Spirit, protecting and defending his Subjects against all outward and inward Enemies, and carrying on his work notwithstanding all Opposition, in an irresistible, though Secret and Spiritual way. The external Administration of Power, such as was convenient for the Peace, Order, and Decency of his Church, he delegated to those whom he made Leaders of his Flock and Stewards of his Household, upon the removal of his Corporal presence. Those were his Disciples of whom whilst yet he was upon Earth he made two Orders or Ranks, one of Apostles, being Twelve Messengers invested with chiefest Authority; another of Seventy Persons more in number, but with less Power, whom he sent before him to Preach in each City or Town whether he should come. They (not those) were his constant Followers and Domestic Attendants, heard all his Sermons, saw all his Works, being chosen for this purpose to be certain and Eye-witnesses to the World of his Doctrine, Miracles, Afflictions, Death and Resurrection. They and no others were at Table with him at his last Supper, heard the Prayers he made, received his comfortable and encouraging words, and the large Promises he made at parting. To them did he assign the whole World as a Province to Teach and Baptize; and those did he send as Ambassadors à latere not only to Preach the Heavenly Truth, and Found Churches throughout the World, but to direct and order in his Name and by his Authority, all the Faithful in all things concerning Faith and Manners; to prescribe Order in Government of his Church, and therein Establish what might be necessary for its Increase, Peace and Unity, for restraining the Rebellious and Refractory, Provision of Faithful Pastors, stopping the Mouths of gainers, and delivering up to Satan such as were incorrigible in Wickedness and Blasphemy. And for all those things they had most ample Gifts of the Spirit, and were indued with Power from on High.

* Vide encl. cap. 2.

Christ appoints his Apostles and the Elders in like manner.

(a) i. Chron.

(b) Nchem.

(c) Ibid.

(d) Mat. 12.

Mark 11. 9. 14.

7. In this manner of chusing Disciples and gathering the first beginnings of his Christian Church, our Saviour seemeth to have respected the Jewish Polity, wherein Twelve Princes by Gods appointment were chosen out of the Tribes, one out of each, and afterwards Seventy Elders were joyned with the rest in Council. By which diversity both of number and degree, a difference appears clearly in the Dignity of Governours, both in the People of God and Christ's Church, and is evident in the promotion of Matthias, after the Treason and end of Judas, who was one of the Seventy. The Apostles had under them certain Disciples, whom they still took with them as well for ease as Company, and when they had been sufficiently instructed, they partly sent to plant other Churches, when they themselves were called away into other places, sometimes employed in perfecting what was begun, restoring what was decayed, or otherwise as occasion required: And for that they knew by reason of their constant Converse the whole sense and mind of the Apostles, they were appointed (as Timothy by St. Paul) to Ordain and Govern other Pastors and Teachers, than whom they were therefore more eminent and of greater Dignity in the Church.

8. The Apostles were all of the same † Dignity and Power, not one placed above another as to Authority. Their Lord forbade them all Ambitious Desires, which before his Resurrection they were not free from harping still upon a splendid Temporal Dominion, as their Country-men do at this hour, which the Messiah should enjoy. As he checked such Imaginations, and denied them the use of the Temporal Sword, (which as he found so he left to the Magistrate,) he was so far from forbidding them the exercise of just Authority over others, that he placed them in Dignity above all others in his Church, neither forbade them to receive any Names or Titles of respect, but ambitiously to seek after and desire them. Neither did he joyn in equal Authority any Presbytery or Society of inferior Pastors for the Government of the Church, much less any Lay-persons, an Invention that bears not the Date of One hundred and fifty years, and never was heard of till of late time in the Church of God, whatever is pretended. The Apostles were furnished with admirable Gifts of the Holy Ghost, but such as were requisite for the laying of such considerable Foundations as those of Christianity; for converting the Incredulous that never had heard of Christ, and when they did, would be too apt to stumble at his Sufferings; for strengthening the Faithful, who were but sadly entertained by the unbelieving World; and for furnishing so many Churches newly planted with careful and able Pastors. The Church being settled, there was no necessity of the continuance of such Miraculous Power. The Scripture is sufficient in all Ages to declare the Truth; the Miracles then wrought give it sufficient Testimony; the Authority of that first Commission is still continued by Succession: The Abilities of Pastors do not now appear on a sudden, but ripen with time if they be industrious. Yet those parts of Apostolical Office which lye in Teaching, Baptizing, Administering the Lords Supper, loosing and binding, laying on of Hands in the Ordination of Pastors and Ministers, these still continue in the Church, and so must as long as the Church it self continues. These we may in fewer words distinguish into Doctrine and Discipline, Administration of the Word and Sacraments, and the Power of the Keys and Ordination.

9. The former did belong indifferently to all Pastors and Ministers of the Church, Preaching the Word and Administering the Sacraments, was their general Office and Duty whilst the Apostles yet lived, who reserved Power of the Keys and Ordination to themselves. Such they chose at first for Pastors and Teachers, as were for their Age and Gravity most capable of Reverence and Honour, in which respect they were called Presbyters (from which word is derived the French Presbiter and our Priests) or Elders. Afterwards such Young Men as were of special Abilities were admitted, and yet retained the old Name which use had made familiar. The Apostles themselves are sometimes called Presbyters or Elders, as (a) St. Peter taketh that Title upon him, and those Presbyters from their inspection or oversight are termed Episcopi or Bishops, those Names being (b) promiscuously used at the first Plantation of Christian Churches, which were governed by all those Presbyters in common under the Apostles. But afterwards, as (c) St. Hierome writes, Factions and Parties being made by such as training and Baptizing sought to draw Disciples after them, it was Decreed throughout the whole World, that for the removing of Schism and Diffentions, one of those Presbyters should be chosen and set over the rest, and him to whom the Schisms arise in the Church by reason of the Equality of Presbyters.

Ram qui prohibetur de minori ad majorem presbiterum.

Par in pa-rem non habet imperium.

Vide Bilemon et supra
c. 7. &c.

(a) 1 Pet. 5.

(b) Philip. 1.
Tit. 1. Act. 20.

(c) Ad Euan-gelium et in Tit.

the whole Care of the Church should belong; they named (in a peculiar and eminent way) Episcopus or Bishop. Indeed the Apostles at their first Preaching of the Gospel, might not think it necessary to commit the Government of Churches unto Bishops, because the chief Authority of Imposition of Hands, and binding and loosing they would keep in their own Hands; and being by Christ himself made Universal Bishops and Overseers; as also because they would not commit to great a Charge to any, before they had had sufficient Experience of their Fidelity, Gravity, Prudence and Learning; and also lest they should seem rather to study the Honour and Preference of their Disciples than the Conversion of Souls; therefore they suffered the Churches first to make trial of many Governours, from the equality of whom great Disturbance and Confusion arising, and they being called still away into other places by fresh Occasions, were necessarily constrained to set over each Church a Pastor of approved Fidelity, which willingly received him, having by sad Experience learnt what Disturbances Heresies and Schisms the Wickednesses and Discord of Teachers had produced, and how unfit the confused Rule and equal Power of Presbyters was to prevent or remove those Distempers.

10. That those Factions and Diffentions spoken of by St. Jerome happened in the time of the Apostles, is evident from the Epistles written by St. Paul to the (a) Corinthians, (b) Romans, (c) Galatians, (d) Philippians, (e) Colossians and (f) Thessalonians, and the Writings of (g) others of the Apostles. And St. Hierome himself (though thought none of the greatest Friends of Episcopacy) beareth witness in that he compareth the Polity of the Christian Church to that of the Jewish, and faith, the Apostolical Traditions were taken from the Old Testament, (h) and what Aaron his Sons and the Levites were in the Temple, that may Bishops, Presbyters and Deacons challenge to themselves; clearly hinting, that as in the Temple amongst Priests, so in the Church of Christ the Apostles made a difference betwixt Bishops and Presbyters; as he doth in another place plainly affirm, that (i) the Safety of the Church hangs on the Dignity of a Chief Priest (or Bishop) to whom, if a free and eminent Power, after all the rest, be not granted, as many Schisms as Priests will be made in the Church. Elsewhere, (k) That afterwards one was chosen who should be set over the rest; a remedy was made in Schisms, lest every one drawing to himself, should break the Church of Christ. Now at Alexandria from Mark the Evangelist unto Heracles and Dionysius the Bishops, the Presbyters ever named some one Bishop that was chosen from amongst themselves and placed in an higher degree. Hence it appears plainly, that Episcopacy is of Apostolical Institution, which the several Successions of Bishops in several Sees before the death of St. John make evident; so that the Superiority in Bishops, which he faith was brought in rather by the Custom of the Church than Divine Disposition; rather respect such Customs as were afterwards brought in by Canons (such were, that Presbyters could not Baptize without the Bishops Licence, nor Preach in his presence) at least if the Apostles had no express Command for it, as St. Paul (l) distinguisheth betwixt that and his own Opinion and Judgment in the matter of Virgins; yet must we not think (as the Apostle in modestly expresseth himself) that they had the Spirit of Christ, who would not doubtless leave them to a Fallible and Humane one, in a business of such Consequence, as the Government and well ordering of his Church.

11. Such an Officer by the name of Episcopus or Bishop, was chosen after this manner: When a Bishop was dead, whose Church was furnished with many Presbyters fit to succeed him, the Bishops nearest to him of the same Province meeting together, agreed upon a day for an Election, which day they divulged both to the People and Clergy. At the day appointed both People and Clergy meeting in the Church, as many Bishops as possibly could be present (but without Three nothing could be done) gave their attendance on the Election, and took notice of such as the People and Clergy chose. If all or the greater part of any Sort or Order unanimously pitched upon one Person, he was declared Elect, and a day was named for his Consecration, his Name and the time of his Consecration being affixed to the Doors of the Church, with warning, that if any one would object any thing against the Party to be chosen, they should appear sufficiently furnished for such an Affair at such a time and place. At the second time of their meeting, such Bishops as assembled for Consecration and Imposition of Hands, if after diligent inquiry into the Manners of the Party, they found him such a one as the Apostle had described, they Episcopatus.

(a) 1 Cor. 1.
(b) Rom. 16.
(c) Gal. 1.

(d) Philip. 3.
(e) Coloss. 2.
(f) 1 Thess. 4.

(g) 2 Pet. 2.
(h) 2 Tim. 2.
(i) 1 Tim. 3.

(j) Ad Euan-gelium.

(k) Ad Euan-gelium.

(l) 1 Cor. 7.

For prevention thereof Bishops are made.

Episcopacy of Apostolical Institution.

The manner of choosing or electing a Bishop.

Cyp. l. 1. c. 24.

E

Ordained

Ordained him Pastor, and gave him a strict Charge in the presence of all the Multitude. If any Crime was objected, and proved against him, they judged him unworthy, and proceeded to the Election of some other whom both the Clergy and People did unanimously design to this Office. The Care of the Ancient Christians in choosing their Pastors was so remarkable to the Heathens themselves, that Alexander Severus the Roman Emperour is said by Lampridius to imitate it as that of the Jews in this manner: For when he would make any Governours of Provinces or Chief Commanders, he published their Names, desiring the People, that if any of them were guilty of any Crime, it might be evidently proved: And he said it was a sad thing that this should not be done in the Provinces which Christians and Jews practiced toward such of their Priests as were to be Ordained.

12. But it happening that in certain places there were very few Clerks, or such as were not fit for such a Calling, in such a case they betook themselves to the Bishop of the Metropolis or Mother City of that Province, and of him they desired either such a Person as they themselves made choice of, or one whom he himself should commend to them. This way of looking after a Bishop was called Pufflation as the other Election. At their Petition the Metropolitan having advised with that Bishop whose Clerk they chose, and called to him other Bishops (two at least) Examined and Consecrated him in like manner as the former, or some other, if just cause required, of more approved Integrity and Worth: For the restraining of the Factionness of the People, and the Ambition of the Clergy, the Bishops of the same Province were commanded to be present, that they might take care lest Corruption, Ambition and Tumult prevailed. And for a curb to those Bishops, lest Hatred and private Favour should disturb or pervert the Work, the Metropolitan was to be made acquainted with the whole Proceeding: before they could lay Hands on him: as if any one accused them as far more prone, and not indifferent as to the Parties concerned, it was proper to the Metropolitan to hinder their Attempts, and with the assent of the greater number of Bishops to hinder the Election, if, upon Examination, they saw it requisite. The Nicene Council, as to this Matter, Decreed, That a Bishop should be Consecrated by all the Bishops of the same Province; at least, that Three should meet together and have the consent of the rest expressed by Letters before they should lay Hands on him. And that if any were Consecrated without the knowledge and Consent of the Metropolitan, he ought not to be owned as Bishop, and that upon dissent the Matter was to be decided by the major part.

13. From this most Antient of all General Councils, we must observe, that at that time there was a difference in Degree and Power amongst Bishops themselves, that an Inspection was given to some one over several others, that he was called Metropolitan, and the place of his Authority and Jurisdiction his Province: The Metropolitan was so named from the Metropoli or Mother City, so called either in respect of Colonies sent abroad, which owned her as their Mother, or by reason of Power and Preheminence over and above the adjoining Cities. This difference and relation being betwixt such places long before the beginnings of the Christian Church, when it came to be Established, it found a necessity of modelling its Government according to the Secular Form. For long before Princes gave their Names to the Christian Profession, when the Church had no other means of distinguishing right from wrong, and Truth from Falshood, but only by Synods, or the Meetings of Religious and Prudent Pastors, there being no Christian Magistrate, but the Swords being employed not for, but against the Faithful in many exquisite Persecutions; such Meetings were thought most convenient to be called by the Bishops of such Principal Cities or Metropolies, and for that some must necessarily preside in them as Moderators and Governours, they were thought most fit to do, and by ancient Councils are called Metropolitans, as also Archbishops. After the Conversion of Constantine, when Princes never had owned and imbraced the formerly disputed and persecuted Name of Christians, they began to increase the number of Synods, and confirmed not only the Decrees of General Councils, but what was also resolved on in Provincial Meetings, as wholesome Remedies against Disorders both of Church and State. And as by their Edicts, which had the Power of Laws, they referred Ecclesiastical Causes to Ecclesiastical Judges; so did they take Care, that according to the Cannons, those Metropolitans should twice in a Year assemble the Bishops of their respective Provinces, and and in those Synods determine such Differences and Contests as had happened in Matters of Religion. In process of time buifnels growing every day more large and intricate, and Bishops neither being able to survey the Charges so frequent and great Journeys, nor being well pared from their Sees, there was necessity of reducing Provincial Synods to one yearly Meeting, and in the mean time of committing the Cognizance of such Matters as would bear no delay, would prove too tedious for the small time allowed to their meeting, to the Metropolitan of that Province where they arose.

14. Some think the Original of Metropolitans of as high a Date as the time of Timothy and Titus. That it was most Ancient, appears from the Cannons as well of the first Nicene, as other General Councils which speak of those kind of Governours, not as lately fet up, but as ordinary Officers of the Church, and take care (a) every Metropolitan City retain its ancient Dignity. And such was the Government of the Church when persecuted: After that Constantine had vailed the Fafes and Eagle of the Empire to the Crofs, and had quite changed the ancient Form of Subordinate Majestytracy, the Form of Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction was also much altered: as well in the changing of Cities for Metropolitan Power, as erecting of new forts of Governours. The East felt the greatest force of this alteration, (though the extravagance of the Emperours especially fay their Roman Amulators,) but the West also found a necessity, though not, in so large a measure, of conforming the Ecclesiastical way of Administration to that of the Civil. For another Form of Provinces being made, and other Cities Erected into Metropolis, to the Bifhop of those newly upstart Cities was given the Title of Metropolitans, yet had they but the meer Title and place; no Metropolitocal Authority or Jurisdiction, preceding their Colleagues of their several Provinces, and placed next to the Metropolitans, but subject to them as the rest of their Fellow Bifhops. The Emperours might at their pleasure divide and multiply Provinces, which if the Bifhops indeavoured to do, they incurred the pain of Deposition.

15. It was considered that the Apostles and their Successors had delineated and assigned the Limits and Borders of Church Government, according to the Dignity and Order of the several Cities, and that the reason was now the same, if possibly an Alteration without great Inconvenience could be obtained; that the lesser Cities are dependent upon the greater, to which is daily great Consequence upon the account of Traffick and publick Business; and much intercourse necessarily being betwixt the several Bishoppicks and Parishes and Metropolitan Cities, it necessarily must follow, that there it is most convenient the Metropolitan should have his See, where was the Metropolis for Civil Matters, that the several inferior Officers of his Province might have the more easie access to his Person: the force of which Consequence appears manifestly in this, that where Custom or a certain Veneration of particular Places or Persons has confined the Metropolitan See to some private City in the Province, yet is the Prelate necessitated to reside for the most part in the Civil Metropolis. To those Reasons as are most weighty, may be added that Honour and Esteem that all Christians have to the Person and Memory of Constantine. If the Apostles and Apostolical Persons imitated in their Church Polity the Method and Order of Heathen Persecutors, much more did it seem fitting and convenient to the Bishops, to follow the pattern of so Pious and deserving a Prince.

16. Before this time therefore Bishops being set over several Cities, and Metropolitans, or Archbishops over Provinces: When as the Civil Diocesses were appointed, whereof each contained several Provinces, it was thought fit that over every Diocess should also one Bishop be appointed to govern the Archbishops, as the Archbishops did the Bishops. Where the Presidents, Consulares, and Correctores were, there sat the Metropolitans. And when the Vicarij were brought up and set over the Governours of Provinces, Primates were constituted in the Church to oversee Metropolitans and other inferior Officers. The Vicarius was over several Provinces, so was the Primate; the Vicars Charge was called Diocesis, so was that of a Primate. From the Consulares and Presidents of Provinces, there lay Appeal to the Vicars, so did there to the Primates from the Metropolitans or Exarchs. From the Sentence of Vicars lay Appeal to the Presidj Praetorio; and so from the Primates and Exarchs to the Patriarchs hereafter to be spoken of. But that in imitation of the Vicars, the Office and Dignity of Primates was Instituted, seemeth to some most demonstrable from this, that before the time of

Primates Superior to Archbishops or Metropolitans.

E 2

Constantine

Constantine there are no Testimonies nor Footsteps of any Jurisdiction of those Vicars, neither in Ecclesiastical Writers any mention of Primates, Enarchs or Dioceffes in this Sense: All Histories, Councils, that of Nice give only Priority of place to the Bishops of Rome; Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem own no Bishops above Metropolitans, no Dioceffes above Provinces, no Dioceffan Councils above Provincial. But presently upon the Institution of the Vicars, and a distinction of their Dioceffes from Provinces, there is most frequent mention made of Enarchs, Primates, Dioceffes, and Dioceffan Councils in Ecclesiastical Authors; so that the first Constantinopolitan Council speaks of them as already made and confirmed. These Primates were called Primates Patriarchales, but in a strict Sense are not to be confounded with Patriarchs.

Patriarchs chosen in the Church.

17. The Jews had their Patriarchs, to whom were subject all the Synagogues in the World, which so far owned their subjection, that they paid them Tribute, as appears from the (a) Code of Theodosius. This Tribute was called (b) Apostole, and such as gathered it Apostoli, whose Office it was to execute the Commands of these Patriarchs, the Original of whom is to be derived no higher than the Destruction of Jerusalem, and the Universal Captivity of that Nation. The Monanists it seems, in imitation of them, had also their Patriarch, as we learn from (c) St. Jerome, as some (d) observe from Herodotus, that the Heathen Agyptians called their Chief Priest by that Name, of whom is to be understood that Saying of (e) Hadrian in Vopiscus, and neither of a Christian Patriarch nor the Jewish, as some would have it. The Christian was of much a later Date, though the Romanists from some forged Writings will needs have them Infructed and Seated by the Prince of the Apostles. If they speak by way of Anticipation, and will contend that such Sees as were first appointed by the Apostles, came to be afterwards Patriarchal; we shall not at all contend, that the Patriarchal Sees (though not as Patriarchal) were by Apostolical appointment. But the Patriarchs themselves were of a later Date than the first Nicene Council, no mention being made of them by any Christian Writer of Credit, till about or after the Death of Constantine. As for the Epistles of Anacletus Bishop of Rome, from whom the Cardinal Annalist, and others, would prove the Series of the first three Patriarchal Sees, and the Supremacy of the Roman; it and all the rest of the Epistles of the old Popes are Spurious, being unknown to the World before the Ninth Century, and then such were, as they are vented out of Spain into Europe, as (f) many have sufficiently evinced. Of as small Credit are the Councils held under them: And the Sixth Canon of the Nicene Council, though it takes care for the Power and Precedence of those Bishops of Alexandria and Antioch, conforming them to him of Rome; yet doth it not speak of them under the Name and Title of Patriarchs, but as Metropolitans or Primates.

In Imitation of the Præfetti Prætorii.

Five in all.

18. Patriarchs therefore seem to have been so named and obeyed, in Imitation of the Præfetti Prætorii, though there be no full conformity as to their number, there being at first but Three of them, and Four of the later. The first Three were the Metropolitans of Rome, Antioch and Alexandria, the precise time of whose Promotion is not known. Afterwards the Metropolitan of Constantinople by the Decrees of the Councils of Constantinople and Chalcedon obtained that Dignity as most congruous to that Imperial Seat, which had the Title and (a) Privileges of New Rome. After this the Bishop of Jerusalem was dignified with the same Title, who had anciently been graced with particular Respect and Honour, yet so that the Bishop of Cæsarea (to unwilling were the Ancient Fathers to change the Customs of the Church) retained all Rights and Privileges of Metropolitan, which the Nicene Council also confirmed. But at length Favour prevailed for this most Ancient Church, which as a (b) Romanist observes, is styled by Theodoret, Mother of all Churches, and by Juliane the Emperor, Mother of the Christian Name and Profession; upon this account, that from Her all other Churches were diffused throughout the World. And after many endeavours used, this Honour was obtained for her, as we read in the Acts of the Council of Chalcedon, notwithstanding the violent resistance of Leo the Great, Bishop of Rome, who, as one says, alluding to the Speech of Lysander, and that Popes Name, to the Lyons slain fewed the Foxes, and omitted nothing that might hinder the Promotion of those two Sees; inasmuch that some grounding their Opinion on a place in Gulielmus Tyrius, have thought that Dignity was not Established and Confirmed to Jerusalem before the Fifth Council in the time of Justinian.

19. Such

The Church and State alike in its Government.

The Eastern Division of the Church.

The Western.

19. Such was the Polity of the Ancient Church, conformable as to place and Dignity with that of the State, then which a more Commodious could not be invented, both for preserving Peace, and safe to every Bishop his proper Jurisdiction. But we shall see how the Partition of Dioceffes and Provinces agreed. As the Roman Empire was divided into two general Parts or Worlds (so (a) sometimes they styled them) so was the Church distinguished generally into Eastern and Western. As in the East there were Seven Dioceffes, and Six in the West, besides the Præfecture of Rome, in like manner the Church had of old its Fourteen Dioceffes. Those of Eastern both Church and Empire were, first Egypt, the Provinces whereof, as also those of Libya, Thebaïs and Pentapolis, were subject to the Patriarch of Alexandria. 2. The East more particularly is called, subject to the Patriarch of Antioch. 3. Asiana, whose Provinces belonged first to the Primate of Ephesus, afterward to the Constantinopolitan Patriarch. 4. Pontica the Metropolis whereof was Cæsarea. 5. Thracia, which with its Provinces Greece, Achaia, and others, were under the Inspection anciently of the Bishop of Thessalonica as Primate of the Dioceffes, afterward subject to the Patriarch of Constantinople. 6. Macedonia. 7. Dacia.

20. In the West we also found Seven Dioceffes. Hereof the first was the Roman, which contained the * Suburbicarian Provinces, subject in Civil Matters to the Emperours Vicar, in Ecclesiastical to the Roman Patriarch, and are in any wife to be distinguished from the Provinces of Italy, and were Ten in number: Three Islands, Sicily, Corfica and Sardinia, with Seven others in that Tract of Italy lying on the East and South, as 4. Campania, 5. Tuscia, 6. Picennum Suburbicarium, 7. Apulia and Calabria, 8. Brutium, 9. Samnium, and 10. Valeria, all which were subject to the Roman Patriarch, and Constituted his proper and peculiar Dioceffes, and extended no farther Westward than the River Magra, the limit of Etruria, and that called Asius (but Efs by Pliny and Blondus) not far from Aucona, which manifestly appears in that one part of Picennum is called Picennum Suburbicarium, and the other Annonarium; so that in that Country the Suburbicarian Provinces were terminated. The Second Dioceffes of the West, was the Italian, containing Seven other Provinces of Italy, viz. Venetia with Utria, Æmilia, Liguria, Flaminia with Picennum Annonarium, and Rhetia Secunda, all which in Civil things obeyed their Vicar, and in Ecclesiastical the Metropolitan of Milaine; in which respect this City is called by St. Athanasius the Metropolis of Italy, as Rome of the Roman Jurisdiction. The Third Dioceffes, the African, wherein sometime were numbered more than Two hundred Bishops and several Metropolitans, all which with their Provinces, were subject to the Bishop of Carthage as their Primate. The Fourth Illyrium, which formerly had its Primate and Provinces, but was afterwards subjected to the Patriarch of Constantinople. The Fifth Gall, which once owned Augusta Treverorum or Triers for its Metropolis, and the Bishop of Triers for its Primate, but thence transferred the Dignity to Arles. The Sixth Spain, the Metropolis whereof Hispalis seems first to have been, but afterwards, together with the Royal Seat, the Dignity was transferred to Toledo. The Seventh Britains, in the Plural number also, the Metropolis of which was anciently Lork as it is conjectured, where the Emperours, when in this Country, resided. But many agreed, this Honour was conferred on Canterbury, the Bishop whereof is Primate, or (to use the words of (a) Malmesbury, and the Gloss (b) of the Canon Law) Patriarch of the whole Dioceffes; and in a sorer Expression alterius orbis Papa, Pope of another World. Thus was anciently the Church divided into Dioceffes, according to the Form of the Empire, much altered in following Ages by Emperours and Councils, as we may see hereafter, especially by the Roman Patriarch after his Inroad and Usurpation; so that the Marks of those ancient Dioceffes are hardly to be found out, or the Footsteps of their Patriarchs and Primates not easily discovered.

21. Thus we see the Church its Polity, in reference to the Division of Places under their several sorts of Prelates. Now must we consider their Power, and so descend to inferior Ministers. The Patriarchs Power was great in the Creation of Metropolitans and Bishops. From Metropolitans Appeal lay to his Tribunal; he appointed Judges, and took cognizance of their Causes, called Synods of his Dioceffes, and decided other great and weighty Affairs. Of all these Five the Roman, because of the Quality and Antiquity of the City, was first in Order, but in Dignity and Jurisdiction Collateral, not Superior. For the Nicene Council gives as much Power and Authority to him of Alexandria

Confule Dertorium ubi supra. Et Marimum.

iii

in Egypt, Lybia and Pentapolis, as the Roman had over the Suburbicarian Provinces, and Justinian the Emperor ordained that the Bishop of Justiniana Prima in Pannonia Secunda, should have the same Right and Privileges over the Bishops, subject to him, as the Roman Pope had over the Bishops within his jurisdiction; and on the Patriarch of Constantinople, were conferred equal privileges; as his City was advanced to the same Dignity with Rome, though the Elder in order preceded the Younger. As for the Titles given to the Patriarch of Rome, however Glorious they may seem to some, and to portend some Principality, Jurisdiction and Power over others, yet are found but common to him with others. Great are the Epithetes given to St. Peter, from whom his Holyness would derive his Pedigree; yet as great are given to St. Paul, his Colleague. "Is St. Peter called head of the Church? so are all the Apostles. Is he styled Pontifex or Bishop of the Church? so is St. Paul of the whole World: Who hath also as good reason to be called Pilot, and Governor of the whole World, as one Ship, and Pilot of the Church stronger and more solid then Peter; who was shaken grievously by Temptation, both to deny and dissemble. Had St. Peter the care and charge of the whole Church? so had St. Paul of the whole World, which to present unto God, so as it might be acceptable to him was his great endeavour. If Peter be said to have had absolute and most ample power over the Church, so had all the Apostles, as the Romanists themselves confess; (f) was Peter called Prince of the Apostles? so also was Paul. (g) All the Apostles were (h) Petras as well as he: St. Paul saith himself he was (i) no thing inferior to the chiefest Apostles. And therefore with good reason doth St. Cyprian affirm that all the (k) Apostles were furnished with equal Consortship and Authority.

21. No Title of Honour was anciently given to the Bishop of Rome, but the same was also bestowed upon others. Is he called Papa or Pope, so is also (a) St. Augustine, and this Title was anciently common to all Bishops, as those indifferently conversant in Antiquity do know: But as the word Tyrannus was once (b) common to all Kings, but afterwards through the insolence of some particular Persons became proper to such whom the Modern signification doth most concern, so came this Title to be challenged in later Ages, and yielded to the Roman Usurper; he is styled Pater Patrum and Episcopus Episcoporum, which Honour (c) Tertullian grudgeth him; so is Lupus the Bishop of Gall by (d) Sidonius, as (e) Magnus the Bishop of Trier, Culmen honorificum, and Patrum Pater Archacerdos. In general Councils (f) John Bishop of Hierusalem, (g) Sergius of Constantinople, By Theodore Balsamon, (h) Marek Bishop of Alexandria are called Patres Patrum, as indeed all not only Patriarchs but even Arch-Bishops and Metropolitans, because set over many Bishops are called both Patres Patrum and Episcopi Episcoporum. We grant the Bishop of Rome had not only the Dignity of Patriarch but is also styled Patriarchum Episcopus, Bishop of Patriarchs; but so might in some sense, not only he, but all other Patriarchs; to whom Metropolitans were subject, who because they presided over many Bishops or Fathers; therefore were anciently called Patriarchs.

23. He of Rome is styled Summus Sacerdos, Pontifex Maximus and Princeps Sacerdotum: High Priest, greatest Pontifex and Prince of Priests; so is (a) St. Athanasius called Chief Priest of Chief Priests; (b) Felix said to have overthrown the Government of Chief Priest-hood; the Fathers in the Council of Orleans styled (c) Summi Antistites, and others (d) elsewhere Pontifices in summo sacerdotio Constituti, as the Bishop of Antioch and he of Alexandria is termed by (e) Rabanus, Summus Episcopus, Princeps Episcoporum, and Pontifex Maximus. By Gelasius every Bishop is called Summus Sacerdos, and in old time that Title and the other of Summus Pontifex was ordinary and common, as that of Princeps Sacerdotum to a Metropolitan, order being taken in the (f) Council of Carthage that for the time to come, none should be called either Princeps Sacerdotum or Summus Sacerdos, but only the Bishop of the first See. Farther as he assumeth the Title of Christi Vicar, this is applied by a (g) Father to all Bishops; if he be termed Pillar of the Church so is (h) Athanasius by Nazianzen, and all (i) Bishops by a Pope himself, as all Bishops and Preachers are called by Gregory the Foundation of the Church. He had the Name of Head of the Church, but St. Athanasius is also styled by (k) Basil head of all; and is said by Nazianzen, to have given Laws to the World: Venantius the Poet giveth the Epithets of Splendor, Apex fidei, caput Pontificum to Nicetus of Trier. Constantinople is by Chrysostome called Metropolis of the whole World, by Nicetas, Queen of Cities, and by Justinian, of all the Cities the Head.

24. All

24. All Bishops, as well as he, are termed (a) Pastors of Christs Sheep, (b) Athanasius Governor of Gods House, of whom Nazianzen Writes that the Praefect, or Government of the universal World, was intrusted with him; St. Cyprian Doctor of all Christians, and (c) Oracle of the universal Church, and (d) Successor of the Apostles, as all Bishops are who were seated in their places, throughout the World, and received the Titles of (e) Spokes of the Church. He takes the Title of Universal or Oecumenical Patriarch, and so was styled John of Jerusalem by the whole (f) Constantinopolitan Synode, as Menas often by a (g) General Council, and by (h) Justinian the Emperor, so was Sergius Bishop of Constantinople, in the (i) sixth general Council; and Tharastus in the (k) Second held at Nice, and not only by the Bishops of the East, but by (l) Hadrian of Rome himself. To all Bishops indeed, (m) care of the universal Church is committed by Christ; as several Popes confess, and therefore by Argument drawn from the (n) greatest Champion of their Usurpation, they are Universal Bishops in a soter sense: But in any other, that one should have Jurisdiction and Authority over all the rest; neither the Roman nor any other can challenge that Title.

25. Neither was he in most Ancient Times, accounted such an Oracle of Faith, as to be reckoned Master of East and West; as appeareth from St. Cyprian, who refused to be instructed by him; in the Case of Re-baptizing, from Familianus and the whole Eastern Church in the same cause, which call him proud Fool and a Counterfeit Christian: From St. Irenaeus and Polycarpe in the Controversie about Easter, who accuse him of rashness and perverseness; such an Oracle was he accounted by the Africans in the time of St. Augustine, when endeavouring to establish his Supremacy by the way of Appeal in those Provinces, he was branded by them with Pride and Fraud in Corrupting, and Perfidiousness in violating the Nicene Canons. Such was the Infallibility esteemed, when Liberius was taxed for Arianism, Vigilantius for Nestorianism, and Honorius for the Heretic of the Monothelites, by the whole Church; when Hildebrand for his Doctrine of deposing Kings, and absolving Subjects from their Allegiance, was by all good Men and several Councils esteemed a Violator of all Divine and Humane Laws, as Master of Perfidiousness and Perjury, a Tyrant and even Antichrist himself; when Leo the Tenth his opinion of his own Holyness, his Superiority above a Council, was censured as Heretical, by all Orthodox Men, and for 1400. Years none had ever doubted of the contrary: What Authority he had in ancient Times, either in promoting or degrading his fellow Patriarchs, we may see clearly in the Case of the Patriarchate of Constantinople, which notwithstanding the utmost endeavours of Leo, was confirmed by a general Council; in that of Meletius Bishop of Antioch (an admirable Person if Basil may be believed) whom Damasus of Rome had by his Sentence deprived, which Sentence was rejected by the second general Council; and in that of Athanasius, who was not restored after his several Banishments and Persecutions by the Bishop of Rome, (as Sozomen falsely Writes of Julius) but by Imperial orders, and the judgment of the Council of Sardis; how great an esteem the ancient Fathers had for his Infallibility or Authority we find when Cyprian and Formilian being rebuked by Stephen, they reply upon him, as arrogant Fool and a Counterfeit Christian; when the Eastern Bishops rebuked by Julius Excommunicate, deprive him, and by their Letters, signify to all other Bishops that they neither admit him into Communion, Write to him, or receive any Letters from him: When Dioscorus the Alexandrian Patriarch, censured (and justly) by Leo, durst give sentence against, and Excommunicate him; when Vigilantius, whilst Orthodox was Synodically Excommunicated by the African Bishops, and when he returned to be a Defender and Patron of the three Chapters, was condemned and Anathematized as an Heretic, by the fifth general Council: Infinite were examples in this kind. Well might the Roman Patriarch have precedence in order, as agreeable to the Dignity of the City, which though she was Queen of the Empire, yet could not create him any Title to one single (not to say a Triple) Crown.

26. To (a) Patriarchs only, after the Emperours, was that Royal Ceremony of having Fire or Lights carried before them, an ancient Custom in the time of Balsamon, and taken first out of Persia. Other Ensigns of Honour they had, Patriarchal pri- which became afterwards common to the Metropolitans, as Crosses, Palls, &c. Next to the Patriarch was the Primate, and although not in Dignity, yet in Power equal to him, if we believe (b) Gratian; but this opinion seemeth to have proceeded from the ambiguity and promiscuous use of the Words, which in this Controversie of Church Government hath begot strange Errors and Contentions,

That of Rome but equal, not superior to the other four.

Their Titles of Honour the same.

His pretence of Supremacy rejected by all.

Influence of Power.

Ensigns of Honour pay'd them to Patriarchs.

(a) Cyprian
(b) Naz. O.
(c) Basil.
(d) Basil.
(e) Basil.
(f) Basil.
(g) Basil.
(h) Basil.
(i) Basil.
(k) Basil.
(l) Basil.
(m) Basil.
(n) Basil.
(o) Basil.
(p) Basil.
(q) Basil.
(r) Basil.
(s) Basil.
(t) Basil.
(u) Basil.
(v) Basil.
(w) Basil.
(x) Basil.
(y) Basil.
(z) Basil.

as will be seen hereafter ; seeing there were other Primates besides the five Patriarchs, who owed some sort of obedience to them receiving, and performing their orders in assembling Councils and other business. And as these Primates were distinguished from Patriarchs, properly so called, so also Constituted a peculiar Degree and Dignity above other Metropolitans ; notwithstanding what some Object from an Epistle of Pope Boniface, that two Provinces could not be subject to one and the same Person : For not to make use of what might be objected against these Epistles ; this expression may well be admitted in this sense, that no one Person could so preside over two Provinces, as to exercise the Function of a Metropolitan in any other than his own Province : For when Primates were ordained any where, care was taken to preserve the Rights of Metropolitans inviolate, as appears from several examples. But though Presidents should fail in this Case, yet the nature of the thing doth evidently demonstrate it : For if the Primate should exercise the office proper to a Metropolitan, what need were there of a Metropolitan ? if a Metropolitan that of a Bishop in his Province, what need were there of a Bishop ? Therefore the Bishop his Paræcia is subject to him in a certain and peculiar manner, wherein it is not subject to a Metropolitan : The Cases of Visitation, Appeal, and others Canonical excepted, otherwise there would be Bishop, but all Bishops, Vicars, or Vicegerents only of Metropolitans ; but as St. Cyprian faith, there is one Bishoprick, whereof all are partakers in Solidum : So is a Province in so peculiar a manner, subject to a Metropolitan, as not to a Primate, except in Cases expressed in Law ; and whatsoever a Metropolitan may do in his Province, a Primate may not ; else there would be no Metropolitans, but all Vicegerents of Primates. And such is the case of a Patriarch, in reference to that of Primates ; the several Rights Patriarchal, Exarchal, Metropolitan and Episcopal being distinct and several, whereof none could be justly invaded : The Patriarch in his own Paræcia exercise Episcopal jurisdiction ; visited those under him, assigned them Governours, and did other matters too long to be recited : In his own Province he had Metropolitan jurisdiction, not Episcopal ; in his Dioceses Exarchal or that of a Primate, not Metropolitan nor Episcopal ; in his Patriarchate, he had Patriarchal, not Exarchal, Metropolitan or Episcopal.

27. To Primates therefore first, this is observed to have been due as a Privilege to approve and confirm Bishops and Metropolitans Canonically Elected. Secondly, They examined and passed judgment on such matters as had been determined and judged in Provincial Synods. For from Provincial Synods, appeal lay to Primates ; and Thirdly, To them belonged the Celebration of Diocesan Councils, summoned out of several Provinces, Primates having Authority, when they judged it convenient to make such Assemblies. Fourthly, They were appointed as Watch-men in so many Watch-Towers ; and Overseers in the Name of the Patriarch, to inquire and observe, whether Ecclesiastical Discipline was diligently observed ; and affording, an helping and healing hand where it was wanted. Infomuch, that they had not only power of calling Synods of several Provinces, but in urgent Affairs, to send for Bishops out of divers Provinces, and with them to debate and settle Matters ; which was given to the Bishop of Arles, by ancient custom in the days of Gregory the Great, who defines twelve to be a complete number of such Assistants. Fifthly, They gave Certificates of Letters, commendatory to all Clerks, Metropolitans and Bishops, travelling out of their Dioceses ; by virtue whereof they might be received into Communion with other Churches. That those things were always and universally true cannot be said, but often or for the most part, and never just except the Authority of Princes was therein duly considered ; who, besides their undoubted right of being nursing Fathers to the Church, are owned by those * that would rather place that honour in the Bishop of Rome, as Author of new Sees in the time even of Justinian.

28. It appears from the Preface to (a) one of the Emperours Constitutions, that this Power then resided in Princes, to change and make new Sees of Metropolitans, the Authority of whom, we are next to consider : of Metropolitans there were two sorts, in latter times, one, which was subject to the Primate, and another that acknowledged no Subjection ; such those Arch-Bishops accounted themselves, that were not subject to any Primate. And such were all the Metropolitans of Africa, who were called Primates, but never Exarchs ; as (b) one observes, as if this name was only proper to the Primates of Dioceses (not of Provinces) such as Pythion, the Bishop of Carthage, who by (c) Leo the Ninth, is stiled Maximus Africae Metropolitanus, the greatest Metropolitan of Africa : And yet (d) Justinian glorifies that he had set that Bishop over all Africa, and the same Person observes, that

Consult Moximus Exar.
23, & 24. l. 1.

Idem ibid.

* Filiscus ex Domestris Cla-matis Balba-mone & alia
l. de sac. Epist.
anthe. C. 7.

(a) Novell.

(b) Hieronymus Pythion. Dia-conus.

(c) Epist. 4.

(d) Novell.

he rather restored him to his Dignity, after the Vandals were expelled that Country, than bestowed any new honour on that See ; so that if the other Bishops were subject to him, they must be subject to him not as a Patriarch, but a Primate, and therefore could not properly and strictly be stiled Primates themselves : However, if they owned no subjection to Primates, their Power though not their Dignity, was suitable to theirs. If under their inspection their jurisdiction was subordinate to theirs, as that of the Primates to the Patriarchs in matters of Synods, Appeals, and other matters, lyable to the cognizance of Superiours ; they presiding in the manner and Governing those Arch-Bishops and Bishops, that were within the limits of their Metropolitan jurisdiction.

29. For in the Greek or Eastern Church, it's manifest that for some time there was a distinction betwixt Metropolitans and Arch-Bishops, who Constituted a peculiar Rank or Order betwixt them and Bishops. And for that time the Arch-Bishop was within the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan : At length those Arch-Bishops were exempted from their power, and ordained by the Patriarch, as appears from Balsamon and the Notitia of Metropolitans and Arch-Bishops subject to the Constantinopolitan Patriarch, to whom Innocent the Third Bishop of Rome, after Constantinople was subjected to the Latins willingly ascribes that Office. But excepting this case of the Greeks, Arch-Bishops were the same with Metropolitans, having the same power of Ordination, assembling Synods, and receiving Appeals within their respective Provinces, in Privilege and Authority they were really such : for we find that in the East towards the decay of the Empire, there were some called Arch-Bishops, who had no jurisdiction over other Bishops, merely titular, and so named only because they had honour and precedence before their fellow Bishops of the same Province.

30. The Power, Office, and Authority of a Bishop (wherein all those sorts agree) being in power and jurisdiction, not in order distinct from one another) is most weighty and considerable, most controverted, and of late impugned. At first the Presbyters as we said under the Apostles in common care and Council Governed the Church ; but by degrees necessity of Peace and Order brought the Government upon one mans shoulders, though supported by the assistance of others ; for what St. (a) Cyprian faith of after times, may well be applied to the most Primitive, that thence Heresies and Schisms arose, because Gods Priests was not obeyed, and some one was not thought of, who for a time should be Judge of the Church, in the room of Christ ; by which words he means not the Bishop of Rome, as some vainly imagine but himself.

31. The most certain note of difference betwixt Bishops and Presbyters, this became, that in every City were several or many Presbyters, but only one Bishop, except any by force intruded and made a Schism, or the Bishop by reason of Sickness or Age, was necessitated to have an assistant ; who yet in his preience was of no Authority. Another note and a part of his power was imposition of hands upon Bishops and Presbyters, called Consecration and Ordination, which (b) St. Jerome, otherwise thought no friend, makes peculiar to him in the most Primitive times, although in his own, the Cannons had given much more authority to a Bishop, in this duty, the Presbyters present (at the Ordination of a Presbyter) as appeareth from the Fourth Carthaginian Council, were to lay their hands also on the Head of the Ordained, whilst the Bishop held his thereon, and blessed the Party, rather in testimony of their consent, than as partakers in the Office of Consecration, which the Church believed to proper to Bishops, that Presbyters of themselves could not perform, and therefore (c) declare such as was performed by them as null, nay although the (d) Bishop imposed his hands because a Presbyter read the words of Consecration ; Sometimes it happened that a Bishop had (e) but one Presbyter under him, who might for just cause be removed elsewhere, yet that this Bishop having not a Presbyter left, might ordain others if he would, and if he could make none of his own, might have elsewhere some to ordain according to the number he had lost : Whereby it appears that a Bishop though he had not a Presbyter at all to Celebrate the Office of Ordination with him, might alone by himself either ordain his own Clerks, or those procured from other places : All Laws Ecclesiastical, and Civil, which have been made against the Corruptions in ordaining Priests and Deacons, speak in the singular number of one, not in the plural of many ; as pointing at the Bishop as the Agent, who if any offence against the Cannons was committed, was ever punished ; nor the Chalced. conc.

can. 12. vide
Moximus p. 77.
C. 217. Ber-tramus pith.
diatriba. l. 2.

(a) Lib. 1.
Ep. 3.

(b) Al. Eusebium. Quisda-vis scriptis Ordinationis Episcopos, quod Presbyter non facit.

(c) Albas.
Ap. 2. in tit.
Presb. Marius ad Causas & Philolog.

(d) Concil.
Nipol. can. 4.
(e) Fide Concil. Affri-can. c. 56. &
Carthag. c. 3.
45.

as will be seen hereafter ; seeing there were other Primates besides the five Patriarchs, who owed some sort of obedience to them, receiving, and performing their orders in assembling Councils and other business. And as these Primates were distinguished from Patriarchs, properly so called, so also Constituted a peculiar Degree and Dignity above other Metropolitans ; notwithstanding that some Object from an Epistle of Pope Boniface, that two Provinces could not be subject to one and the same Person : For not to make use of what might be objected against these Epistles ; this expression may well be admitted in this sense, that no one Person could so preside over two Provinces, as to exercise the Function of a Metropolitan in any other than his own Province : For when Primates were ordained any where, care was taken to preserve the Rights of Metropolitans inviolate, as appears from several examples. But though Presidents should fail in this Case, yet the nature of the thing doth evidently demonstrate it : For if the Primate should exercise the office proper to a Metropolitan, what need were there of a Metropolitan ? if a Metropolitan that of a Bishop in his Province, what need were there of a Bishop ? Therefore the Bishop his Paræcia is subject to him in a certain and peculiar manner, wherein it is not subject to a Metropolitan : The Cases of Visitation, Appeal, and others Canonical excepted, otherwise there would be Bishop, but all Bishops, Vicars, or Vicegerents only of Metropolitans ; but as St. Cyprian faith, there is one Bishopric, whereof all are partakers in Solidum : So is a Province in so peculiar a manner, subject to a Metropolitan, as not to a Primate, except in Cases expressed in Law ; and whatsoever a Metropolitan may do in his Province, a Primate may not ; else there would be no Metropolitans, but all Vicegerents of Primates. And such is the case of a Patriarch, in reference to that of Primates ; the several Rights Patriarchal, Exarchial, Metropolitan and Episcopal being distinct and several, whereof none could be justly invaded : The Patriarch in his own Paræcia exercise Episcopal jurisdiction ; visited those under him, assigned them Governours, and did other matters too long to be recited : In his own Province he had Metropolitan jurisdiction, not Episcopal ; in his Diocess Exarchial or that of a Primate, not Metropolitan nor Episcopal ; in his Patriarchate, he had Patriarchal, not Exarchial, Metropolitan or Episcopal.

27. To Primates therefore first, this is observed to have been due as a Privilege to approve and confirm Bishops and Metropolitans Canonically Elected. Secondly, They examined and passed judgment on such matters as had been determined and judged in Provincial Synods. For from Provincial Synods, appeal lay to Primates ; and Thirdly, To them belonged the Celebration of Diocesan Councils, summoned out of several Provinces, Primates having Authority, when they judged it convenient, to make such Assemblies. Fourthly, They were appointed as Watch-men in so many Watch-Towers ; and Overseers in the Name of the Patriarch, to inquire and observe, whether Ecclesiastical Discipline was diligently observed ; and affording, an helping and healing hand where it was wanted. Inasmuch, that they had not only power of calling Synods of several Provinces, but in urgent Affairs, to send for Bishops out of divers Provinces, and with them to debate and settle Matters ; which was given to the Bishop of Arles, by ancient custom in the days of Gregory the Great, who defines twelve to be a complet number of such Assistants. Fifthly, They gave Certificates of Letters, commendatory to all Clerks, Metropolitans and Bishops, travelling out of their Diocess ; by virtue whereof they might be received into Communion with other Churches. That those things were always and universally true cannot be said, but often or for the most part, and never just except the Authority of Princes was therein duly considered ; who, besides their undoubted right of being nursing Fathers to the Church, are owned by those * that would rather place that honour in the Bishop of Rome, as Author of new Sees in the time even of Justinian.

28. It appears from the Preface to (a) one of the Emperours Constitutions, that this Power then resided in Princes, to change and make new Sees of Metropolitans, the Authority of whom, we are next to consider : of Metropolitans there were two sorts, in latter times, one, which was subject to the Primate, and another that acknowledged no Subjection ; such those Arch-Bishops accounted themselves, that were not subject to any Primate. And such were all the Metropolitans of Africa, who were called Primates, but never Exarchs ; as (b) one observes, as if this name was only proper to the Primates of Diocesses (not of Provinces) such as Pytham. Dia- the Bishop of Carthage, who by (c) Leo the Ninth, is stiled Maximus Africa. (d) Metropolitans, the greatest Metropolitan of Africa : And yet (d) Justinian glories that he had set that Bishop over all Africa, and the same Person observes, that he rather restored him to his Dignity, after the Vandals were expelled that Country, than bestowed any new honour on that See ; so that if the other Bishops were subject to him, they must be subject to him not as a Patriarch, but a Primate, and therefore could not properly and strictly be stiled Primates themselves : However, if they owned no subjection to Primates, their Power though not their Dignity, was suitable to theirs. If under their inspection their jurisdiction was subordinate to theirs, as that of the Primates to the Patriarchs in matters of Synods, Appeals, and other matters, lyable to the cognizance of Superiours ; they presiding in the manner and Governing those Arch-Bishops and Bishops, that were within the limits of their Metropolitan jurisdiction.

29. For in the Greek or Eastern Church, it's manifest that for some time there was a distinction betwixt Metropolitans and Arch-bishops, who Constituted a peculiar Rank or Order betwixt them and Bishops. And for that time the Arch-Bishop was within the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan : At length those Arch-Bishops were exempted from their power, and ordained by the Patriarch, as appears from Balsamon and the Notitia of Metropolitans and Arch-Bishops subject to the Constantinopolitan Patriarch, to whom Innocent the Third Bishop of Rome, after Constantinople was subjected to the Latins willingly ascribes that Office. But excepting this case of the Greeks, Arch-bishops were the same with Metropolitans, having the same power of Ordination, assembling Synods, and receiving Appeals within their respective Provinces, if in Privilege and Authority they were really such ; for we find that in the East towards the decay of the Empire, there were some called Arch-bishops, who had no jurisdiction over other Bishops, merely titular, and so named only because they had honour and precedence before their fellow Bishops of the same Province.

30. The Power, Office, and Authority of a Bishop (wherein all those sorts agree) being in power and jurisdiction, not in order distinct from one another) is most weighty and considerable, most controverted, and of late impugned. At first the Presbyters as we said under the Apostles in common care and Council Governed the Church ; but by degrees necessity of Peace and Order brought the Government upon one mans shoulders, though supported by the assistance of others ; for what St. (a) Cyprian faith of after times, may well be applied to the most Primitive, that thence Hereses and Schisms arose, because Gods Priests was not obeyed, and some one was not thought of, who for a time should be Judge of the Church, in the room of Christ ; by which words he means not the Bishop of Rome, as some vainly imagine but himself.

31. The most certain note of difference betwixt Bishops and Presbyters, this became, that in every City were several or many Presbyters, but only one Bishop, except any by force intruded and made a Schism, or the Bishop by reason of Sickness or Age, was necessitated to have an assistant ; who yet in his presence was of no Authority. Another note and a part of his power was imposition of hands upon Bishops and Presbyters, called Consecration and Ordination, which (b) St. Jerome, otherwise thought no friend, makes peculiar to him in the most Primitive times, although in his own, the Cannons had given much more authority to a Bishop, in this duty, the Presbyters present (at the Ordination of a Presbyter) as appeareth from the Fourth Carthaginian Council, were to lay their hands also on the Head of the Ordained, whilst the Bishop held his thereon, and blessed the Party, rather in testimony of their consent, than as partakers in the Office of Consecration, which the Church believed to proper to Bishops, that Presbyters of themselves could not perform, and therefore (c) declare such as was performed by them as null, nay although the (d) Bishop imposed his hands because a Presbyter read the words of Consecration ; Sometimes it happened that a Bishop had (e) but one Presbyter under him, who might for just cause be removed elsewhere, yet that this Bishop having not a Presbyter left, might ordain others if he would, and if he could make none of his own, might have elsewhere some to ordain according to the number he had lost : Whereby it appears that a Bishop though he had not a Presbyter at all to Celebrate the Office of Ordination with him, might alone by himself either ordain his own Clerks, or those procured from other places : All Laws Ecclesiastical, and Civil, which have been made against the Corruptions in ordaining Priests and Deacons, speak in the singular number of one, not in the plural of many ; as pointing at the Bishop as the Agent, who if any offence against the Cannons was committed, was ever punished ; not the

F Pres-

Confess Meritum Extr.
23. & 24. l. 1.

Titular Metropolitans.

The Power, Office and Authority of Bishops in the Church.

idem ibid.

Consecration and Ordination being peculiar to them.

* Filescum ex Demetrio Chomatris Balsamon & alia l. de sac. Epist. author. G. 7.

(a) Novel.

(b) Barbarius (c) Epist. 4. (d) Novel.

131.

Chalcid. rem.
con. 12. vide
Meritum p. 77.
& 217. Barbarius p. 118.
dist. 2. c. 3.

(a) Lib. 1.
Ep. 3.

(b) Ad Eusebium Quidfa-cit excepta
Ordinatione Episcopis, quod Presbyter non facit.

(c) Athas.
Ap. 2. in tit.
Presb. Maris ad
Caes. & Philaga.

(d) Council
Hypat. Can. 4.
(e) Fide
Council. Affr.
con. c. 56. &
Carthag. 3. c.

Patriarchal, Exarchial, Metropolitan, Episcopal Jurisdiction distinct.

The Privilege and power of Primates in the Church.

The Authority of Metropolitans.

Two Sorts of them.

Presbyters who were not parties, but only Accessories or Witnesses to the Principal.

32. From the end of their Institution (which was to prevent Schisms, and establish Power and Peace in the Church) we may well gather, that besides the power of Ordination, they had the other Privileges (and Tasks) by St. Paul conferred on Timothy and Titus, viz. Of examining, proving and removing such Presbyters as were guilty of unsound Doctrine, and corrupt Manners ; which were to continue till the coming of Christ, not ending with those two, and therefore if belonging to any as their Successors, certainly to Bishops, who presiding in their several Churches, had Pastoral and Fatherly Power over both People and Presbyters under them, according to their Office : They had and have the Authority of the (a) Apostles in the Church, to bind and loose, else how could they punish and Constrain, and without punishment no awe, and without awe, none can preserve Peace and Order. Where they could not be themselves present, to Preach and Administer the Holy Sacraments, they provided for such places, fit and convenient Pastors, that they might be Rightly and Christianly instructed ; took care lest any Heresies, Errors or Dissentions crept up amongst them ; afforded them their Council in doubtful matters, their assistance in difficult, and without troubling the whole Province, put an end to their private Controversies and Contentions, excellent effects of Pastoral Care and Vigilancy. Besides those things that were connative with their Office, succeeding Ages for the same reasons thought fit to enlarge the Bounds of their Power and Privileges ; that all things might be done in Peace, Decency and in Order. Hence came it that by provision of Canons and Custom of the Church, they had many other Prerogatives ; as Reconciliation of Penitents, Confirmation and Imposition of hands on the Baptized, Dedication of Churches and the like : And so great was the power intrusted with them, that (b) no Presbyter could baptize without the Bishops License, nor Preach if he were present, in some places.

33. Nay, as soon as Ecclesiastical Matters came to some Form, Regulation and Order, and the Government by Bishops Priests and Deacons established: (although within their own Dioceses had the sole power of Holy Functions, and (although at the first beginning of Christianity, most things might be common to Presbyters and Bishops) Priests and Deacons might be added to them, to assist them, and be employed according to occasion, and their Abilities by their own right and discretion; so that a Priest might not Baptize nor Administer the Holy Communion, nor Teach nor interpret the Scriptures; de loco Superiore Ecclesie, as St. Auguſtin calls it, or de Cathedra, as St. Ambroſe, as a διδασκαλος or a Doctor (for they were then called, that did it either of their own Authority as Bishops, or was allowed it as Priests, according to the Preaching now in use) without peculiar allowance of the Bishop of that Diocese. In many places Priests were not allowed to do it; it was not then thought to belong to them, but the task of the Bishop alone, because he in his Office representing more immediately Christ himself, was looked upon as him from whom Holy Offices were derived: Which made him to absolute in his Dioceses, that it was accounted great Ufurpation for any Man to challenge any power in Spirituals (as such) but under him, and by his deputation. By reason also of the insufficiency of every Priest, for such an employment, as Preaching or Teaching by way of Authority (such as our Pulpit-preaching) which gave them the Title of διδασκαλοι or Doctors as witnesseth (a) St. Chrysostome, who tells us, that to preach the Gospel of Christ (in this manner) it's well if one or two may be found that are fit: But to baptize, any man that is a Priest, and therefore, saith he to this day we commit Baptizing (which he only mentions, though much more did belong to a Priest, because St. Paul only mentions it in the place he explains) to the weaker, but the business of Preaching or Teaching to them that are more Learned or Wise. And Basilamon upon the Cannons affirms that to teach the People (in this manner) was granted unto Bishops alone, that to teach the People of God, and interpret divine Decrees, was granted by the grace of the holy Spirit unto the Bishops only, and to them that are permitted and Authorized by them.

34. Both by Sozomen and Socrates, we are assured that in Alexandria, the Bishops only did Preach or Teach the People in this manner; and in the numerous African Churches, as witness both St. Jerome and St. Augustin, till Valerius his time (by whom Augustin was consecrated) Priests were not allowed to preach; this Office being accounted one of the Bishop his peculiar privileges) at least not in the presence of their Diocesan : Nay, so strict was the Ancient times in preserving the absoluteness of a Bishop in his Dioceses, that by some Canons such Bishop was punished with Deposition, as presumed to preach in another's Diocese, without Licence first obtained, much less could any Priest belonging to any other Bishop do it, who by the Canonical Laws, could not exercise his Function or Priesthood without approbation, to which were required Letters Commendatory from his Prelate ; in those times Bishops whether at home or abroad, if no lawful impediment (as Age, indisposition of body, urgent occasions, publick business &c.) strong enough to procure Dispensation) did hinder, thought themselves bound to preach every Sunday, and by some Canons of Councils in some places were bound so to do ; which Custom was much followed in the days of our Famous Queen Elizabeth, and especially by that (a) Jewel of Salisbury (one of the greatest Divines, and most pious Bishop that ever lived) who to the intreaties of his Friends, advising him to preach short and more seldom, that he might preach long, was wont to oppose that saying of (b) Vespasian altered and fitted to his own office, Oportet Episcopum Concionantem mori.

CHAP. II. The Constantinopolitan Roman Empire. Constantine. 35

35. But as Bishops, their proper work seemeth to be Government rather than preaching, and so much the Etymology of their name hinteth to us. Indeed being the Ministers of Christ in an especial manner, their office includes all universal Duties ; which as the state of the Church requireth according to its necessities, are to be discharged by them, so that in times of Ignorance they ought to preach, and other whiles as others Comport, behave themselves in their general practice, not only acting themselves, but overseeing also others ; directing and ruling Priests in their Ecclesiastical Functions : By which Acts they are chiefly distinguished from inferior Ministers. Now besides these Episcopi or Bishops, there were Chorepiscopi, so called from the Country or Villages which they Governed. Their original is by some fetcht from Apostolical Institution, as if they were made as Successors to the Seventy Disciples, as Bishops are to the Apostles ; but it's uncertain both what time they began, and when precisely they came to their period. Gratian (a) Pope Damasus telling the Bishops of Africa, that they were then forbidden throughout the World ; but his Successor, Nicolas writes an Epistle to Hosbaldus as Chorepiscopus, so that Sormandis (b) the Jesuit with reason affirms both the Epistles of Damasus and Leo the first, concerning these Chorepiscopi to be spurious, and from Pope Nicolas in his Epistle to Radulphus quotes those words in imitation of the seventy, Chorepiscopi were ordained, concerning whom, who can doubt but they had the Offices of Bishops ? Gratian assigns this difference betwixt them and Bishops, that Bishops could not be ordained but in Cities, but they in Villages ; Bishops granted Letters called Formata or Dimissoria (by which one was exempted from the jurisdiction of his Bishop, which they were wont to be given with great Solemnity) the Chorepiscopi could only grant Letters Commendatory (called also pacifice, granted to Clerks travelling, whereby they were commended, that they might quietly execute their Office in other Dioceses) although the Glois denies they could grant them, and makes them only proper to the Bishops, who also had the right of Consecration, whereas the Chorepiscopi could only confer the lesser orders. That pretended Epistle of Leo, reckons up Ten several things which belong to the Office of Bishops, the Chorepiscopi were not to meddle with. (c) Filescus tells us that, a Bishop being ordained by Hereticks, if afterward he became Catholic, was made Chorepiscopus : But the sort of Priests which we may call puny Bishops (being betwixt a Bishop and a Presbyter) grew out of use by degrees, and Rural (d) Deans came in their room (as it's said.) but with a more restrained power.

36. The next in the order of this Hierarchy, was the Presbyter or Priest, who by direction and under the inspection of the Bishop, Celebrated Divine Service, Administred the Sacraments, and preached Gods Word; of all thofe the Paracous, Parfon or Parifh Priest, is moft confiderable. The rank of Curates (a) is the fame with our Parfons, in French called Curés, faith Gerson, (a) is the next in order to that of Bifhops; it's manifeft, in that the fame Hierarchical duties are incumbent upon them as upon the other, although not in fo excellent a degree: For it's their duty to Purifie thofe committed to their charge by conviction and reproof, to illuminate them by Teaching and Preaching, and to adminifter the Sacraments; and they are bound, if occafion be, as well as Bifhops, to lay down their life for their

Sheep

Sheep; so that when Christ sent abroad the Seventy Disciples, to whom succeed Curates, both according to the opinion of Divines and Lawyers, he committed in effect the same Charge to them as he did to the Apostles. Elsewhere (b) he writeth that this rank of Curates was figured in the old Law by the Levites, that it was instituted by Christ and his Apostles in the very beginning of the Church, which Institution became more evident by the Declarations of Popes, and as well General as Particular Councils. So doth Gerson describe this sort of Ecclesiastical Ministers, and without any Partiality, although being Chancellor of the University of Paris, he was also Curé or Parish Priest of St. John in Grave in the same City, as his Learned Country-man Pilefacus (c) engageth himself to evince.

A Parish Priest described
37. He describes our Paræcus or Parish-Priest, to be one assigned to some certain Churches, as having the oversight of a People, in behalf of which he officiates, which he is obliged to teach, and to administer the Holy Sacraments, and who for so doing ought to be maintained by the Offerings of those that are committed to his charge. Concerning their Original, he supposes certain Priests to have been Ordained at first by St. Peter, as the number of the Faithful increased in Rome, and from the Pontifical History of Pope Damascus, endeavoureth to prove that they were reduced to a certain number by Cletus, and he Prosecutes their History as well to other places as Rome, proving that in most ancient times, Parishes in many Countries were Established. Here let our Reader take notice of the several sorts of Names by which this Priest is called. Sometimes Paræcus and Parochus, sometimes he is said to be a Presbyter, Ordained or Instituted in a Parish or Church, for by the Sixth Canon of the First Council of Chalcedon, no Priest is to be Ordained, but to some certain Place or Church, which Law was indeed of force in the most Primitive times. At Rome it being sometimes requisite to have several Priests in one Church, over them all one was set, who was therefore called Presbyter Cardinalis or Principal Priest, which Title was not confined to the City, but given also to other Priests, whose charge lay in the Country. Sometime he is called Presbyter or Priest simply without any addition; other whiles he is understood by the word Sacerdos, sometimes styled Rector Ecclesie, Proprius Presbyter, Presbyter Parochianus, Presbyter Plebis, and Plebanus, Presbyter Parochianus and Parochialis, Clericus Parochialis, Clericus Localis. And, as in Councils he is distinguished by the name of Presbyter, not seldom, as being more truly so than others under him, so is he called simply Clericus, as Principal or above other Clerks. In more late times we meet with the names of Curio and Curatus, not derived from the antient Roman Curiones, as some have imagined, seeing it was never heard of till those latter Ages, but from the care and sollicitude they ought to have for their Flocks; and it was first brought up by the Cannons of the Gallican Church. We in like manner have the word Persona or Parson peculiar to us in England. And it must not be omitted, that this same Priest is sometimes called Presbyter and Clericus Dioecæsanus.

Their several sorts of Names.
Curator whence.
38. For in the antient Monuments of the Church, it is often found that the words Dioecesis and Paræcia are promiscuously used. Dioecesis sometimes signifies the same thing which we in the present Modern Sense call a Parish, although most commonly by it is meant a Territory of great Extent both in an Ecclesiastical and Civil Sense, as formerly we have observed. By Paræcia (rather to be written ¶ Paræcia) at the beginning of Christian Religion, and not a few Ages after, was not meant a Society or Communion of Neighbours meeting at the same Church, but that which we call now a Diocesis or a Bishoprick. Pilefacus traces it down beyond the Nephews of Charles the Great, as far as Arnulphus the Emperour. This promiscuous use of Names which we find to be very frequent in the Hierarchy, is to be attributed partly to the extent of their signification, many being applicable to the same Person and thing in several respects, partly to the vicissitude of all Humane Affairs, wherein Language hath a very great share, nothing more depending upon the Fancy of the Vulgar; and partly to the Latitude of the Christian Church, which extending it self through all places and Countries, no wonder that it receives diversity of Terms, for we see particular Regions, though of the same Language in gross, yet have several Dialects and Idioms. Notwithstanding the promiscuous use of words, the things themselves are not so hard to be distinguished, but that their diversity may be Dioecesis and Paræcia whence.

† From the Greek paroikia.
discourged discovered by unprejudiced minds, although with that difficulty which ever accompanies matter remote, and of so large a distance.

The Office of a Deacon in the Church.
39. At length we arrive at the lowest step of those Sacred Promotions, and that is the Office of a Deacon. To a Deacon it (a) belonged to assist the Bishop and Priest, and minister in all things concerning the Sacraments of Christ, to receive Offerings, and Preach (or read) the Gospel, the New Testament being delivered to him for this purpose. To him also belonged the Offices of Prayer, writing of the Names of such as were to be Ordained, Baptized, the Dead and Excommunicate. He was wont to exhort unto Prayer, and give notice in the Celebration of Divine Offices, give the usual Blessing, and publish the Festivals of the Church. Such was the Polity of the Antient Primitive Apostolick Church for the main, Ordained and Established by Christ's Apostles, circumstantiated according to the Exigence of Affairs, and that Liberty which our Saviour hath left to his Officers in Matters of Prudence, Decency and Order. And no other sorts of Orders dare we acknowledge of Divine Right; the (b) Romanists themselves confessing that the lesser sorts have no ground in Scripture. Dionysius who calls himself the Areopagite owneth only the Three Orders of Bishops, Priests and Deacons. The Canons that go under the name of the Apostles, reckon but Five, of Bishops, Priests, Deacons, Readers and Chanters. The Master of the Sentences himself confesseth that the Church in succeeding times Ordained Sub-deacons and Acolythi, so that farther the Canons for their number of Nine, nor the Divines for that of Seven, can bring any certain thing out of the best and purest Antiquity. But how these might come in, as also concerning the nature of their Offices, besides concerning the Original and Nature of other Dignities, which the Prudence of latter Ages thought fit to Establish, we shall speak upon occasion in their due and most proper place.

The Salary of the Spiritual Souldiers.
40. But having given a prospect of this stately Primitive Building, it remains to shew, how in an Humane way it was maintained, how these Officers subsisted, what was the Salary of these Spiritual Souldiers, and what strength the Secular Arm afforded to the Spiritual, in the erecting of its Authority and Power. At first all things were common amongst Christians, afterward this Community ceasing, when the cause was removed, this Custom was introduced, that all Contributions towards the Maintenance of the Ministry should be at the disposal of the Bishop. This being divided into Four parts, he himself had one, his Clergy another, the Third was distributed to the Poor, and the Fourth was reserved for the Repairing of Churches; those times of Persecution affording all sorts of Discouragements to needy Persons, and being so far from Contributing to the support of those Religious Edifices, that they rather were employed in Burning the Temples and Worshippers together. At this time Priests were Arbitrarily sent into some certain place or Parish by the Bishop, whose Revenues and Work were not then so great, but that he could easily undergo the trouble of Inspection over his whole Diocesis, inasmuch that all Dues were paid to him, and by him to his Clergy; which Dues, if Credit may be given to an Arabick Canon of the First Nicene Council, were Collected by the care of the Chorepiscopus.

41. After that Christianity was more diffused and settled, and that particular Churches were assigned to Residential Incumbents, a more certain way of Livelihood was obtained, and the Maintenance of the Minister became the Burden of the Soil. When Kings once became Nursing Fathers and Queens Nursing Mothers to the Church, Bishops were presently provided of an ample and certain Revenue. Their Endowments consisted not in Tithes, but in good Temporal and Forable Land bestowed on them by Princes and other Benefactors. This appeareth out of the Code (a) where we find several Laws of Constantine the Great, and other Emperours, down to the time of Justinian himself, both for conferring of Lands upon the Church, and such Lands as should neither be barren, nor burdened with Statute or other Debts of the Exchequer, as also for the preserving of Lands in such manner conferred: and if those Emperours had any occasion to change the Lands of the Church, they would ever (b) allow them such as should be of as good value or better. Parish Priests were maintained by Tithes which were paid even before the Reformation by Constantine, as appeareth from St. Cyprian (c) who adviseth the Clergy of his time, seeing they had

(a) Diff. 25. Persecut.

Domine nobiscum pasci volumus.

(b) Præsent. Justinian. 26. n. 2.

(c) Lombard. 4. diff. 24. lit. 1.

Beda lib. 1. c. 27.

(a) Lib. 1. de sacros. Eccles. & de Episc. & de Clericis tit. 11.

(b) Authent. de non alien. vend. heredit. Eccles. & c.

(c) Epist. 66.

had Tithes allotted for their Maintenance, that they should not withdraw themselves from the Service of God. The orderly assignment of Tithes to every Parish is ascribed to Dionysius Bishop of Rome, who in imitation of St. Paul's appointing Bishops in Cities, is said also to have made and distinguished Parishes about the Year 266, into such Form as now they retain.

Cod. lib. 1.

Jurisdiction in Ecclesiastical Affairs given to the Church.

42. Then inasmuch as it was necessary that the Spiritual Power should be strengthened and assisted by the Temporal, purity of Doctrine in the Church not always procuring goodness of Manners, that which to some is Religion, being to others no more than Faction, and Love being too cold to procure perfect Obedience, except it was backed by awe and fear; to Bishops was granted peculiar Jurisdiction by Christian Emperours, Those extended to Persons and Causes Ecclesiastical, such as touched the Soul and Conscience, and appertained to Charitable and Godly Uses: To the Laity also so far forth as it either concerned their Souls Health, or the external Government of the Church in things decent and comely; or as respected poor and miserable Persons, such as Widdows, Orphans, Captives, and suchlike helpless People, or where the Civil Magistrate could not be come by, or willfully delayed Judgment, in which Cases the Prelate was to discharge the Office both of an upright Judge and an Holy Bishop. Against Hereticks and those that disturbed the Peace of the Church, they had Power also granted, not only to confute them by Learning and rational Discourse, but also to suppress them by Authority. All which the Fourth Book of Justinian's Code doth sufficiently declare.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

From the first Nicene Council called by Constantine, to the Apostacy of Julian.

The space of Thirty six Years.

1. Constantine having delivered the Church from Persecution and other external Pressures, it began speedily to be more afflicted than usual by internal Evils. The pinching Cold of Adversity makes us keep close and unite together, nipping the Passions of Strife and Emulation in their Blossoms, but in the Sunshine of Prosperity we separate our selves, and the evil Roots of Pride, Vain-glory, Hatred and Contention, then put forth and sprout amaine. One Arius gave the occasion to these Distempers, a Man born (for publick Mischief) as most Writers say in Alexandria, Educated at School in Antioch, where he attained a Competency of Humane Learning, and having by his good Parts grown into Fame for Philosophy, fell to the Study of Divinity. Thence furnished with competent Learning, he returned to Alexandria, where he so well behaved himself, that he was admitted to be a Deacon by Peter the Bishop, but joyning himself with the Disciples of Meletius, who had made a Separation from that Church, accusing the Bishop of Austerity, for not having received Meletius too readily to Communion after he had, for fear of Death, offered Incense to the Heathen Gods. After the Martyrdom of Peter, at his return to Alexandria, he was by Achillas his Successor, restored to Communion with them, and so continued till he was become one of the Presbyters there, and till Achillas died. He seemed then a Competitor with Alexander the following Bishop, and failing of his Expectation, grew discontented, and thence fell into the itch of disputing certain Principles of Religion, and hard Points (as Hereticks are observed to do) in the concourse of People.

Niceph. l. 8.
Theodor. l. 1.
c. 1. &c.
Saccon. l. 1.
Epphan. l. 2.
Tom. 2. Her. 69.
Sec. l. 1. c. 6.Disputing about the Trinity gains several Proselytes.

2. Having the Advantage which so abstruse and high a Point as the Mystery of the Trinity affords, besides the Ignorance of the Times, and the easiness of Vulgar Spirits, he made such progress in his design, that he had soon gained Seven hundred Women, such as placed Sanctity in the Profession of Virginity, besides Seven Presbyters and Twelve Deacons, before Alexander the Bishop took any notice of it. At length Miletius having discovered it by the Poisoning of certain of his own Sect, Alexander by Preaching and Argument endeavoured to obviate the growing Mischief, wherein Arius found himself so concerned, that he fell into a Contest, and possessed the People with an Opinion that their Bishop maintained the Doctrine of Sabellius, so that Alexander was constrained to Assemble a Provincial Synod, as well to justify himself from such unjust Aspersions, as to determine the Matter concerning Arius. But he managed the Affair with too much mildness, inasmuch that the Arians were rather emboldened. For although the Synod determined against the Arian Tenets, and inhibited Arius from further publishing any such Opinions, yet, when they came to Subscribe, Ten Persons refused, as well as Arius, of which number Five were Presbyters, and as many Deacons: The Multitude was still for the newest Opinion, and was prejudiced much against the Truth by that Reverence which now it bore to the Person of Arius. For he had a smooth and flattering Tongue, was of a winning Behaviour, though serious Aspect, and indeed every way a goodly Person; a very prevalent means to procure respect (even Cæternis imparibus) from ordinary Capacities, especially those of the weaker Sex.

But is condemned by a Provincial Synod.

His Tenets.

3. Now therefore he held and published these following Doctrines with more Resolution and Animosity. "First, That the Son of God is like unto God in Name only, but not in Substance. Secondly, That the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, are not of the same Nature, Power and Majesty, inasmuch as the Father alone is the Invisible God, and alone to be Worshipped; the Son may be called God, &c.

Philastre. de heres.
Cassiod. trip.
hist. lib. 1. c. 12.
E. Niceph. l. 8.
c. 5. &c.
Hieron. Aug.
c. 6.

"God, but is a created God, being the Son of God by Adoption, and not by Nature, for there was a time when he had no being at all. Thirdly, That yet the Son of God was the first Creature that ever God made, and was made of those things which have no existence, and is the most excellent of all Creatures. Fourthly, That the Son of God is the Instrument of God his Father; by whom he made all other Creatures, yet doth he not know his Father's Secrets; nor comprehend his Nature and Essence. Fifthly, That the Son is not Infinite as his Father is, for when he lived in the World with Men, he was not then in Heaven with his Father, and that his Kingdom shall end with the World. Sixthly, That the Holy Ghost is a Creature, Created of the Son of God, knowing neither the Secrets and Nature of the Father nor the Son, being much Inferior in Nature and Dignity to them both, their Subject and Servant.

4. Arius refusing to subscribe the Decrees of the Alexandrian Synod, and proceeding in the publication and owning of his Opinions, was with his Followers ejected from their several Benefices, and from Communion with the Church. Yet, as it happened in such cases, being esteemed Confessors for this their Suffering, and more esteemed by the Ignorant and prejudiced sort, was he so much stocked after, that Tumults arose, and several Outrages were committed, to the great Scandal of the Christian Faith. The Proceedings of the Alexandrian Council were now the general discourse of the Christian World. Alexander the Bishop, to prevent and avoid false Representations, was constrained by Letter to several Churches to make Relation of Particulars, which gained belief according to the Inclination of the Receivers; and still the Arians seemed to get ground. The Bishop then considering what influence Preaching hath upon the Multitude, and how the Pulpits were made to serve the Designs of Factions and Heretical Spirits, Humour, Passion, Ignorance, and all Distempers passing under the Vizard of Gods Word, he ordained that no Priest in Alexandria should Preach without especial License first obtained. This proved so efficacious a Counter-plot to their Devices, that Arius forsook his Post, and departed into Palastine, where meeting with less opposition, he got opportunity to Preach and gather Companies together, as he and his Party had been accustomed.

5. Yet were those of Palastine so sensible of the good Effects of Order and Government, that they pressed Arius to submit to his Bishop, and return into Communion with him. But he not able to stoop so low, repairs to Eusebius Bishop of Nicomedia, his old Acquaintance when he studied at Antioch, who having heard his Tale, so far complies with him, as to repair to the Emperour, and misrepresent to him the Dealings of the Council of Alexandria. Constantine became so taken with Eusebius, that ever after he had much his Ear, and in Church Matters had great Application made to him. Thinking himself no mean Man, he writes to Alexander, advises him to pass by the matter concerning Arius, and receive him and his Followers again into Communion, other Churches he stirs up to resist the Proceedings of the Alexandrian, and strengthens the Hands of the Meletians in their Faction and Schism. By this means the business came to more Heat and Contention, and Sylvester Bishop of Rome much concerned himself in it; by his endeavours a General Council is appointed at Alexandria, over which presided Hosius Bishop of Corduba in Spain. He taking Nicomedia in his way, where the Emperour then resided, received his Letters to Alexander and Arius, wherein one may perceive the Finger of Eusebius; so slight a matter they make of the Difference betwixt them two. But Hosius, notwithstanding his great Abilities and Endeavours, could do little good, the Council ending without any considerable Conclusion. Yet the several Cases of Ishyras and Coluthus are remarkable, of whom Coluthus a Priest, bearing himself as a Bishop, and Ishyras a Lay-person, as a Priest, was reduced into Order by the Fathers. The Heresie of Sabellius also, though formerly condemned, yet in those Parts having again got ground was now exploded, and for that he had confounded the Three Persons in the Trinity, taking away all distinction by means of this Synod, one Idæ or Essence was said to be in the Blessed Trinity, and three Idæ or Persons, from which Terms afterwards a great Controversie arose.

6. Little

Who do nothing in that Matter.

Another Council at Nice in Bithynia.

Which is filed a General Oecumenical Council.

The Persons summoned who

The Management of Matters in Disputes.

6. Little good proceeding from the Council of Alexandria, or any other means of Reconciliation, the Empire began to be generally infected with the Distemper of Arianism, so that against a Disease so Epidemical as this was like to prove, some Catholick Remedy was to be provided; such, an Universal or General Council out of the whole Empire seemed to be; which Constantine at length resolved should be Summoned to Nice, a City of Bithynia, as most convenient for all Parts, by reason of its Situation. Now in this respect was the Scene of Affairs happily changed. Formerly in great Fear and Secrecie did the Bishops and others assemble to compose Differences sprung up in the Church; Great and Solemn Meetings would have given occasion of Jealousie and Cruelty to have been exercised upon so many Pastors so opportunely met at one time and place. Before those times Differences went not out of one City, or at the most out of a Province: now by reason of the Liberty of meeting together they extended themselves over the whole Empire; wherefore it was necessary that Councils (the usual remedy) should also be assembled from places at a farther distance.

7. Hereupon a Council of the whole Empire being Assembled, now by the (sole) Authority of the Prince, it had the Name of the Holy and Great Synod, and a little after was called the General and Oecumenical Council, though it were not Assembled from all parts of the Church, a considerable part whereof, even long before this time, having extended it self beyond the Limits of the Roman Empire, but because it was the Custom of those Ages to call the Emperour Lord of the whole habitable Earth, although the Tenth part of it was not subject to him. After this pattern were Councils called by the Successors of Constantine, upon all such urgent Occasions, as well after that the Empire was divided into Eastern and Western, as before the Affairs thereof being still managed under a common name as well Secular as Ecclesiastical. But when the East came so to be divided from the West, that there remained no more Communion in the Sovereignty, as it happened after the promotion of Charles the Great, after that; the last was for the most part possessed by Saracens, and the West Canonized into many Kingdoms and Signories, the name of an Oecumenical and Universal Council was no more derived from the Roman Empire, but amongst the Græcians from the Assembly of the Five Patriarchs, and in the more Western parts from the Unity and Communion of such Kingdoms and States as obeyed the Bishop of Rome in Causes Ecclesiastical. And the assembling of those for the most part, hath been not principally for the decision of Religious questions as formerly, but either to make War in the Holy Land, or to compose Schisms and Divisions in the Church of Rome, or for the ending of Controversies between the Bishops and Christian Princes. All which we shall see in their proper places.

8. Councils for about (a) Eight hundred years were called by Christian Emperours and Kings. Unto them first, and in the chief place were summoned Bishops, as the most proper Pastors and Rulers of the Church. After them (b) Priests or Presbyters had the next place sitting together with the Bishops, and giving their voices. Deacons were present also of old, but stood by with the rest of the People. In (c) the most ancient times Christ and the Holy Ghost presiding, and Charity prevailing against all Heat and Passion, they advised and resolved without Ceremonies or Forms prescribed. Before the days of Constantine, there being a necessity to govern them with some order, that Bishop chiefly for Learning, or the greatness of his See, or for some other respect of eminency, had the charge to propose and guide the Action and collect the Voices. Afterward the Action was guided by those Princes or Magistrates that had called them together, who also were personally present, proposing, governing the Dispute, decreeing interlocutorily the occurring Differences, but leaving the Decision of the principal Point to the major part of Voices. Constantine so ordered Matters in this of Nice and others elsewhere, as will be seen upon occasion.

9. Of old, sometime the Matter was so easie, that all was dispatched in one Meeting. Sometime by reason of the difficulty or multiplicity of business, there was necessity of making many Sessions in the same Council. But this was done without Ceremony, or with intention only to publish what was done before, or digested elsewhere, but that the opinion of every one might be understood, and the Colloquies, Discussions, Disputes, and whatsoever was done or spoken, was called the Acts of the Council. The Notaries appointed to Collect the Voices when a Bishop spoke and was not contradicted, wrote not his proper Name, but this The Holy Vide Paulum Venetum in Concilio Tridentini Hist.

(a) Cusanus Omnia esse universalia Concilia per Imp. Congregata. (b) Concilio Presbiterum de Paroch. orig. p. 66. Ove. (c) Vide Paulum Venetum quo prius.

Holy Synod said; when many said the same thing, it was written The Bishops acclaim, or affirm, and the things so spoken, were taken for Decisions; if they spake in a contrary Sense, the contrary Opinions were noted with the Names of the Authors, and the Presidents pronounced. After the Division of the Empire, some marks of these ancient Councils yet remained in the West, many were celebrated in France and Germany under the Posterity of Charles the Great, and not a few in Spain under the Gothic Kings. At last the Bishop of Rome his Power prevailing, Princes were absolutely debarred from meddling in Church Matters, whereby the former sort of Councils grew out of use, and that alone remained which was called by Ecclesiastical Persons themselves, the Convocation of which Provincial Councils was almost wholly assumed by the Pope, who sent his Legates to preside wherever he heard that a Council was to be held.

10. At length he assumed to himself that Power which the Roman Emperours had formerly used to convocate a Council of the whole Empire, and preside himself if he were present, or in his absence to send Legates to be Presidents and govern the Action. The Prelates assembled, being freed from all fear of a Secular Prince by reason of many Indecencies which were multiplied as worldly respects increased, began to digest and order their Matters in private, that they might observe more decency in the public Meeting. In process of time this became a Form, and in Councils beside the Sessions, they began to make Congregations of some Deputies to set in order such Matters as were to be treated of, which in the beginning, if many, were divided, and a proper Congregation assigned to every one. But all Indecencies being not hereby removed, because those that were absent having different Interests, raised Difficulties in public; besides the particular Congregations, they made a general one before the Session, where all were present, which according to the ancient Rite, is the Conciliar Action, because the Session, every thing being done before, is but a pure Ceremony. But after an Age or two, National Interests being different, caused Diffentions amongst the Bishops of diverse Countries; whereupon those that came from far, being few, and judging it unreasonable to be outvoted by the neighbouring Prelates, who were more in number, to make the balance equal, it was necessary that every Nation should assemble by it self, as formerly the Tribes in the Roman Comitia, and resolve according to the number of Voices, and that the general Decision should be Established, not by the Suffrages of particular Men, but by the Plurality of the Voices of the Nations. This course was observed in the Councils of Constantine and Nice: which use, as it was good where the Government was Free, as it was when the World owned no Pope, so it ill befitted Trent, where they desired a Council subject to him.

11. But at Nice met Three hundred and eighteen Bishops from all parts of the Empire, amongst whom many carried about them the Trophies of their Christian Warfare, Scars all over their Bodies, and mutilation of Members. The Emperour with a short Speech opened the Council, and after general Admonitions commended Two things especially to their Care: the one was for Establishing one settled Practice in the Church in the Point of keeping Easter, and the other was concerning the Arian Doctrine, the principal cause of their meeting. The first was effected with little or no Contest, the Custom of the Western Churches being Established, and that of the Arian abolished by Decree of the Council and the Emperours Edict; although from the Acts of the Council now Extant, little appears concerning this Matter. The business about Arius held them long in Debate, who according to Summons appeared, and maintained his Opinions. The Dispute against him was chiefly managed by Alexander and Athanasius his Deacon, who charged him with such Tenets as he had formerly maintained at Alexandria. The Council examined his Book called Thalia, wherein were found so many of his Opinions, and such Wantonness (he being much suspected of Uncleanness, in his ordinary Conversation with Women, which he called his Virgins) that it was condemned by the Council and burnt by command of Constantine. But when the Fathers should come to establish the Orthodox Faith, after they had resolved against Arius his Heresie, it cost them some labour to invent what Terms were fit to express the co-equal Divinity of God the Son with his Father, so as no hole might be left for the Arians to creep out at. At length they resolved upon the Greek word ὁμοούσιον or Consubstantial, which they had observed to be much feared and avoided by the Arians from an Epistle of Eusebius Bishop of Nicomedia read in the Synod.

12. The

12. The Arians perceiving themselves foiled by the addition of this, thought to reinforce the charge, by putting in the word Unbegotten, with relation to the Father; as thence deducing by consequence, that the Son was made and Created. But the Fathers aware of their design, receiving this word added to it, that the Son was so begotten, that he was not made, by which their design was quite dashed; then was drawn up a Formulary of the Catholick Faith: whereof Hosius, who presided in the Council, was Author, now called the Nicene Creed, and passed June 19. on Saturday. But in this Council, nothing appears to have been added to the Apostles Creed, concerning the Holy Ghost; which happened by reason that nothing was now urged against his Divinity by Arius; which course was formerly taken up by his Followers, and more privately before this had been practiced by him, it being very ready and in a manner consequential to him, who denied the Divinity of Christ to reject that of the Holy Spirit. Having happily finished the Affair concerning Arius, they settled the matter concerning Easter; and for that several Countries observed several Customs and Calculations of time, it pleased the Synod to commit the charge of the Paschal Cycles to the Bishop of Alexandria, in giving notice of the time of Celebration, which was done every Year preceeding; seeing that the Letters concerning the time were wont to be published by the Deacons on the day of the Epiphany, and by the Bishop of that City, to be sent up and down to the Churches of the West.

13. Having for the better Calculation of time, Established the Golden Number, containing the period of Nineteen Years, they came to discuss the cause of Meletius, the Schismatical Bishop of Lyco, in the Province of Alexandria. This Man for Sacrificing to Idols, in the time of Diocletian, and other causes had been deprived of his Bishoprick by Peter the Metropolitan, who afterwards suffered Martyrdom; at which censure conceiving great indignation, he ceased not to rail against Peter, and his Successors, and made a separation from the Communion of the Church; continuing Schismatical with a multitude of Followers to this very time. The Synod now tell the Church of Alexandria, and their Brethren throughout Egypt, Lybia and Pentapolis, that they had dealt with him, with more clemency than he deserved; having decreed that he should remain in his own City without any Episcopal power, retaining only the bare Name and Title of his Office and Dignity, and they resolved that the Clergy should submit wholly to Alexander, or else be deprived of their Spiritual Offices; being also to give place to those whom the Metropolitan had ordained: And because that by reason of this Schism Meletius had throughout Egypt at his pleasure made many Ordinations, the Synod by a Canon forbid that in Egypt, Lybia or Pentapolis, any should be ordained Bishop without the knowledge of the Metropolitan, (this being the ancient privilege of the Alexandrian Church) as the Custom was observed towards the Roman Bishop.

14. By this Council were framed Twenty Canons in all, and no more are to be found in any good and certain Author: Turrian the Jesuit tells us of Eighty, which having found in the Arabicke Tongue he Translated, and Ruffinus counts 22. But Theodoret affirms there were but 20. And whereas many things are cited by Writers of succeeding times, as from the Nicene Council, they rather are to be understood of the Acts, than the Canons thereof, rather of passages which happened, not directly but accidentally, and recorded in Story, than of the solemn decrees of the Fathers; besides this being the first great and Oecumenical Council, all opinions were ambitious from it to derive descent and pedigree; and the Acts afterwards coming to be lost and imbezeled, whether through the negligence of the Keepers thereof, or which is more likely, through the practice of Hereticks, who were unwilling to be upbraided with so urgent a Testimony; great latitude was given for pretenders to enlarge the number of the Canons, and out of them to forge Arguments for the raising or upholding of their particular Sects and Opinions.

15. The first of the Twenty received Canons (a) depose such Clerks, as had voluntarily made themselves Eunuchs, and prohibits such to be ordained for the future; excepting such as either necessity of Cure, or of Force and Violence, had undergone Mutilation from (b) Phisians, their imperious Lords, or Cruel and Barbarous Enemies. The Second taking notice, that many contrary to Rule leapt out of the Font into the Episcopal Chair, or the Seat and Office of a Priest; having been but lately Catechized (c) or Instituted in the Christian Faith; strictly forbids such practice for the time to come, concluding from (d) Apostoli-

G 2

cal

Athanas.
Ep. ad solit.
Soc. Lib. 1. c. 5.
Lec. Ep. 64.

The Nicene
Creed said

Sec. 1. i. e.
6. Ep. 9. ubi videt. Symedicam.

Meletius punished.

Council. Nic.
c. 6.

Over all one presides.

Easter settled.

Author vita Constant. c. 16.
Sec.

The Heresie of Arius condemned.

(a) Diff. 55.
Siculus a Medi-cus.
(b) In the Latin Can.
nonis ita dicitur by which both here and in the Imperial Laws, Chy-rurgians are understood, not those learned in the Theology of Physick.
(c) Diff. 48.
quoniam multa
(d) 1. 1. 1.

cal caution against a Novice, that a new Convert should both stand as a Catechumenus a convenient time, and a Probationer after Baptism. If in process of time such an one committed Scandal, and was Convicted by the Testimony of two or three Witnesses, he was to be deposed, as also any such that should Act contrary to this Canon; which yet, afterwards was dispensed with, upon notable occasions for appeasing Tumults, or when the extraordinary worth of a Person required it, as in the Case of St. Ambrose and Nellarius. The Third (c) forbids any Bishop, Priest or Deacon, or any Clerk whatsoever, to receive any Woman as Inmate into his House, except it be his Mother, Grandmother, Sister or Aunt; in which, and such like Persons, suspicion may easily be declined. By which Canon nothing was decreed against Marriage, that design being utterly dashed by the interpolation and endeavours of Paphnutius, who dissuaded the Fathers from laying the unsupportable burthen of Celibate, upon the back of those whom God and his Church had left free. The Fourth (f) Canon prescribes the manner of ordaining or Consecrating a Bishop, affirming the Action ought to be performed by all the Bishops of that Province, if possible, but if that may not be, three at least ought to meet for that purpose, bringing with them in Writing the consent of the rest, and the confirmation of every Province, was to belong to the Metropolitan.

16. The Fifth Canon (a) forbids those that are Excommunicated by some, to be received into Communion with others; but to redress such inconvenience as might rise from any Contention or Heat of any Bishop using this censure; it seemed good to the Fathers to ordain that twice every Year a Council of "Bishops should be held in each Province, who urgently should examine if any complained of such grievance, that such as appeared justly censured, might be held and esteemed as Excommunicated Persons by the rest, till such time as publicly, or by their own Bishop they were absolved. (b) One of those Annual Councils they thought fit should be held before Lent; that all grudges if any there were, being laid aside, they might present themselves a Pure and Solemn Offering to Almighty God. The Second Meeting they thought fit should be about Autumn. Now this command concerning the rejecting of those by all that had been Excommunicated by one Bishop, was not out of consideration of the sole Jurisdiction of any particular Bishop, but of the Nature of the Censure, which the Church esteemed as a thing which ought to be of that great strength and influence that by whomsoever it was applied it might obtain universal Force.

17. The Sixth Canon is of very extraordinary remark, as a great Eye-sore to certain Novelists, who seek all manner of ways to cover it by their Glosses and Expositions, as their adversaries on the other side, ever cast it in their Dish. It commands that the Ancient Custom be observed throughout Aegypt, Lybia and Pentapolis; so that the Bishop of Alexandria, have Power or Authority over all these, forasmuch as such was the manner or use of the Roman Bishop. In like manner at Antioch, and in the rest of the Provinces, say the Fathers, let every Church enjoy its own Dignity or Honour: However it's manifest, that if any be ordained without the consent and knowledge of his Metropolitan, this great and Holy Council judgeth that he ought not to be a Bishop. Indeed if two or three out of Animosity and Contention, shall contradict what is generally and rationally and Canonically agreed on, the most voices of Priests carry it; for Bishops themselves are so called. The Romanists jealous of their Great Bishops Honour and Authority, labour all ways possible to pervert their Readers that these words, for such is the manner (Custom or use) of the Roman Bishops, no way do imply any equality of Power or Jurisdiction betwixt him and the other of Alexandria, some would make them an Argument of his Authority over the Egyptian Churches, as if such is the Custom of the Roman Bishop, was to be joynted to those words viz. over, or in the Churches of Alexandria, Pentapolis, &c. And if this will not do, with other of the like sort, a Latin Edition, of those Canons, is urged wherein it is read not. Forasmuch as such is the Custom of the Roman Bishop; but, Forasmuch as this same is the Custom of the Metropolitan Bishop. But their Adversaries scarcely think themselves in Honour obliged to answer such slight and palpable Glosses; although they might oppose to many ancient Latin Copies, to an obscure pretended one of Marcellus a Tridentine Legate, not to mention the Greek. And as for the sense of the words, they say it is sufficiently evinced both by universal consent of pure Antiquity, and the Testimony of other Councils, especially that of the General Council of Chalcedon, which we shall scan in its proper place. Thus much at present we may observe, as a learned Man hath learnedly made out in a peculiar Treatise, that first Custom introduced the Rights and privi-

(c) Diff. 32.
Interdict.
Subintroductum habere mulierem.

(f) Diff. 94 Episcopi ab omnibus.

(a) 11. qu.
Servatus ista sententia.

(b) Diff. 18.
Habeatur suum concilium.

Diff. 65.
non antiquae.

Vide Annot.
ad Conc. Nic.
Can. 6. in edi-tione Caracina
pag. 102.

Privileges of Patriarchs or Metropolitans: Secondly, Councils confirmed this Custom; and lastly Emperours who could not but approve of a near agreement and similitude, betwixt the Models of Church and State, Enacted and Confirmed it by their Imperial Authority and Laws.

18. The Fathers out of the same principle of keeping up Good and Ancient Customs, as sensible of the great Influence of change, further Enact by their Seventh (a) Canon, that forasmuch as by ancient Custom and Tradition, Honour was given to Elia or the Bishop of Jerusalem, he should consequently enjoy the said Honour, provided that the Dignity of the Metropolitan City be preserved. The Eighth (b) Canon gives directions how Novatians which returned to the Catholic Church should be received, concluding, that if a Bishop came over to a Bishop, if he thought not fit to receive him as such, he should procure him a place either of a Chorepiscopus or a Priest, that he might assuredly have some Clerical Function, left in one and the same City, there should be found two Bishops; this against two Bishops in one City was decreed with very good reason, to prevent the Contentions and Emulation, a Bishops Chair, no more than a Kings Throne, brooking Rivals, although the contrary practice may be found before this time; and St. Augustin as he himself confesseth, out of ignorance acted contrary to this Canon, being both Consecrated before the Death of Valerius, and sitting with him in the same See. The Ninth (d) Canon decrees that if any Priests were promoted without examination, after this confessed their Sins, and after confession yet had hands laid on them by the Metropolitan and others to be made Bishops, such were not to be owned by the Ecclesiastical Order. The Tenth (e) near of kin to the former, doth Enact, that whether such Criminals were ordained ignorantly, or with the knowledge of Bishops contemptuously, they should be deposed.

19. The Eleventh Canon, prescribes Rules of Penitence to such as fell through Frailty during the persecution of Licinius, allowing the Bishop to mitigate the Penance where he should find just occasion. The Twelfth Ordains that the Ancient Course be observed concerning an Excommunicated Person, that if any one dye, he be not defrauded of his Patricium; but if any desperate Person should overlive the Communion, he was only to be admitted to Prayer; and the Bishops were to approve and judge of those dying Persons to whom the Communion was to be Administered. The Thirteenth Ordains concerning such Catechumeni as fell, that they should be for the space of three Years amongst such only as heard the Word, and afterwards should Pray with the Catechumeni who being but Novices or Probationers in Religion, were admitted to hear the Word, but excluded the Congregation at time of public Prayers and Service. The Fourteenth Reforms a Custom crept into certain Places, of Deacons giving the Sacrament to Priests, and receiving it before the Bishops themselves, forbidding the like practice for the time to come, on pain of Deposition; and that Deacons sit amongst Presbyters. In the Fifteenth, the Fathers taking notice of Commotions and Tumults, which happened by reason of Bishops, Presbyters, and Deacons, Fleeting and Changing from City to City, they inhibit this practice for the time to come, and require that an Offender be remanded to that Church wherein he was Ordained; and if this Decree be not sufficient, in their Sixteenth Canon they enjoy that such an one be Expelled and Constrained to return to his Church; which if he refuse obstinately to do, he is to be Excommunicated.

20. The Holy and Oecumenical Synod in its Seventeenth Canon (a) Decrees, that if any one should dare to Ordain any Clerk in his own Church which belong to another Bishop, without the said Bishops assent, such Ordination should be void. The Eighteenth (b) forbids Usury to the Clergy, upon pain of Deposition. The Nineteenth (c) commands that such as returned to the Catholic Church, from the Heresie of the Paulianists and Cataphrygians, should be Re-baptized; as also such as were Clerks amongst them should be Re-ordained, but their Deacons continue lay as they were. The Twentieth (d) Canon containeth an Appendix to the Decree, concerning the Feast of Easter, by occasion of the Quarta Decimarum, or those who were for Celebrating this Feast on the Fourteenth Moon according to the Jewish Custom, and that of the Eastern Churches, and therefore taking no notice of the Resurrection at that time were wont to kneel at Prayer, as at other times not Festival, the Synod therefore Ordains that for Uniformity sake, on the Lords day, and in the days of Pentecost, all pray standing; for it is to be noted that to the Resurrection the Primitive Church had so cheerful a regard, that not only at those times here mentioned, but also during

Dr. Barlow De antiqua Escleſie ſive liberate, 72. app. 10. apud Barlow.

(a) Diff. 65.
Quoniam mag-is vultis gloriari in vultu de Etyologia Eliæ et H. ereſi-ſymorum.

(b) 9. 7. Si qui.

(c) Ep. 110

(d) Diff. 81.
Si qui ſine examine.

(e) Diff. 81.
quicunque hui-usmodi gloriari.

Conf. 26. q. 6.
De his qui.

Diff. 93.
Provent ad
ſent.

7. q. 1. Non oportet episco-pum.

7. 9. 1. q. 2.
non.

(a) Diff. 71.
ſpiciunt ſuavit.

(b) Conf. 14.
9. 4. Quoniam multi Clerici.

(c) 1. q. 1.
Signis conſecrat.

(d) 3. quoniam
ſunt.

during those Fifty Holy-days betwixt Easter and Whitsontide, no Man did so much as de geniculis adorare, Worship God or Pray on his knees. Those days, though now neglected, were then, when the memory of the Resurrection, and the benefits thereof was more fresh, carefully observed, and Tertullian considering their number, takes notice that they were more than the Superstitious Heathen observed throughout the whole Year.

21. All things being concluded which the Nicene Council thought fit to Ordain, the Fathers came to Subscribe both the Cannons and the Creed. Hofius Bishop of Corduba was the first that Subscribed, not the Legates of Silvester Bishop of Rome viz. Victor and Vincentius, two Presbyters of that City. Seventeen yet are said to have refused being infected, it seems with the Principles of Arius, which when the Emperour understood, as highly affected with the conclusion of the Council, he declared he would Banish all refusers, whereupon Eleven of the Dissenters were frighted into a Subscription, of which Dissemblers Eusebius Bishop of Nicomedia was chief; so the Decrees being confirmed by Imperial Authority, the Council which had Assembled on the Eighteenth of the Calends of July (June the Fourteenth) was dissolved, on or about the Eighth of the Calends of September (August 25th.) having began and ended in the Twentieth Year of Constantine, the First of the 276, Olympiad, the 1078. Year of Rome: Of Christ 325. Anicetus Faustus Paulinus, and P. Pablius Cetonius Jalcannus Camannus being Confessors.

22. Besides Hofius who presided at the Council, first Subscribed, and is not in the Acts at all taken notice of, as the Legate of the Roman Bishop, the most eminent of those Nicene Fathers was Alexander Patriarch or Metropolitan (the other Name being scarcely yet in use) of Alexandria, Eustathius of Antioch and Macarius of Jerusalem, all of them Famous for their Christian Faith, Courage and Sanctity: Amongst those Bishops which Alexander brought along with him, none were so Eminent; as Potamon Bishop of Heraclea in Egypt, and Papnubus, one as good as many, who as he equalized the former in the loss of his (Right) Eye in the Perfection of Maximinus, so he went beyond him in the loss of his left Leg, and his Condemnation to the Mines. He is reported by Ruffinus to have been also Famous for Miracles, and in such Veneration with all good Men, that Constantine the Emperour, himself would often most kindly and familiarly embrace him, and greedily kiss that empty place which had formerly held his Martyr'd Eye; and this is not the least of his Commendations that he stood up for the Liberty of Clergy-men, when some went about to have enslaved them under the Yoke of forced Continence; although Calliodorus, Epiphanius, Socrates, Sozomen and Nicephorus most of them, if not all, Grave and approved Authors for but reporting one piece of History in Favour of Priests Marriages are spit upon and discarded with disgrace by certain Grandees of the contrary opinion. But Espencæus a Learned and Sober Writer defends their Authority about Papnubius.

23. As Egypt affording such Bishops, made some amends to the Church, for that detriment is sustained through Arius a Clerk of the same Province; so in producing the most powerful Adversary that Arch-Heretic ever had, and one whom Patience and Magnanimity, as well as Faith commend as a great Pattern to all Ages; it seemed to overbalance the inconvenience, as no Country can be blamed for the Generation of a Poysonous and Venomous thing which carries not its Appology viz. a proper Antidote, in its own Bosom. This was Athanafius a Person who though he assisted at this Council, but in quality of Alexander his Deacon is yet to Act the most considerable part in this Troublesome and Tempestuous Scene, and for that purpose must needs change his Quality and dress succeeding Alexander the most Worthy Bishop of Alexandria, who about five Months after the conclusion of the Synod, changed this Life, and went to enjoy that Blessed Trinity which he had so Faithfully and Industriously defended. Athanafius was born at Alexandria about the Rising and Spreading of Arius his Tenets, being a Boy by consent of all Writers when Alexander was Bishop of that See; and when he was yet a Boy (but Twelve Years old, as Baronius guesses) his Genius discovered it self, even then strongly bent to an Episcopal Demeanure, as appears by a remarkable passage.

24. The Church of Alexandria had a Custom of keeping a Solemn Festival, and Thanksgiving on that day whereon Peter their Bishop had suffered Martyrdom; one day amongst the rest (the Anniversary that happened about that Age of Athanafius) after they were come from Church, as Alexander expecting certain of the best Rank to Dine with him, by chance looked out at a Window, he espied certain Boys on the Sea shore, who as he thought were in their sport Baptizing one another, having called some of those that were present with him to behold the sight, he sent for the Boys and asked them what they had been doing by the Seaside, and when they being abashed and silent he urged them to speak, they told him that one of them there, Athanafius, as chief in their sport, had Baptized some of them who had not formerly been Initiated, and that he had made some of them Priests, others Deacons to assist him in that Service; having examined them before, and given them instructions how they ought to demean themselves for the future, and so they told him the whole Story: Alexander together with the Priests considering the substance of the Work, concluded the Baptized Boys were not to be Re-baptized, but adding what he thought further necessary to be done, he sent for their Parents, and charging them to Educate them for the Ministry, he especially took care of Athanafius, requiring he should be now and then brought to his presence, that he himself might take notice of his Proficiency in Learning. He is said to have much profited at School, being well grounded in Grammar, Skilled in Philosophy, and Studied in the Law; but those he made but subservient to Divinity, in the Study, whereof having good assistance from many worthy Confessors, who could teach him the Practice part by their own example, as well as the Speculative by Arguments and Precepts; he gave such pregnant Proof of his Industry, that besides other Testimonies, he had the Books both of the Old and new Testament in Memory without book.

25. Alexander finding Athanafius his Proficiency to have surmounted his expectation, took him into his own Family, and made him his Amanuensis, in which Employment after he had continued sometime, and made further Progress in his Studies, he took him into the Number of his Deacons at Alexandria and carried him along with him to the Council of Nice, where he assisted him in his Prosecution of Arius, when the Blasphemous Doctrines he had uttered at the Council of Alexandria were produced and engaged against the Heretics in a Solemn disputation published amongst his other Works: He was now grown in great esteem for his Abilities and Integrity amongst all those of the best and Orthodox Party, when Alexander dyed, who having more intimate knowledge of him than any other, is thought designed him his Successor; the good old Man lying at the point of Death, called for Athanafius, which one of that name hearing, and coming to him, he looked on him, and turned away his Face, and continuing still to call, at last said, thou thinkest Athanafius to escape, but it shall not be; which words whether he spoke Prophetically as some imagined, or as designing him to his Chair as others think, he soon after Expired. Alexander being dead, Athanafius in a Provincial Council was chosen his Successor, not Theonas and Achillas, as Epiphanius alone tells the Story. I was, faith Athanafius, chosen by Athanafius the whole City and Province of Alexandria; Bishops, Priests, and People assembled together, with Prayers to God, publick Acclamations, Exhortations, Intreaties, Persuasions yea Obsecrations for several Days and Nights without rest either to themselves or me, not ceasing till they had prevailed with me to accept of their Choice.

26. In the beginning of the Government of Athanafius, was the Gospel Preached to the Lower Indians by Prumentius a Tyrian, who when he was yet but a Boy, being carried thither by Meropius a Christian Philosopher, after his death (for he was Slain by the Indians) was entertained and preferred by that King, together with Aedesius his School-fellow, and for his great dexterity in managing publick business, had in a manner that whole Government put into his hands; having this opportunity he first procured Liberty for Christian Merchants to meet together and build Churches; afterwards he himself returning into his own Country, first made a Journey to Alexandria, to move that Patriarch that some fit Person might be sent Bishop into India: Athanafius being lately Consecrated, thought none so fit as Prumentius himself, who being Ordained and sent thither, is said by his Preaching and Miracles to have Converted an infinite Number of that People, and therefore to have Founded a Church: Thus much in more words and with more Circumstances relateth Ruffinus who faith he had the Relation from Aedesius, as the Companion of the said Prumentius and Socrates as much more hath it from him, as also Sozomen and Theodoret; all of them moreover unite that about this same time were the Therians converted to the Faith, by the religious Preaching, example, and Miraculous Acts of a certain Captive Christian Woman. Ruffinus faith he had it from Bacarius their King who came to Constanti-

Subscribed
first by Hofius
Bishop of Corduba
also Sec.

And confirmed by the Emperours Edict.

The Birth place of Athanafius.

Att. Com.

Ruffinus lib.
1. c. 5.

His proficiency in Learning.

He is made a Deacon.

Socr. lib. 1. c. 5.

Lib. 1. c. 4.

Socr. lib. 1. c. 2.

Socr. lib. 1. c. 2.

Lib. de Constantino.

And upon Alexander's death solemnly chosen his Successor.

The Lower Indians converted.

Socr. lib. 1. c. 15. Sozomen. 1. c. 16. Ruffin. 1. 1. c. 14.

Vide Athan. Disput. cu. 7. Ariam.

Athan. Epist. 2.

L. 1. c. 9. Soc. L. 1. c. 15. as the Companion of the said Prumentius and Socrates as much more hath it Soc. lib. 1. c. 2. from him, as also Sozomen and Theodoret; all of them moreover unite that about this same time were the Therians converted to the Faith, by the religious Preaching, example, and Miraculous Acts of a certain Captive Christian Woman. Ruffinus faith he had it from Bacarius their King who came to Constantinople to desire of the Emperour that Priests might be sent to instruct his Nation, of whom he not only obtained what he came for, but was dignify'd with the Office also of Comes Domesticonum, and Dux or General of the Palestine Limit. Baronius thinks him the same that (a) Ammianus calls Bacarius or Balaris the Iberian, created by the Emperour Comes Domesticonum, and leader of the Scutarii and Sagittarii: But whereas that part of Iberia which lay toward the Pontick Sea, was long before Converted by the Preaching of Clement the Roman Bishop, driven thither by Persecution in the days of Trajan, those now Converted must be the Lower Iberians inhabiting those places near the Mountains of Caucasus and the Capian Sea. Two things there were which of old mightily contributed occasions to the Conversion of Barbarous Nations, the one was the Wars against such People, who were often conquered by their Captives, that ceased not out of their Chains and Dungeons to Preach unto them: The other those tedious and exquisite Persecutions of Heathen Emperours, who forcing the Faithful ones to fly for shelter amongst fierce and Barbarous People, God stopped the Mouths of those Lions and Tigers who entertaining those Strangers, entertained Angels or the Messengers of glad Tidings for a reward; and though some miscarried, and as a reward of their Sufferings, received the Crown of Martyrdom (such the Primitive Christians really accounted it) yet through despatchment of Almighty God, the Blood of the Martyrs still became the Seed of the Church.

nople

(a) Lib. 31.
ad An. 327.

Arian the Heretic rejected by Athanasius.

27. But the Preference of Athanasius vehemently disturbed the minds of the Arians, who knowing him a Person most likely of all others to ruin their Cause, left no Stone unfir'd to remove him. Eusebius Bishop of Nicomedia especially, who by means of Constantia the Widow of Licinius, and Sister of Constantine, had through his great Industry and Dissimulation, not only recovered the Emperours favour, but insinuated himself much into his good esteem; he often told him how unfit a Man Athanasius was for such a place, lessening him all ways possible, and when this would not take, resolved to tamper with the Bishop himself, and try whether he might not bring him about to his own Party, or at least persuade or fright him into such Actions as might weaken the Catholic Interest: He adviseth him by Letter to re-admit Arius and his Partisans into their Churches, or otherwise expect great inconveniences to follow. When neither by intreaty nor threats he could move Athanasius, whose answer was, he could not receive into Communion such as had been held for Hereticks by the Council, and to this purpose enraged at the Repulse, animated by his Heretical Zeal, and confident upon the account of his interest in Constantia, and power with Constantine, he begins to patronize Disputes and Preaching against the determinations of the late Council, which that he might do with less censure of inconstancy and Knavery, he and his party never left till by indirect practices they got into their hands the Acts of the Council from him, to whose Fidelity the Emperour had committed them, and having Obliterated their Subscriptions, so ordered the matter, they deprived Posterity of any view of them, although concerning the matter of their Fact there was sufficient Testimony. And thus revived the Arian Schism, which though it seemed suppressed by the Council, yet revived, and so increased as almost to take away Schism or Division, the whole World, as one faith, admiring to see its self all turned Arian; of those that continued Orthodox were counted Singular, and as Elisab, formerly esteemed themselves as only (b) left: Such contentions and horrid distractions so unexpectedly followed this and other Councils, that to some sober Persons all (c) Christianity seemed to be laid aside, and although of such Meetings there be very much use (d) in the Church of God, yet some very (e) Eminent Persons were so much disgusted as to conclude (at least) from the abuse, against the use and despatchment of them.

Suzem. Lib.
2. c. 20.

(b) Non ff ego solus sum sicut minor est ratio fidei. Le-berius Ep. Rom.
ad Constant.
Imp. Arrianum.

(c) Dum alter alteri anathema esse Capis prope iam nemo Christi est. Nil erat nisi pugna in verbis, quasi de nevitatibus, de auctoritatibus querela, de Statutis certamen, in consensu difficultas. Hilarius ad Constantinum. cap. 16. (d) Concilium in Ecclesia Dei Substantivum auctoritatem esse Aug. ep. 118. (e) Nemo enim Ep. ad presbyt. ait ff. quodam subreptis quibusdam quibus nullus natus synodi domum & Felicem Eusebium vidisset proterea offensus noniam datus rogatus quam accepit solus habuisse.

Upon which they endeavour to un Bishop him.

28. But Eusebius knowing the Power of the Prince of most weight for the balancing of any Party, feared lest Athanasius, should to begin with, and secure himself of the Emperours favour; he therefore with his Companions resolved to strike home and un Bishop him if possible, having in vain tried formerly to disgrace the Man, now they question his Title, and quarrel with his Election, as brought about by the Faction and Combination of a few Persons therein concerned, they Remonstrate to Constantine, that after the Death of Alexander fifty and four of the Suffragan Bishops being assembled to an Election, when they had upon their Oaths given their Votes for one Person, nevertheless Seven of the

the Number perfidiously separated from the rest, made choice of Athanasius, and Ordained him, upon which account many of the Aegyptians, both Clergy and Churches, altogether refused Communion with him; and they could not but in Duty further inform their Prince that he was Pragmatical, and Turbulent, occasioning Dissentions and Fomenting Divisions amongst the People.

29. Athanasius easily satisfied the Emperour, both that Arius who had been forbidden by the Council to return to Alexandria, and was the Arch-Heretic, ought not to be received into Communion, and concerning those Accusations, having as it fortunately happened, sent two of his Presbyters to the Court to excuse his not waiting on the Emperour by reason of his more than Ordinary Employments at his first coming to the See, and to refer any objections that might be made against him. They so dexterously discharged what they had in Commission, as obtaining Audience they cleared all Doubts and Surmises, both as to the Bishops Legal Election, and his Personal Carriage and Deportment. This device of Eusebius not taking, he grew enraged at the success, and resolved if he could not ruin Athanasius at a distance from Court, he would make yer his Seat too hot for him, by kindling a Flame within his own Province. Meletius the Schismatick being favourably handled by the Nicene Council returned to his See at Lycopolis in Egypt, and there not only Ordained Arsenius contrary to the Canons thereof, Bishop of the Arseianus (which place he himself had formerly held) but being urged to Name his Successor, made choice of one John his familiar Friend, to Succeed him: This begetting a Contention, for so much as the Jurisdiction of the Metropolitan was thereby much infringed, the Arians observing their opportunity, strike in with the Meletians, and under their Name and Pretences, resolve to try the utmost with Athanasius.

Soc. Lib. 2.
c. 21.

Athan. A.
p. 2. Soc. lib.
2. c. 20. Soc. 1.
c. 3.

30. The Meletians therefore seeking Patronage of their Schism from the Emperour, as Epiphanius Writes, sent to him John Calinicus and Isehyras formerly mentioned (the one a Meletian Bishop, and the other made again as good as a Priest) to obtain a Toleration, and being barred of Access, betook themselves to Eusebius of Nicomedia; He making advantage hereof, undertook their Patronage under condition of their receiving Arius into their Communion; and not only procured them Audience but a Licence for their Separation, which Baronius denies, affirming that Epiphanius had this story from some Writer that favoured the Meletians, alleging that Constantine is cleared of this Calumny, by his Letters to Athanasius, and the Testimony of Eusebius (a Writer in the Cardinals judgment prone enough to the Arian Heresy) who witnesseth that he after the Council, did his endeavour to preserve the Authority of the Canons, and laboured to Compose those Dissentions in the Churches of Egypt. To be sure this is agreed on all hands, Athanasius went about to bring the Meletians to the observance of the Nicene Canons, which they again resisting, Eusebius and the rest of the Arians struck in with the Schismaticks and Levelled all their Engines against Athanasius.

Several Articles against Athanasius presented to the Emperour
by the Schismatics

Which being cleared.

31. Eusebius and Theognis laying their heads together, assume as Associates and Councillors in the attempt, their old Companions Maris Bishop of Chalcedon and Valens and Orsarius Bishops in Pannonia, formerly condemned by the Council. These five present the Articles of the Schismaticks against Athanasius, wherein is objected that he is the great Cause and Fomentor of the troubles in the Egyptian Church. That like a false Traitor he endeavoured a Collection in Egypt, Levying Money, and therewith supplying Philomenus, who attempted the imbroyleing of that Country in Sedition and Tumults; and that he oppressed the People of Egypt, exacting of them Linnen Cloaths or Veltments for the Church of Alexandria. His two Presbyters then lying at Constantinople easily refuted the objection concerning this Tribute of Linnen, supposed to be exacted by him, shewing that this was no new thing as indeed there are many Examples to require Linnen for the Ornament of Churches. But judging it most safe Personally to appear and make his Defence himself, he halted to Court, and presenting himself to the Emperour, so plainly and clearly evinced those Articles of Forgery, that he was dismissed with great Countenance and Respect, and with Letters Testimonial and Commendatory to the Alexandrian Church; all the Members whereof, are severely enjoined to receive and own him as their True, Loyal, and Pious Metropolitan. Some say the Emperour was so enraged at the double dealing of Eusebius and Theognis his Associate, that remembering how upon refusal to Subscribe they had been Sentenced and afterward

H

Eusebius and the rest are banished.

afterward Singing a Palinody at his Intercession, were freed from the danger of Exile, now in detestation both of their Relaps and Malice he caused to be Executed on them the former diere of Banishment, and Amphion and Chirofius were Substituted in their Places.

Being recalled they charge him with new matter.

32. However their Banishment was not long, being within a Year or two recalled, by the intercession of Constantia as (a) Baronius thinks, though other Chronologers place her Death Four Years before, (A. D. 327.) which Lady at her last Funeral earnestly Commended her Arian Chaplain to her Brother, who by this means had notable opportunities to serve both the Person and Cause of Eusebius. Being recalled a little after the Dedication of the New City of Constantinople, they found new Matter wherewith to Charge Athanasius. Ischyas the pretended Priest whom Coluthus the pretended Bishop had Ordained, being found lurking about Meoris, where he acted the part of a true Minister; Athanasius had sent Macarius, one of his Presbyters who defended his Cause stoutly at Constantinople, to bring him to his presence, who finding Ischyas sick in Bed, left only word with the Father that he had been there, whom he advised to Council his Son not to intermeddle any more with the Ministerial Function till he had spoken with the Metropolitan. Ischyas finding he could not continue there, betook himself to Eusebius to whom he complained, that being a Priest he had been outrageously abused and wronged by Athanasius, his Church by him being Villified and Profaned, his Alter overthrown, his Chalice broken in pieces, "his Bible burnt, and himself threatened with Censures and Persecution. Eusebius "having this advantage, as he thought against the Bishop, yet thought good to add greater Calumnies both that something might be sure to tick according to the Proverb, and that they might not utterly lose the Emperor upon whom they had several times imposed with their devised Fables.

And add thereto Murder.

33. To the other therefore about Ischyas, they join the most impudent Calumny of all others, accusing him of having Murdered Arsenius a Bishop of the Meletian Faction: Whom that the device might take, they hid in a secret place, and produced a Mans Hand, which as barbarously cut from the dead Body of Arsenius, they shewed to the People. But their sport was partly spoiled by the Confession of Ischyas, who being sharply reprehended by some honest Men, confessed the Forgery about Macarius, and the Emperor was quickly satisfied that it was a trick, yet as to the business of Arsenius, he wrote to Dalmatius to enquire about it, one that then was Censor at Antioch, forasmuch as he was bound to take notice of any Complaints concerning the violent death of his Subjects. This was the same Year that Macarius the Bishop of Jerusalem dyed, after he had sitten in that See Nineteen Years, whose Memory is Celebrated by the Roman Church, on the Tenth of March. He Succeeded Maximus, whom he had not long before Ordained Bishop of Diospolis; but the People of Jerusalem would not suffer there to settle, but reserved him as a Successor to Macarius, who knowing to be an earnest Defender of the Conclusions of the Nicene Council, and fearing some of the Arian Faction might get into his Chair, willingly acquiesced in their Choice. That Diospolis was a City of Palastine, in the Tribe of Ephraim, formerly called Lydda, which Name it changed when it grew Famous for the Idol of Jupiter there Worshipped; in after times was more taken notice of for a Council there held against Pelagius, and by reason that St. George the Martyr who suffer'd under the Persecution of Diocletian, the English Patron who had large Possessions in this Country, was here Buried, it was by the Christians dwelling thereabouts, called St. Georges by way of Consecration to his Memory.

But their Villanies are detected.

34. Athanasius being warned from Dalmatius to provide for his Tryal, so Industriously ordered the Matter, that pursuing him from place to place, by good espials at length he was detected at Tyris, and though he denied himself; yet being brought before Paul the Bishop of the place, was forced to confess himself the same Man, and how he had been wrought upon by Eusebius. The Emperor being hereof certified by Macarius a Priest whom Athanasius had dispatched to the Court for this purpose, commanded Dalmatius to desist from any further Prosecution, and rejecting his Accusers, by very obliging Letters detected these Calumnies raised against him which wrought this effect, that both Arsenius and John the late Ordained Meletian Bishop confessed their fault to Athanasius, begged his pardon, and were reconciled to the Catholic Church. And so as Athanasius tells us, the Conspiracy of the Meletians here had its period. But the Arians still considering what an Adversary their Cause had of Athanasius, and how Theod. l. i. c. 20. Athan. April. 2. Socr. l. i. c. 27.

(a) Ad An. 331. (b) Jacobus Capellus hist. Eccl. cent. quinqu. ad A.D. 327.

Socr. lib. l. c. 20. Sozom. l. 2. c. 22. * Fortiter calumniari ut aliquid herent.

Jacobus de vitriaci Hist. Theop. l. 57. Dr. Heylin.

Athan. Apol.

much Credit they had lost by receiving the foil so many times, would not here give over, but left they should be deprived of so fit an Instrument as John was, brought him about again to their Party. Then do they afresh sollicit the Emperor, telling him of fresh Complaints daily coming in against Athanasius, both many, and of great Consequence: they assure, the Witnesses that would now appear were not mean Persons, and they pray his Majesty that a Synod may be called, and the Criminal heard in a legal way.

The Arians solicit the Emperor against Athanasius.

35. Though Constantine (as at this distance one may well imagine) might have had sufficient cause both to suspect their Malice, and acquit the Bishop in his own Conscience; yet growing now old he became more easie to be wrought upon, both by the Importunities of his own Relations, and the Flatteries and Courtship of those about him, Justice withall seeming to call upon him, which the name of Five Bishops, who were ready to give in the Information, seemed very much to induce him to believe. He granted therefore their Petition, and appointed a Council to be held at Casarea in Palastine, a place picked out on purpose by Eusebius for the temper of the Clergy by whom he was to be judged, Athanasius seeing very well as Matters were devised, and how they would end; there being scarce Four Orthodox Bishops in that Country, gave his reasons to the Emperor why he might justly decline his appearance at that place. Hereat the Emperor was nettled, as conceiving his Authority injured by such a refusal, yet he betrayed not his Indignation much further than changing the place of meeting from Casarea to Tyre (for which change also some pretence was made, that the Bishops might consecrate that Famous Church lately builded at Hierusalem) he commanded him to appear there at his peril, and left he should make a default, orders the Commander in chief of those Parts to bring his Person before the Council.

Whereupon a Council is summoned to Casarea.

Another at Tyre where Athanasius is to appear at his peril.

36. To this Council were assembled such as had been of the Arian Faction at Nice, and as Eusebius thought might be most for his turn, Sixty only as Socrates informeth, over whom he appointed Dionysius the Count to preside with a Band of Soldiers for a Guard. Athanasius perceiving the Emperours mind to be alienated from him, and that he was to be convened before his Enemies under the Moderatorship of Soldiers, whereby neither could the Council, such as it was, be free, debated with himself, whether he should prefer himself, and for Three Months not Thirty (as the Copy of Sozomen now hath it) deferred his appearance, by which he gained time to understand the Matters wherewith he was charged, and how to answer them. Yet left he should give his Enemies occasion to insult, and fresh Advantages whereby further to calumniate him to the Emperor, he appeared, and with him Forty seven of his Suffragan Bishops amongst whom Potamon and Paphnutius formerly mentioned, and Macarius his faithful Presbyter was thither brought in Chains by the Souldiers. The Accusations were taken from the former Depositions against him in the Case of Ischyas and Arsenius, which though he demonstrated to be frivolous, and that Mans Ordination null, yet did he profit nothing, his Enemies being resolved, the Count taking away all Freedom, and his Souldiers offering Violence to all of the Defendants Party.

After several false Accusations.

37. When the business concerning Arsenius came to be opened, the Dead Mans Hand pretended to be cut off from his Dead Body, was produced, wherewith Arsenius who came to testify in the behalf of the Bishop, presented himself showing both Hands found and entire to the Judges. The Arians confounded at this sight, instead of Confession, broke out into a rage, facing him out that this was meer Enchantment and Delusion, and falling upon him, they had torn him in pieces, had not the Count interposed. As for the breaking of the Chalice, to all the sober Party the Story seemed sufficiently confuted by its own Vanity; but the Arians would not be content to hear, except they send some of their own Faction to see and report the Matter. This Resolution was protested against by the two Aegyptian Bishops, who importuned both the Council and Count that so strange a Resolution might not take effect, but that all things might be referred to the cognizance of the Emperor. But when neither the Arian Bishops would alter their Resolutions, nor Dionysius the Count recall those whom they had dispatched to Meoris, Athanasius departed from Tyre towards Constantinople, to lay open to the Emperor those Outragious Proceedings. Those that were sent in the mean time to Meoris assisted by Philagrius the Prefect, and the Soldiers addicted to the Arian Party, refused such Clerks and others as were ready to appear in behalf of Athanasius and Macarius, but taking their Athan. ut supra. Sozom. l. 2. c. 24. alit.

Evidence from Jews, Catechumens and Heathens, at their return to Tyre gave up to their Masters a suitable Verdict, whereupon ensued a Sentence correspondent, that Athanasius should be deprived of his Bishoprick, he suffered no more to reside at Alexandria, but John the Principal of the Meletian Faction, with others of that Gang, should be received into Communion, and all restored to their former Dignities and Preferments. Of this their Sentence and Decree they inform Constantine, as also other Bishops, whom they forbid to have any Communication whatsoever with Athanasius.

38. Several of the honest Party shewed their dislike of those Proceedings at that Council with Indignation. Paphnutius evidently perceiving the drift of Eusebius and his Party, and heard they had got a Guard suitable to their Design, stepping to Maximus Bishop of Hierusalem, who being his Brother Confessor had lost also an Eye and a Leg in the Persecution of Maxentius, and taking him by the Hand, bad him rise up, telling him it was not fit for them who had suffered such things as they had for Christ, to abide in the company of such wicked men, forasmuch as he could not but clearly perceive how contrary to Justice the business was managed; and so departing, he told him the whole Story concerning Athanasius, to whom Maximus ever after continued a most faithful Friend. And Potamon seeing Eusebius sit in State as Judge, who formerly had denied his Saviour, and Athanasius standing as a Delinquent without any respect, though of so high a Dignity in the Church as Metropolitan of such a See, he could not refrain himself, but upbraided therewith the proud and insulting Prelate. But all to no purpose, Athanasius must be ruined, that Arius might return, and with him Arianism, into the Alexandrian Province. This year died Sylvester Bishop of Rome at the last day of the Year, having governed that Church One and twenty Years; to whom succeeded Marcus, on the Eighteenth of the Calends of February. He died on the Nones of October, (October 7.) and after the See had been void Twenty days, Julius succeeded on the Sixth before the Calends of November, A. D. 336. V. C. 1089. the Ninth Indiction, the Fourth of the 278. Olympiad. Fl. Popilius Nepotianus and Facundus being Consuls.

39. The Fathers having dispatched this business, removed to Hierusalem to the Consecration of the Church upon Calvary, where they performed the Ceremony with much exactness according to the Emperours Orders. It happened in the mean while that Arius, by procurement of that Priest whom Constantia at the point of Death had commended to her Brother, was permitted to come before the Emperour, who promised him respect and countenance, provided he adhered to the Determinations of the Nicene Council. He professes to acquiesce in those Determinations, and offers to Constantine a Confession of his Faith in Writing, whereat many of the Orthodox Party quarrelled, for that it wanted the word Consubstantial. Hereupon the Emperour resolving to reserve the Examination of it to competent Judges, sent it to Jerusalem. The Orthodox there plainly perceived that by this new Creed, and leaving out the word Consubstantial (however he called the second Person God, and Begotten of his Father before all Ages) he overthrew all that the Nicene Fathers had Established, yet could they do no good, Eusebius his Party being so strong, that they approved of his Confession, and Decreed he should be received into Communion. Athanasius ere this was got to the Emperour, before whom he so laid open the Original and Progress of the Calumnies devised against him, that Constantine in great displeasure commanded his Judges to appear before him. There Eusebius the Ring-leader, with Five others of the most bold appeared, the rest slipping away to their own Churches. Now made they no mention of the breaking of the Chalice, or the matter concerning Arsenius, but preventing the danger of being called to account for what had passed at Tyre, charged him with new and strange Matter. (This was no less than that he should stop the Corn which from Egypt (the Granary of the Empire) was wont yearly to be sent to Constantinople.)

40. This being attested by Five Bishops, which being formerly of his Party, had now apostatized to the Arians, the Emperour gave them credit as his Favourers, and in great wrath refusing to hear his Apology, banished him to Triers a City of the Belgick Gall, now the See of one of the Ecclesiastical Electors of the German Empire. He being banished, the Arians also procured the same Judgment to be given against his Orthodox Suffragan Bishops, and this being past, and the way made for Arius, they procure him License to return to Alexandria. There he had not long been, but he raised a Tumult in the City, most of the

Demetrius

Athanasius

Soc. l. 2. c. 32. &c. Athanasius

The Arian Bishops deprive Athanasius of his Bishoprick.

Sylvester Bishop of Rome dies. He is succeeded by Marcus. Then Julius.

Another charge against Athanasius.

Upon which he is banished to Triers in Gall.

Arians return to Alexandria.

Inhabitants whereof refused to Communicate with him, affirming that as to Religion they were of the same Judgment as formerly, and being much exasperated for the Banishment of their Bishop. The news coming to Constantinople, the Emperour sends for Arius and John the Meletian Bishop his great Friend and abetter. Much of the blame lighting upon the Meletians, he was banished, and Arius kept still at Constantinople, where presently great stir happened again about him, some remaining stedfast to the Nicene Creed, and others affirming the opinion of Arius most agreeable to the Truth. At this time Alexander, who a little before had succeeded Metrophanes, governed that Church, a Man very Pious and Orthodox. Him Eusebius threatened fore, in case he would not receive the Arch-Heretic into Communion, which he as constantly refusing, till the Matter was brought before the Emperour, Constantine calls for Arius, and taking notice that where-ever he goes still Tumults follow him; he asked him whether or no he did really imbrace and hold the Nicene Faith. He professing that he did, the Emperour required his Subscription, and when he had as willing, set his Hand to the Articles, to take away all scruple from Constantine, made Oath also, as he was enjoined. But it is said that he equivocated in this latter, having his private Opinion in his own Sense in Writing under his Arm when he made his Oath, and that he Swore in relation to that, and not to what he Subscribed in the Emperours presence.

41. The Emperour now satisfied about Arius his Judgment, commands Alexander the Bishop of Constantinople to receive him into Communion. He seeing now his Disputes would not prevail, and that there was no struggling with the Emperour, betook himself to Prayer, wherein he spent several days and nights, desiring of Almighty God, that if it was his pleasure to permit Arius to come to the Communion, he might be taken first out of the way, and never see it; but if he intended Mercy to his Church, to cut off that Man. The Lords day being come, he passed early in the Morning (that he might get into the Church before Alexander) being conducted in great State, till he came to Constantine's Forum, where whether naturally or out of fear (which sometimes produceth such an effect) he found himself seized with a Laske, whereupon being directed to the common Privy near at hand, there together with Excrements he voided his Entrails, Guts, Spleen, Liver and all, and was found dead in a strange and horrible manner. Sozomen Writes that this place for a long time continued very remarkable, so as to be pointed at by all Passengers, and so execrable that no Man would make use of it; till at length a rich Arian that he might abolish the memory of the thing, purchased the House, pulled it down, and raised other Buildings in the room of it. But the horror of this Mans Death had this effect, that many formerly in Error seeing God thus bear witness to the Truth, were Converted to it; those of Eusebius his Party were stricken with great Terror, and the Emperour himself was more confirmed in the Orthodox Faith.

42. But he himself lived not long after, a Judgment as some supposed for his too much easiness (to speak modestly) towards that Heretic, and his very unequal carriage towards Athanasius. Feeling himself sick, he left Constantinople and sailed to Helenopolis, where he made use of the hot Baths near the Town, but when they gave him no Relief, growing still sicker, he left them, and went to Nicomedia, where in the Suburbs he called the Bishops together, and signified to them his desire of Baptism, saying it is now time that at last we should receive that Sign of Immortality, telling them that he had so long deferred it, because he intended to have been Baptized in the River Jordan, after the Example of our Saviour. His Baptism being performed, he gave great Sign of incredible Joy, and a little after that died; as writeth Eusebius or the Author of the History of his Life, with whose Narration do consent all the Antient * Ecclesiastical Writers, both as to place and time, that his Baptism happened both a little before he died, and that at Nicomedia; although Pope Hadrian and some Modern Writers, as Baronius, Genebrard, and others contend that he was Baptized at Rome in the Nineteenth Year of his Reign; and Binius, who hath made Annotations upon the Councils strangely affirms that the Nicene Council by the consent of all Writers was held after that Constantine was Baptized. Their Arguments are drawn from a supposed Leprosie, wherewith they make the Emperour to be stricken for his hainous Sins, as Persecuting of the Christians till about that time, and the Murder of Crispus his Son, with others whom he most unjustly put to death. Sylvester Bishop of Rome, who as they pretend Baptized him, is said to have fled to the Mountains, being forced from his Flock by his Persecution, Thence is sent for to Constantinople.

And the Bishop commanded by the Emperour to receive Arius into Communion.

Which is prevented by Arius his sudden death.

Constantine is Baptized at Nicomedia.

Socr. lib. 1. c. 32. Theod. l. 1. c. 14.

L. 2. c. 25.

* Soc. l. 1. c. 32. Soc. l. 2. c. 32. Theod. l. 1. c. 31. Hieron. contin. Chron. c. 46. Athanasius. Oration. in eadem Theodosii Panegyricus latus alii.

Persecution, whereas not only the consent of History, but all the several Edicts of Constantine by their Date do clearly evidence that he was converted long before this time, and Crispus his Son, as appears by the Consular Tables, was alive after this Year. But for the supportment of a spurious Council, which making much for the Papal Interest, they would have to follow this Baptism and held at Rome by Silvester, as also to gain credit to the Donation of Constantine, which as an act of Gratitude must also have ensued this his Baptism; they take those Arguments from Zozimus a professed Enemy both of this Emperor and of all Christianity, to the disparagement of the Catholic Cause, which they would make truckle under that of a Private Church. But to all their Arguments and Weak Pretences, our Dr. Crackanthorpe hath abundantly answered in his Defence of Constantine.

43. The Baptism indeed of Constantine at Nicomedia being performed by Eusebius Bishop of that City, as is supposed at the first sight would seem to determine that question, whether or no all his actions against Athanasius, and his siding with that Bishop and his Party, may not justly denominate him an Arian, at least as to us, whose Capacity reacheth no further than the bounds of Probability. But although we may observe that in his old Age he was more easy and lay open to the Craft, Insinuations and Flatteries of those about him (and amongst the rest those of that Courty Prelate Eusebius) which Heathen \dagger Writers have also taken notice of, yet have we sufficient evidence to acquit him from the guilt of that Heresie. For his constant adhering to the Nicene Faith is even in the Story of Athanasius all along perspicuous, against whom Eusebius never durst ingage, whatever his private designs were, in the Notion of an Arian, pretended a love only to good Order, Discipline and Tranquillity of the Church, and upon pretence of Athanasius his Male-administration, raised such a Storm against that good Bishop. The Emperor having to do with so strong a Faction in his Court, which was formerly bred through his natural affection to his Sister, and now carried on by the cunning of Eusebius, was drawn to do many things which really tended to the Service of that Party. But these Persons appeared not to him in their true Drefs, they acted not this part but in Disguises and Vizards, they walked one way, but he being in sight ever looked another. During his whole Reign Eusebius and his Party durst not recant, his Recantation ever pretending an adherence to the Determinations of the Nicene Fathers. The Emperours Inclinations were for Peace, and for burying of all old Displeasures, his Age deprived him of his former Activity and Sagacity, whereby he was more easily wrought upon, but it is clear that he never countenanced Eusebius but as a Catholic and Orthodox Bishop.

44. The Laws also made by him, declare him to have been of this Disposition. For in his One and twentieth year, in his own and his Childrens name, he (a) forbids that such Privileges and Immunities as he had conferred upon Orthodox Clerks, should be transferred upon Hæreticks, by which must be meant the Nicene Fathers. Being sensible also what Heartburnings, Divisions, Scandalous Words and Works those Differences in Religion had raised, not only betwixt Christians and Heathens, but Christians themselves, anathematizing and nick-naming one another, by a Law made in the Twenty third year, he commands that Infamous Libels should not be examined and canvased but burnt, as he formerly at the Council of Nice had never looked in, but burnt such Complaints and Petitions as the Bishops had presented against one another. Indeed the time was late to which he deferred his Baptism, but it was not his single and peculiar fault; it was a bad Custom which much obtained at that time amongst all sorts of Professors; not only Emperours but others who afterwards did especial Service in the Church, long deferring the receiving that Christian Character, as we shall see hereafter. This may diminish if not quite remove the blame cast upon this Emperor, who for further excuse pleaded a design (though not necessary yet something plausible) of being Baptized in that place where his Saviour had formerly submitted to that Ordinance. However, the Church of Christ having received such and so great things from his Patronage and Protection, who was the first Baptized if not the first Christian Emperour of all others; the great distance of time betwixt his Age and ours ought not so to abolish our Sense of those Matters, as either to despise him, or be unthankful to God for so excellent an Instrument, much less ought we to quarrel with those Writers who having felt as well the smart of the former Persecutions, and undergone

\dagger Vistor ait Constantinum
to. mult præstantissimum, 11. sequentibus
latronem, 10.
ultimis pupil-lum fuisse.

(a) Con. Inf.
l. i. tit. 5. §. 1.

Con. Theod.
l. 9. c. 34. §. 1.

the heat of the day of Trial, as the comfort of those Refreshments the Church received from God by his means, both praise the Author and commend the Instrument.

45. But the Cardinal Annalist warm in his Purple, and not so sensible of the benefit received by Constantine, because he never felt the need of it, falls very foul upon Eusebius Bishop of Cæsarea the Author of the Ecclesiastical History, and as he supposed, of the Book called the Life of Constantine. His Language towards such a Reverend Bishop cannot be excused of Incivility, giving him the Lye, so often calling him the Architect and Deviser of Lyes, with many other extravagant Epithets, as making his Histories but a Fardle of Lyes, and composed rather for the diversion than the Publication of true Story; though he will have them truly and clearly to hold out and maintain his own Assertion against their Author, that being not only a Lye but an Hæretick, an Arian and Theopaskite, one worthily cast out of the Church, and as such to be rejected by all Readers. But all have not been of the Cardinals opinion, though Eusebius be not to be patronized in all Particulars. St. Hierome who was a more capable Judge, as living near those times, faith, He hath excellently written the Ecclesiastical History, and commends him both for that and his Chronicon. Evagrius Scholasticus beginneth his own History thus: Eusebius Pamphilus a Man without all peradventure as in other things profound, so in Penning excellent, is of such efficacy in his Works, that although he cannot make the Readers perfect Christians, yet can be so draw them by persuasion, that with prompt and willing minds they will embrace the Christian Faith. Eusebius, Socrates, Socomenus and Theodore, have written most exquisitely of the Incarnation of our most loving Saviour, &c. And to pass by many Modern Writers of the Cardinals persuasion as to Religion, remarkable is the opinion of one of their most \dagger Grave and Judicious Authors, whose judgment is, that Eusebius was a Man of great diligence and labour, of exceeding variety of reading, and of very grave judgment. Neither do I know, faith he, whether any Author either in the Latin or Greek Church, though he strive never so much, can leave more excellent Monuments of time.

46. Pope Gelasius indeed with his Seventy two Bishops doth censure the History of Eusebius, but it is only in respect of the Story of Abgarus and some few things more, not condemning the whole or the greatest part thereof. But the Fathers of the Second Nicene Synod struck him dead by their Decree that rejects and anathematizeth his Book, yea, all that read them, calling him Hæretick, an Arian and a Theopaskite, or one who taught that Christ had no Soul, but the Godhead supplied that Office, that so the Deity might be said to suffer. But his Crime was, he \dagger had taught that no Image could fully express Christ, being both God and Man, and the good Fathers not enduring that any should cross their Doctrine of Images, thus brand him, making him both an Arian and a Theopaskite, that is both an Arian and not an Arian, both a Theopaskite and not a Theopaskite; for if an Arian, then could not the Deity inform the Body, Christ not being really God, according to him, and if a Theopaskite, then the Deity informing the Body, he must have been perfect God though not perfect Man, and of the same substance with the Father, or else there must have been two real and perfect Deities. This Hæresie (a) of the Theopaskites sprung not up till about the Five hundred and thirteenth year of our Lord, more than One hundred and sixty years after the Death of Eusebius, who in all his Writings doth rightly and truly teach two distinct (b) Natures to be in Christ, and the (c) Divine Nature to be incapable of Passion, Affection or Mutation. It is true that he inclined to Arianism before the Nicene Council, and was an earnest defender of Arius; but this was but till that Synod, he being Reformed, continued Orthodox ever after, as both his own Writings and other (d) Authors abundantly testify, together with the Suffrage of Constantine the Emperor himself, (e) who gives not only his own opinion of the Man, but that also of the Catholic Church. Of late times (f) Sixtus Senensis a Man of infinite Reading, yet (abating his Parts) of great judgment, is of the same mind; whence it appears that no time indeed he was an Hæretick. By ignorance and Infirmary, falling into that Error, he did not through Pride, Arrogance, and Obstinacy therein continue; but now the case being defined by the Church, he both conformed his Belief and Deportment to its Decrees, and dying a Crackanthorpe Catholic, was Canonized for a Saint by the Greek Church, the Commemoration of his Death being celebrated on the Twenty first day of June in Palastine. The Distance of everfor, calu-mnia maliciarit, profusis adulator, &c.

Temporum

Eusebius cum hist. pollice resuit. ap. Pammach.
Apel. i. adversus Rufinum.

\dagger Census Inc.
Theod. l. i. c. 6.

\dagger Citizian
verbo Art. 6.

(a) Prælat.
in Theop.

(b) Euseb. Hist.
l. i. c. 1.

(c) Apud Soc.
l. i. c. 5.

(d) Idem id.
l. i. c. 17.

(e) Idem id.
l. i. c. 22.

(f) Idem id.
l. i. c. 22.

(g) Idem id.
l. i. c. 22.

(h) Idem id.
l. i. c. 22.

(i) Idem id.
l. i. c. 22.

(j) Idem id.
l. i. c. 22.

(k) Idem id.
l. i. c. 22.

(l) Idem id.
l. i. c. 22.

(m) Idem id.
l. i. c. 22.

He is cleared from the Aspersion of Ari- anizw.

His adhering to the Nicene
Creed.

And his Law against Hæretike

(a) Cod. Inst.
l. 1. tit. 5. §. 1.

Cod. Theod.
S l. 9. t. 34. §. 1.

Eusebius Bishop of Cesarea vindicated from the Calumny of the Cardinal Annals

Temporum
everfor, calum-niator malicio-sus, profusus adulætor. &c.

Ecclesiasticam Hist. politice texuit. Ep. ad Pammach. & Apol. 1. adversus Ruffinum.

† Cæmus loc.
Neol. l. 11, c. 6.

And Pope Gelasius by consent of good Authors

† Citantur verba Act. 6.

(2) Pratcol.
Theop.

b) Enseb. Hist.
I. a. I.

(d) Idem ibid.
l. 2. c. 17.
ead. l. 1. c. 12.
[Faint illegible text]

inst. l. 3. c. 59.
(f) In Bi-orheca in febio.

mine lib. Cui ulus. The fence of instansine.

So little did the Consideration of his having been against Images, his telling the plain truth about the Baptism of Constantine, and his not telling that which never was (viz. about the Donation) work with uninterested and unbiassed Persons.

47. It is not the least part of the Apology for Constantine, that he caused his Three Sons Constantine, Constantius and Constans to be trained up in the Orthodox Faith. Of those Three two retained the Principles they had been bred in, viz. Constantine and Constans, but Constantius revolted and turned a bitter Persecutor of the Church. It happened very ill that his Father made him the Executor of his Will and Testament, which he committed to the Hands of his Sisters Priest, whom she at her Death had commended to his care, commanding him to deliver it to no Mans Hand but to his Son Constantius, hereby as it were commending the Man to his Son, if not as a Counsellor yet as an especial Friend, whereby he got opportunity to insinuate into the Son, and instill those Principles which he durst never own to the Father. Hereupon ensued most sad and dismal Consequences to the Orthodox Party, this Priest having gained Interest by Degrees; for first he tampered with the Courtiers, then having made a Party amongst them, betook himself to the Empress and the Ladies, but especially he inveigled the Eunuchs about the Emperour, who were the great Instruments which he and Eusebius used for carrying on their Designs, being near to the Person, and having perpetually the Ear of the Prince. But in the mean time Athanasius is released from Banishment by the Emperour Constantine, in whose Dominions the City Triers was, to which he had been confined. He sent him back to Alexandria with his Letters Commendatory to the Inhabitants, telling them they could not but know that his Father did not banish their Bishop out of displeasure, but sent him out of the way of danger, and that when he died, he left it to him in charge, that Athanasius should be restored, in pursuance of which command, and to answer their desires, he now sent him to them. And so returned Athanasius to his See, after he had been absent two Years and four Months, and was received by his People with great Joy, all sorts and degrees flocking about to see him.

48. Constantius did not at all hinder his Restoration, nor the return of those other Bishops which had been his Companions in Faith and Sufferings, both least he should seem to withstand his dying Fathers orders, and should thereby disoblige his Elder Brother. But long it was not before Eusebius the Priest, and others of that Party began to insinuate into this Prince, that he was by all means to be driven from that Church. "Besides their old Calumnies they alledge great Seditions and Slaughters to have happened at Alexandria through the unwillingness of the People to receive him again; they affirm that being deprived by one Council, he cannot Canonically be restored without another, and they again accuse him of defrauding the Poor of Egypt and Lybia of that Corn which through the Munificence of Constantine was wont to be bestowed upon them. To make their Party more strong, they send their Messengers into the West to the other two Emperours, whom they labour to possess with the same prejudice against Athanasius, as also Julius the Bishop of Rome; but all this to no purpose, the Bishop also sending some of his Clerks, who easily wiped off all these Slanders. But, Matters grew still worse, the Arians insinuating themselves more and more into all Offices of the Church, and by feigned Accusations thrusting out such of the Orthodox Party as would most oppose their design. Alexander the good Bishop of Constantinople they much grudged his Seat, but let him alone, as expecting Death should save them the trouble of ousting him. This shortly came to pass, and when the old Man saw his end approaching, as careful to have some honest Man to succeed him, he named two: one Macedonius whom he thought most acceptable at Court, and Paulus whom for his Principles of Religion he commended to his Clergy.

49. Paul a Priest of his Church, and a Man eminent for Learning and Piety was accordingly chosen, Admitted and Ordained by the Bishops there Assembled, according to the Canons of the Nicene Council. The Arians having steeled for Macedonius were very much concerned for the Defeat, and Constantius the Emperour at that time coming to the City, most willingly eased them of their grief, calling an Assembly of Arian Bishops, wherein Paul was removed, and to his place preferred Eusebius Bishop of Nicomedia, the great Patron of the Faction, than Vit. Const. l. 4.

c. 32.

Sec. 12. c. 2.
Theod. l. 2. c. 1.

Sec. 12. c. 4.
Sec. 13. c. 4.

than which they could not have a more notable advantage: For now he hath not only an opportunity for residing constantly at Court, but more Power and Authority to back his purposes, which he quickly improves to the Deprivation of Eusebius Bishop of Antioch, who had been very eminent in the Council of Nice, and therefore they concluded that as well he as Athanasius and Paul were to be removed; laying to his Charge Adultery, Sabellianism and other lesser Crimes, they got him Banished to Trajanople a City of Thrace, where he died and was Buried. After him they sent many others into Banishment, some under pretence of various Crimes, others without any thing laid to their Charge, but all in truth for defending the Nicene Faith, those of the Arian party though never so despicable, being put in their Places. And from this time it is, as Baronius observeth, that, what St. Hierome hath said in his Continuation of Eusebius his Chronicle, concerning the Arian Persecution, is to take Place, viz. That henceforth this Impiety being supported by Constantius the Emperour, Persecuted with Banishment Imprisonment and other various sorts of Afflictions and Miseries first Athanasius, and then all other Bishops that were not of that Hæretical Party. This was the Fourth Year of Constantius (though St. Hierome places the beginning of those things in his Second) A. D. 340. of Rome the 1093, the last of the 279. Olympiad, the 13 Indiction, Fl. Septimius Acyndinus, and L. Aradius Rufinus Valerius Proculus being Consuls.

50. This same Year dyed Eusebius Bishop of Cæsarea, Author of the Ecclesiastical History, of whom we lately spoke, to whose Character had Baronius added his Industry in this particular, and confessed how much he was beholden to that very Person whom he had endeavoured to render so odious, it might have served for an Epitaph more expressive both of the Bishops desert and the Cardinals gratitude. But whilst these Bishops leave either their Sees or this World, Athanasius (as great Bodies have slower motions) a Person though more envied and Maligned, yet of more Interest and Authority, was not so easily removed from his Bishoprick. Julius Bishop of Rome receiving complaints against him from the Arians, as also his defensive Arguments, was by both Parties chosen Arbitrator in the controversy, and desired to call a Synod, wherein Athanasius his Cause might again be debated: He accordingly as he was Impowered calls a Synod at Rome, and appoints a time for all concerned to be present; Athanasius made his appearance, and was ready to answer, but none of his Accusers would come, though he staid for them a Year and a half, during which time he is said to have Communicated to the Italians those Monastick precepts which he had received from Antony in the Wilderness, with a Copy of the Creed, still going under his Name, which being written in Latin continued long in the Archives of the Roman Church as Baronius tells us. The Arians unbethought themselves that they should assuredly receive the Foil at Rome, the Bishops of the Western Church being generally Orthodox, they considered the Cause should only be decided by Ecclesiastics, where there should be no Count to practise, nor any Shoulders to affright and threaten their Antagonists, by which means they had formerly had the better of him. They pretended they could not safely Travel to Rome by reason of the Persian War, and detaining the Messenger which Julius the Bishop had sent for them, beyond the very day appointed, for their appearance, procured Constantius to summon them to Antioch, to the Dedication of that magnificent Church called Aureum Dominicum, formerly began by Constantine and now finished by Constantius his Son.

51. The Arians glad of such excuse for going to the Roman Synod, assembled together, to the Number of Thirty Six Bishops, with whom met so many of the Orthodox Party as to make it up Ninety Seven, or Ninety Nine. But many refused to be present (as Maximus Bishop of Jerusalem for one,) knowing before hand how matters would be determined; others were seized on in their journey and Imprisoned, and as for Julius the Roman Bishop, he neither was present, nor sent any in his room; however there met enough and more to do the business designed by the Arians, who overpowered the Orthodox, though not in Number, yet in Confidence, Resolution, and the favour of the Emperour, by whom their Decrees and Resolutions were made Authentick though Excanonical. Now "besides the charge formerly laid against Athanasius at Tyre, they make the same complaints against him which they had sent to Julius, as that he had broken the Canons, thrusting himself into his former Function without the Admission and Consent of the Council, rushing into the Church of Alexandria, after his return from Exile; moreover that he had done many acts of Violence and Injustice

Athan. Apol.
de op. ad Jul. c. 1.
Agens.

Athan. Apol.

Ad Au. D.
340.

Sec. 12. c. 2.
Grac.

Athanasius is released from Banishment.

Alexander Bishop of Constantinople
dies.

Paul chosen in his stead, but ousted by the Arians; and Eusebius of Nicomedia
translated thither.

Eusebius Bishop of Cæsarea dies.

A Synod is called at Rome, where the Arians come not

Another at Antioch, where the Arians prevailed.

"justice, having raised Tumults among the People, wherein some were Slain, others Imprisoned and beaten, and others he had forced to answer at the Bar. As for the matters objected against him at Tyre, they had been over and over Confuted, partly by their own Folly, and partly the confession of the Parties themselves that were brought against him. The report concerning the Tumults was Confuted of Fallhood, by the Letter of the Alexandrian Church, wherein Constantius is told that true Catholics use no such Weapons in their Warfare as Death, Imprisonment, Bonds or corporal Punishments; concerning which the Civil Magistrate can give best account: And as for the business concerning his intrusion into his Church, without leave or order; it's clear enough that he was not banished by the Emperor, in order to what was done at Tyre, the Matter whereof depended upon Appeal before him: but upon new Matter Originally rising before him, which being of a Political consideration, concerning the publick Peace, the Emperor might as well restore Athanasius, as banish him, without a Council.

52. Athanasius appeared not himself on purpose as some think, that the matter might not be decided. Constantius sent to Apprehend him, but he kept himself out of the way, and thereupon was Condemned both as guilty and Contumacious. To Succeed him was chosen one Eusebius, born at Edessa in Mesopotamia, who knowing well how he should be received at Alexandria, whilst Athanasius was yet alive, plainly refused their offer: Hethen is made Bishop of Emisa, and Athanasius his Chair is conferred on one who will not refuse it, as made of fit Mettle for such an Exploit, by Name Gregory, a Man altogether unknown, both to the Church and Province of Alexandria. Having dispatched Athanasius, they go about to overthrow the Nicene Faith, but such Reputation it had got, and they themselves had hitherto made Profession of it, that it must be covertly by degrees and by way of Infatuation; as all Parties and Sects hate to be called by the Name of their Founders, they disclaim that of Arius; even the Dignity of their Episcopal Office forbidding they should become Profelites to a Presbyter: They frame a Creed of their own, as scornful to Truckle under the Nicene Council, which is so plausibly Penned, as yet to beware of the word Consubstantial, or to own the Son of the same Substance and Essence with the Father. This Creed they send in an Epistle to the Churches throughout every City. But continuing at Antioch a little longer, and unbending themselves, they in a manner condemn it, framing a new one; for being conscious that they had spoken too Jejunely concerning the Divinity of the Second Person, and thereby could not possibly shun that Censure which they had indeavoured to prevent, they now profess to hold that Faith which had been delivered by the Holy Scriptures Prophets and Apostles, and so own the God-head of the Son, and yield to the word Substance; yet they acknowledge him not of very same Substance with the Father, but as it were the Image thereof without any dissimilitude. To those they subscribed and amongst them Gregory with the Title of Bishop of Alexandria, though as yet he had not seen the place; but not content with those two (thinking it seems that by the later they had given too much to the Son of God, as by the first they had ascribed too little) Theophrastus Bishop of Tyara composed another Form to which they assented; and still not satisfied, as not knowing where to fix, Athanasius tells us, they composed a fourth Form of Confession, which they sent to Constantius the Emperor into Gall, and dispersed all over the Western Churches.

53. Besides those four Creeds, they framed Twenty five Canons, against which, though several of the Ancients except, as composed by Hereticks, yet by old Collectors of Canons have they been gathered together, as made by Orthodox Bishops, and in the Council of Chalcedon two of them are cited word for word. For Hereticks may decree other things orthodoxly which are not material to the thing in Controversie, and the Arians cunningly caused the Names of Bishops eminent for their Zeal towards the Nicene Faith, to be set to the Epistle prefixed to the Canons, omitting those of Eusebius, Theognis, Maris and others, the most notorious of all Arians. And that they might not seem in the least to thwart the Council of Nice, but as concerned for its Authority, their first Canon makes it unlawful to Celebrate Easter otherwise than that Council had determined. The Second ordains that Persons Excommunicate shall not be absolved without satisfaction made, the contrary being now practiced by a new Sect lately sprung up, called Anthropomorphites; as also that none Communicate with Excommunicated Persons. The Third commands that no Clerk remove to another Church, without his Diocefans leave, and there continue. The Fourth

7. q. 1. Si quis Presbyter. Ordains

Ordains that no suspended Bishop or Clerk offer to execute his Function. The Fifth forbids Priests to separate themselves, and erect Altars amongst themselves, in contempt of the Bishops. The Sixth prohibits any to receive such as are Excommunicated by the Bishops, till they be either reconciled to them, or restored by Synods. By the Seventh, no stranger (Clerk) is to be received without Letters Commendatory. By the Eighth the Chorepiscopi are only Licensed, no Inferiour Priests, to give general Letters. The Ninth sets Limits to the power of a Bishop, those of his own Diocesis forbidding him to meddle with matters appertaining to the Metropolitan, whom it forbids to deal in things proper to him, as such, without the Council and Assistance of the rest of the (Priests or) Bishops.

54. Their Tenth Canon is for the Restraintment of the Chorepiscopi, who though they were Consecrated as Bishops, yet it pleased the holy Synod (as these Men call themselves) that they should recognize the mean of their Power, governing the Churches in the Country Villages committed to them, and content themselves with that Employment, and the ordination of Readers, Subdeacons and Exorcists, not presuming to Ordain Priests or Deacons without the Bishop of the Diocesis, upon pain of deprivation. And the Chorepiscopi they command be ordained by the Bishop to whom he is subject. The Eleventh punishes such Bishop or Clerk with deposition, as without the Letters of the Synod and Bishops of the Province, especially the Metropolitan, shall go and solicit the Emperor about business. This they did to take away benefit of Appeals from the Orthodox. And this Canon was objected against Chrysostom by his Adversaries, to whom he replied that it was made by Arians; and therefore was deservedly repealed by the Council of Sardica. But more to their purpose by their Twelfth Canon they deprive such Priests and Bishops of all hope of restitution, who being condemned by their Bishops or by Synods shall not abide by their determinations, but have recourse unto the Emperor. The Thirteenth prohibits Bishops to Ordain out of their own Province, except they be sent for by Letters from the Metropolitan and his Suffragans, under Penalty of the Ordinations being Null, and Censures inflicted upon their own Persons. The Fourteenth determines that in case of Tryal of a Bishop by his Comprovincials, part be for him, and part against him, the Metropolitan is to call other Bishops to his assistance out of other Provinces, who in conjunction with the former are to decide the controversy. The Fifteenth Confirms what is done against any Bishop by the Universal consent of the Bishops of the same Province.

55. The Sixteenth Canon commands that if a Nominal Bishop (having no Diocesis) intrude himself into a Vacant Church without the Consent and Decree of a comlear Synod, he shall by force be thence ejected, although the People make choice of him for their Pastor. Now a perfect Synod, that is to be understood where the Metropolitan presides. By the Seventeenth it is decreed that if any Bishop ordained to a particular Diocesis, neglect the charge thereof, or refuse to take the care upon him, he shall be removed from Communion till such he either execute his Office or the pleasure of a Provincial Synod concerning him be known: But in case he be thence kept by force, or otherwise not by any fault of his, the Eighteenth Canon takes care that he be elsewhere capable both of Honour and Ministerial Function, provided that he be not pragmatical in the Church where he is, and submit himself to what shall be determined in the Provincial Synod. The Nineteenth Enacts that no Bishop be Ordained without a Synod, and the presence of the Metropolitan. The Twentieth Ordains that for dispatch of Church business, that Bishops meet in Synods twice a Year throughout the Provinces. By the Twenty first Bishops are forbidden to change their Parishes Diocesis i. e. either by constraint of the People or compulsion of their Fellow-Bishops, according to the ancient appointment in this Case. By the Twenty Second they are Inhibited from intermeddling in anothers Diocesis; from ordaining any Priests or Deacons subject to any other Bishop, without his directions and consent, upon pain of Nullity, and Censures to be inflicted by the Synod.

56. The Twenty Third Canon makes it unlawful for any Bishop to appoint his Successor although at point of Death: This being a breach of the Law Ecclesiastical, which makes this appertain to a Synod, and the resolution of Bishops, who in a Vacancy have Authority to promote such as be worthy. The Twenty Fourth gives charge to Priests and Deacons to take notice of Goods belonging to Churches, that in case of the Death of the Incumbent Bishop there be no confusion, that neither his Goods be seized on in right of the Church, nor such as really belong to the Church be imbezell'd by pretence of his Interest. The Twenty Fifth and last gives power to the Bishop to dispence the Goods of the Church to those that have need, and to supply himself with things necessary, but in case either he himself or his Domesticks, Sons or Kindred, by his permission make wast of those things, and convert them that belong to the Church into their own private use, either the Bishop or his Presbyters so doing to the great loss of the Power and Scandal of the Ministerial Function, it subjects them to the Censure of a Provincial Synod. To these Canons Thirty Bishops are said to have Subscribed, amongst which some were of the Orthodox Party; although some, if not most of them, as is clear from the History of this affair were made to entrap them. The Sum of the Councils made by Carranza, tells us that this Council of Antioch was approved by the Sixth general Council summoned to Constantinople, and Celebrated in Trullo; as appeareth by the Second Canon of the Greek Edition, concerning which we shall enquire hereafter : And also by Pope Dionysius, as appeareth by Eusebius in his Ecclesiastical History-book 7. * C. 24. and 25. Than which nothing can be more ridiculous : For how could Eusebius write of this Council who was dead the Year before ? That Council which Eusebius writeth of in those Chapters was held against the Heresie of Paulus Samosatanus, about the Twelfth Year of Gallienus the Emperour, when Dionysius was Bishop of Rome, A. D. 264. Just Seventy six Years before this other, for which this Scioles strangely mistakes it.

57. But some of those Canons were also designed against certain Hereticks newly crept up in the Church, a sign that Thieves may fall out when they have several Ends and Interests. There was one Andeius born, as Epiphanius writes, in Mesopotamia, who being of a very strict Life and Zealous, did to declaim against the looseness of Ecclesiastical Persons, that for his freedom of Speech being hated and persecuted, he separated from the Church, and in his old Age was banished by Constantius into Sycharia; the Bishops having accused him of a designed Rebellion : Having many Followers he is said in Sycharia to have Erected many Monasteries, and Travelling farther into Gothia, by his Preaching to have Converted many to the Faith ; in great admiration amongst all Men for his extraordinary Zeal and Sanctity. But his zeal was not according to knowledge, teaching that because it is said God made Man after his own Image; God had the former Shape and Members of a Man. He also taught that Easter was to be kept on the Fourteenth Moon, as the Jews observed it, to oppose which opinion; the First of those Canons seemeth to be made, and that abstention was to be granted to Offenders without any satisfaction to the Church in token of Penitence ; to obviate which Doctrine they framed their Second Canon. He is blamed for condemning the Riches of the Clergy, for holding that darkness, Fire and Water were uncreated, His Followers from his own Name were called Andiani, but especially from his opinion concerning the Form of God Anthropomorphites. Men kept themselves separate from the Church, because Users and wicked Men were suffered therein, but very few of them remained in the time of Epiphanius.

therein, but very few of them remained in the time of Euphrasius.
 58. But the Synod of Antioch being concluded after some Months, the Bishops returned to their Sees, and Eusebius the Ringleader of the Arians went to his long Home, or to his own Place; dying immediately after the Council broke up, as * Socrates tells us. Being rid of him the Orthodox party now again made choice of Paul, who had been formerly Elected; and the Arians pitch upon Macedonius, whereupon ensueth such Tumults that many of both sides thereby perished, and Hermogenes a Commander, who taking a journey into Thrace, was ordered to take Constantinople in his way, and displace Paul, had first the house wherein he was fired over his head, and then was pulled out and kill'd by the incensed Multitude. Constantius upon report hereof, came from Antioch to Constantinople, where he thrust Paul out of the Church, and to punish the Citizens took from them 40000 measures of Corn, viz. half of the quantity that his Father had given them daily for ever, to be sent from Alexandria, and charged upon the Imperial Revenue rising from Aegypt: He deferred to nominate Macedonius their Bishop, being very angry not only for accepting the Place without his knowledge and consent, but in respect of those that were slain in the Contentts betwixt him and his Antigonists; yet he gave him leave to execute his Function, in that Church only where he had been chosen Bishop, and returned back to Antioch. And now must we return with him, and thence where we left, prosecute the Story of Athanasius.

CHAP. III. The Constantinopolitan Roman Empire.

59. The Arians having held their Meeting at Antioch, and refused to appear at Rome at a Synod, to the calling of which they themselves had given occasion, by referring the Matter to the cognizance of Julius; he in a Synod of Fifty Bishops examined the Matter concerning Athanafius, pronounced him innocent, and received him into Communion, together with Marcellus Bishop of Ancyra in Gallia the leffer, and many other Bishops and Presbyters condemned and outed by the Hæretical Party. But the Arians hearing this news at Antioch where yet they continued were very wroth, and fending back the two Priests he had sent to them, whom they had retained on purpose all this while, somewhat sharply expostulated with the Bishop. They complained that the time set them for appearance was too short, and that he had taken upon him to absolve Athanafius and the rest, signifying that if any were banished the Church, and Excommunicated by their Decree and Censure, it was not his part to intermeddle, nor to take cognizance of their Sentence, no more than when his Predecessor had removed Novatus out of the Church of Rome, they had reſtited and contraried his doings. In the mean time Gregory the appointed Successor of Athanafius goes down to take Possession of the Church of Alexandria, where he is gladly received by the Arians, and as earnestly rejected by the Orthodox, who were the more concerned because Athanafius their true and lawful Pastor was now amongst them, being returned from Rome upon notice of the Resolution taken at Antioch to assert his just Title and Interest against this Intruder. But Gregory had the advantage, bringing with him Letters from the Assembly of Antioch, the Emperours Mandate, and being guarded by Philagrius the Præfectus Augustalis, who according to orders received from the Prince, had with an Army of Five thousand Men brought him to Alexandria. Horrid Outrages were committed by both Parties to the disgrace of the Christian profession, but especially by the Gregorians for the better Celebration of Easter, which this Year fell on April 11. Athanafius finding the City too hot for him, was forced to fly, and returned as fast as he could to Rome, whence, that he might not be prevented by some false account from the Gregorians, he wrote his Epistle to all Orthodox Christians a little before the Death of Eusebius Bishop of Nicomedia, for publick satisfaction he wrote in this Epistle such things in haste as in his other Writings he communicates more fully, especially in his Epistle to those that lived Solitarily, or Monastical Lives wherein he compriseth such things as were done by the Arians against the Orthodox Party, especially those of the Church of Alexandria.

60. Gregory being got into Possession of that Church, made a Progress in the Government thereof suitable to his beginning, managing his Office like an Hæretick and a Tyrant. In the mean while those of his Party perceiving that whatever they had pretended, yet they suffered in Reputation as Arians, a Character they shunned, as ignominious to their Episcopal Degree, to receive a Denomination from a meer Presbyter, and one who was Infamous both in his Life and Death, they therefore agree once more to meet at Antioch. There they frame another Confession of Faith, so exceeding long and tedious, that it got the Epithere of Memorabilia, and this they sent to the Western Bishops for their Approbation. But they missed of their design herein also, being still unfortunate in all their Creeds. For the Cheat was easily perceived, they having again in this omitted the word Consubstantial, although they heaped great Epithets and Titles upon the Son of God; and this seems the true reason why the Western Bishops rejected their Creed, though they might pretend they were not well skilled in their Terms and Propriety of the Language, and thereby put them off, referring themselves to the Nicene Council as sufficient without any new Glosses and Interpretations; but that their Ignorance in the Greek Tongue should be the only cause, as Socrates saith it was, is very improbable, the times were not so illiterate, nor intercourse betwixt the Eastern and Western Churches so stopped up, as to give the least countenance to such an Assertion. This Synod to which assembled Bishops from almost all the East) was held Three years after the other, wherein were framed the Four Creeds, in the Eighth year of Constantius, A.D. 344. Salustius Autor and Leontius being Consuls.

61. Atbanasius all this while continued at Rome, where Julius the Bishop could do him little good for Three years together, nor Paulus the Elect of Constantinople, nor any of the Orthodox Party, though he espoused their quarrel and wrote into the East on their behalf. But now their Cause became more understood by Confians the Emperour, who could not but take notice of all this noise betwixt the Western and Eastern Prelates, and thereupon bethink of the Publick Peace, which is not sooner broke any ways than through Heats and sifting about Religion, which were also more unreasonable at this time when the Persian, the Common Enemy from without threatened the Tranquillity of the Empire. This was a convenient Season for Athanasius to lay open his Grievs, being commended to the Emperour with all advantage possible both by Julius Bishop of Rome, and Hofius of Corduba, who also earnestly solicited him about the calling of a General Council. Being sent for by Constantine, he went to Milain where then the Court was, and he and his Friends so wrought that they obtained a Letter from the Emperour to his Brother Constantinus about the Summoning of a Council. He shewed him the necessity of Summoning the Bishops of both Empires together, amongst whom there seemed to be difference both in matters of Opinion touching some Points of Faith, as also for Supremacy and Jurisdiction, he desired him to use his Power in getting together the Prelates of the East, who, that they might be the easier perswaded, he nominated Sardica a City of Illyricum as very convenient situate upon the Borders of both Empires, but more commodious for them, with whom he would take care that those of the West should meet at the time appointed. In the mean while was a Synod held at Colein May 11. against Euphrates Bishop of that City, who for denying the Divinity of Christ, with Photinus and Marcellus, was depozed by the unanimous consent of the Bishops of Gall, amongst whom Athanasius is said to have been present.

59. The

A General Council at Sardica.

62. In the Eleventh year after the Decease of Constantine, and the Consulship of Fl. Eusebius, and Fl. Rufinus, in the Eleven hundredth Year of Rome, the Third of the 281 Olympiad, the Fifth Indiction, A. D. 347. there met (as Athanasius wrote) about Three hundred Bishops out of the West, and (as Sabinus counted) Seventy six out of the East, to the Council summoned at Sardica, amongst whom was Ischyrras so often mentioned, whom the Depozers of Athanasius had preferred to the Title of a Bishop. The reason why no more met out of the Eastern Churches, though the place lay more convenient for them, and in the Territories of their own Empire, was despair of any Issue suitable to their former Achievements. Some alleged infirmity of Body, and others complained of the shortness of time, blaming the Bishop of Rome for not letting them have more timely notice, whereas an whole Year and an half intervened from the Date of the Summons to the time of the Meeting. When the Council met, the Arians perceiving how things were like to go, withdrew to Philippi a City about a days Journey distant from Sardica, whence they sent to the rest frivolous Excuses why they could not be present, and withall signified that they could not joyn with them as long as Athanasius and Paulus Persons formerly condemned at Antioch, were permitted to sit amongst them. Hofius who presided in the Council, sent them word that the Council was resolved, though in their absence, to proceed in the Examination of the Cause of these Bishops, and willd them to be present, that they might if they could make good those Charges against them, which never yet seemed justly proved, and prevent the Condemnation of themselves for their unjust Censures. This warning doing no good, the Orthodox Party fell to the Examination of Witnesses, and after a full and indifferent Hearing acquitted Athanasius and Paulus; restored them to their Churches, and inflicted upon the Contumacious Bishops the same Censures which they had formerly executed upon these Innocent Persons.

63. After this when it was moved that a New Confession of Faith should be framed, it was resolved in the Negative, forasmuch as Multiplication of Creeds would beget Confusion and Uncertainty, whilst variety of Terms and Phrases would perplex the Readers, who would not know where to rest, or wherein to fix, and by this means all those that followed might pretend to amend what their Predecessors had done, and so as well the Nicene Creed as others should be thought Insufficient and Imperfect. They resolved therefore to stand by the Nicene Creed, only for to prevent mistakes, to lay open the cunning of the Arians, and prevent their Subterfuges, they explicated (as some have written) the Clause of one Substance, and set forth the Hæresie of that Assertion that the Son of God is not of the same Substance with the Father. This they published in their Acts or a Narrative of their Proceedings, wherein also they shewed their Reasons why they acquitted Athanasius and the rest, with the causeless depar- ture of the Arian Bishops, and their obstinate refusal to joyn with them. They in the mean time are not idle, but act quite contrary to the Proceedings, condemn-

The Orthodox Bishops stick to the Nicene
Creed.

Athanasius ad Constantinum.
See. l. 2. c. 20.
See. l. 1. c. 9.

Cent. Tom. 1.

But the Arians make a new one.

denning such as had absolved Athanasius, and Julius Bishop of Rome amongst the rest, and make a new Confession of Faith, against which the other had firmly resolved. By reason of this contrary proceeding of those several Parties, the Resolutions and Acts of this Council have been variously accepted and reported in latter times, many things being cited as Decreed by the Sardican Council, contrary to the Testimony of Athanasius himself, who had reason to know what passed, although St. Augustin and others grant those Decrees to have been of this Council, but except against it as Hæretical and Arian. So that great Confusion and uncertainty even in these times appears to have been amongst the best knowing in reference to this Council, which seizes Baronius with admiration. Many also since the time that he wrote, considering the Summons was universal, would gladly with him give it the name of a General or Occumenical Council. But when they consider how it was divided into several Parties or Factions, how many guiltless were condemned, and how many guilty were acquitted by both Parties, and for these reasons of Ambiguity and Injustice, how the Orthodox for many Ages were shy of receiving any of its Acts as Authentical, they conclude that the Cardinal in giving so high a Title to this Synod, hath not at all advantaged the Opinion concerning the Infallibility of General Councils.

64. For they acquitted Marcellus of Hæresie laid to his charge by the Arians, from which Orthodox Antiquity is far from absolving him: And so uncertain were these Synods Determinations, that all Parties made use of them, and renounced them when it stood most with their own advantage, as Baronius himself instanceth in several Particulars. So that granting the Summoning of the Council to have been Occumenical, yet if we call Antiquity to give Testimony, little of certainty can it produce upon which to found any Catholick Assertions, the Relations of Athanasius being most Authentick, which were as much known to others as us, and yet they follow other Authors. However as to Ecclesiastical Discipline these Fathers are said to have made One and twenty Canons; whereof the First upon the Proposition of Hofius taking notice how little good former Synods had done by their Prohibitions in this Particular, ordains that such Bishops as flitte and remove from one Church City or Diocess to another be Excommunicated even from the Laity; and the Second at the instance of the said Person decrees the same Censure to be inflicted, although they be solicited to this remove by the Importunity of the People, which easily may be by Corruption wrought into such an humour. The Third Canon forbids that any Bishop remove out of one Province into another, except he be invited by his Brethren, and if any Bishop think himself aggrieved in any Cause determined by his Comprovincials, upon Hofius his motion, it was resolved he might appeal to the Bishop of Rome. Indeed his Reputation was not a little enhanced by his continuing Orthodox in those times of Trial. So that the Dignity of that City receiving fair advantage from these Controversies, whilst the Arians justly denied his right, yet the Orthodox might assert his capacity (not Authority) to determine their Differences. And hence were afforded Opportunities and Advantages for that Supremacy which vicissitude of times, and the comportment of Affairs suggested afterward to the Roman Prelates. But the Canons of this Council in behalf of the Bishop of Rome for the advancement of his Authority, the Fathers of the African Council universally assert to be Supposititious, who affirm in their Letters to the Pope that no such thing can be found in any Synod of the Fathers. Now had there been any such Canons, doubtless they could not have been ignorant of them.

65. Upon the motion of Gaudentius a Fourth Canon was made, which forbade the Ordination of a Bishop into his room, who being depozed, appealed to the Bishop of Rome, till the Matter was heard and adjudged by the said Bishop. The Fifth Canon at the instance of Hofius, takes care that in case one Bishop in a Province be remaining, wherein formerly were several, and this Bishop at request of the People, wanting Pastors, refuse to ordain any more, the neighbouring Bishops contribute their assistance to their just desire, and ordain them a Bishop. The Sixth expressly forbids the Ordaining of a Bishop for one Village or small City, to the care of which one Priest sufficeth, lest thereby the Dignity and Authority Episcopall incur contempt; which it seemed to have done by means of Ischyrras whom the Arians had ordained Bishop, but to such a See as formerly did belong to a simple Parish; being not a Parish of it self, but a Village or Hamlet appertaining to another Town. The Seventh Canon gives liberty conjectura.

Diff. 8. Mæ

6. 9. 4. Of Episcopos.

Vide Whit Lectura.

Diff. 6. 2. 2.

liberty, in case of an Appeal, to the Bishop of Rome, the Appellant desiring it; to that Bishop to send those who may join with the other Bishops in judging the Appellant. The Eighth inhibits the Custom of Bishops flying to the Court, without the Commendation of their Brethren, or the Summons of the Emperor, whereby much Scandal had been lately given. The Ninth gives directions how a Bishop may send his Deacon to the Metropolitan, and he commend him to those Bishops where the Court resides. Or he may by his Deacon solicit his Friends at Court if he have any. And if it be at Rome, the Synod orders that the Petitions be delivered to their most Holy Brother and Fellow Bishop of the Roman Church, who upon Examination finding them just and fitting, is to use care and diligence that they be conveyed to the Emperours presence.

66. At the instance of Alipius, it was by the Tenth Canon made Lawful for Bishops to betake themselves to the Court in behalf of Infants and Widows. But lest under specious Pretences such Liberty be abused, and such Scandal happen as formerly the Impudence of some had brought upon the Church; the Eleventh Canon ordains that such as should break the former bounds be deprived. And that this Canon might take effect, Gaudentius the Bishop further propounded, that such Bishops as lived in Canali, or the way of the publick Posts, should stop such of their Brethren as travelled towards the Court, and upon Examination according to the Merit and Purport of their business, either forbid upon pain of Excommunication, or allow their Journey, which was unanimously Decreed. Yet lest any should through Ignorance of this Canon be surprized, at the request of Hofius, the Twelfth Canon provides that such should have notice of it. Then forasmuch as great Inconvenience happened by the sudden Promotion of Persons to the Episcopal Function, and to prevent such damage as may happen to the Church by Novices, the Fathers agreed to a Thirteenth Canon recommended by Hofius, forbidding any to be made a Bishop per saltum, or except he had passed through the Offices of Reader, Deacon or Priest, whereby his Abilities and Virtues might be thoroughly known before his Preferment to so high a Calling. Because much Mischief and Scandal had happened by reason of the stay of Bishops out of their own Dioceses and Provinces too long a time; Hofius also advised the Fathers, that forasmuch as in a former Synod they deprived such Lay-Persons of Communion as should absent themselves for three Lords days or three Weeks together, from Church in the Cities where they dwelt: the same might be Decreed concerning a Bishop, who without great necessity was absent from his Church that same space of time, and it pleasing them well, a Fourteenth Canon was framed to this purpose. For the further enlargement of which, a Fifteenth was added at the motion of the said Hofius, wherein is also contained, that a Bishop, if he cannot be in his own Territories, he ought to go to the next Church where there is a Priest, lest he should pass over a Lords-day without going to Church at all; but he is so to order his business where his Revenues lie, that he be not absent from his Cathedral above three Weeks.

67. For the preserving of Peace and Concord Hofius procured the Sixteenth Canon, forbidding any Bishop to receive any Clerk into Communion, Excommunicated by another, upon pain of being Censured by a Synod. But lest through the passion and hastiness of any Bishop innocent Persons should at any time suffer; Power is given by the Seventeenth Canon to the Neighbouring Bishops to hear and determine such Matters, and severely to rebuke such as they should find to have carried themselves irreverently towards their Bishops. The Eighteenth at the motion of Januarinus, forbids the enticing of Clerks from other Bishops, and Ordaining them in their own Dioceses: Which Hofius found to reasonable, that by a Nineteenth Canon he obtained a Nullity decreed on the Ordination of Ministers, subject to other Bishops, performed without the consent of their Dioceses, with Admonitions and Censures to be inflicted upon the Ordainers. The Twentieth Canon renews former Decrees made against the stay and abode of Clerks, such as were Strangers, at Thessalonica. The Twenty First and last Canon at the motion of Hofius, but suggestion of Olympius; decreed that such as were Persecuted for the Testimony of a good Conscience, and for bearing Witness to the Orthodox and Catholic Faith, forced into other Cities, should be received with Humanity and Benevolence. And the whole Synod said, all those Constitutions, let the Catholic Church disperse throughout the World receive; and all the Bishops which had met together from divers Provinces, subscribed scribed faith the Latin Edition of this Council to the Number of 121. But Balsamon in his Greek Copies hath no such Number, but writes that 341 Bishops met at Sardica, and Decreed those things, but in his Copies the Eighteenth Canon is wanting.

68. The Council of Sardica being broken up, and each one departed towards their proper Sees, great Outrages were committed by the Arians, against all such of the Orthodox party as they could light off; whereof Athanasius gives several examples. And such was the issue of this, as well as other Councils, that the breach was so far from being made up, that it was much more enlarged. For the East and Western Churches were, as Socrates telleth us, now divided, the place which severed their Communion, being the Mount Tiviscit, between Ibryrium and Thrace, where every of them among themselves, though they differed about the Faith, yet the quarrel being laid aside, Communicated together; but beyond that, there was no Communion of the contrary Parties. They were called Eastern and Western, especially out of the respect to the two Empires so Named; not upon any exact Geographical account: As if the North and South parts of the World might not justly challenge their Share in the Provinces; but the Church, as she took the Model of her Precincts from that of the State, so herein also followed that Division of the Empires.

69. The determination of the Synod for restitution of the Bishops to their own Sees. Notwithstanding Constantius pursued the inclinations of the Arian Party, rather persecuting those that were already in, than restoring the ejected, till such time as his Brother Constantus found himself more than ordinarily concerned. Having found that more difficulty than ordinary was made about Athanasius his return to his See, he sent for him from Naisus, whether he had betaken himself, and commanded him to abide at Aquileia, under his own Protection: Then wrote he to his Brother Constantius, more earnest Letters than formerly, minding how deeply the Honour of them both was concerned, in putting the determinations of that Council which had been summoned by their Joynt Authority to Sardica, to Execution; however he told him, that for his part he was very sensible, what ever he might be, of his duty in that particular, and being resolved effectually to prosecute that design, he advised him to regard his own Honour, and restore Athanasius and the rest to their places, if not, he told him he would in Person make an Expedition, and see them restored to their Sees, whether he would or no. Those Letters were sent with the determinations of the Council by two Bishops Euphrates and Vincentius, whom the Synod had chosen to go to Constantius, with whom Constantus joyned Salianus a Count. Coming to Constantinople, and finding the Emperor was at Antioch, they Travelled thither, but before their arrival, their coming was known to Stephen Bishop of that City, who had been a Member of the Arian Convencie at Philippopolis.

70. He as well to frustrate their Errand, as to blast the reputation both of their Persons and Party, suborns a Rude young Fellow called Onager to bring a Common Strumpet into the Inn where the two Bishops lay, and privately convey her into their Chamber: The Villany was so far managed as to convey the Whore into the Room where Euphrates was then in Bed, Vincentius being also at his rest in an inner Chamber; and according to agreement, the Company ready at the Door entered the Chamber, and finding her there where they had put her, exclaimed abundantly, and a Tumult was raised: Vincentius upon this getting up, the Gates of the Inn were shut, yet Onager and other of the Clerks made their escape, but the Strumpet together with seven of the Conspirators they seized on, and carried them before the Magistrates, where upon Examination the whole Plot was discovered, which Stephen also the Bishop had not so much impudence to deny: Hereupon by command of the Emperor, such Bishops as then were at Antioch deprived him of his Bishoprick, into which was chosen one Leontius, a Man not much better, who had castrated himself, as it's said, that he might the more safely without scandal keep Company with a certain Woman whom he pretended to be a Virgin; and this Fellow they promoted expressly contrary to the first Canon of the Nicene Council.

71. The Villany of Stephen had this effect upon Constantius, that considering with himself, how the Arians might have dealt in this sort with others of the Orthodox Party, it made him seriously to reflect upon the Contents of his Brothers Letters. Having viewed the determinations of the Council; and received the advice of his own Bishops, rather to permit the return of Athanasius, than engage upon his account in a War, now at such time as the Persians were upon the Borders

The Church at the State divided.

In East and Western.

Constantius sends to his Brother Constantius about Athanasius his return to his See.

The Mischiefers abused by the Villany of Stephen.

Al. foli.

L. 2. c. 22. qu.

Sec. L. 3. c. 19. Athanasius sent as prisoner. Theod. l. 2. c. 9. 10.

Borders, he sent his Orders to his Lieutenants in Egypt, not to molest those of his Party. His answer to his Brother was, that he was very ready to comply with him, in the executions of the Decrees of the late Synod; that he was not against the restitution of Athanasius, for whom he kept the Church of Alexandria vacant, to which he might return at his pleasure. Athanasius not knowing well how to trust to his Message, removed to Millain, where he received a Letter from Constantius himself, wherein he tells him, that he commiserated his long Sufferings, that he had long e're this sent for him to Constantinople, but that he expected he should have made application to himself; which because he thought he had not done, rather out of fear than any neglect of his Person or Authority, he now out of his good inclinations to him, assured him the kindness unasked for, of restoring him to his Native Country, and his Bishoprick: When he demurred yet a little, as thinking if the Emperour had a real kindness for him, or intended him any good, he would rather have suffered him to take the nearest way by Sea to Alexandria, than call him to Constantinople, and thereby force him upon a dangerous Journey, wherein he might be way laid by his Enemies; a second Letter came, and a third, enforced by those of some Noble-men his Friends, and brought by a Priest and a Deacon, whom Constantius had sent to encourage him to the Journey.

72. Athanasius hereupon betook himself to Rome, where advising further with the Bishop and his other Friends, they were clear for his venturing to Constantinople, and Julius sent by him Letters of Recommendation and Congratulation for his return to the Churches of Alexandria, to be seen in the History of Socrates. He took his way then to Constantinople, where when he found not the Emperour, he followed him to Antioch, and getting easily Audience, was received by him very Courteously. He found the Emperour constant to what he had written, and when he laid open his Case, and the many injuries he had undergone, through the Calumnies of his Enemies, he seemed to acquiesce in what he said, and swore to him for the time to come, he would not harken to any complaints against him. His dispatch for Alexandria he obtained sooner through the jealousy of his Enemies, who knowing his parts, were unwilling he should contract any familiarity with Constantius, and his presence seemed mightily to encourage the Orthodox Party at Antioch, with whom he Communicated privately, refusing to joyn in the publick Worship with the Arians, who were by far the more prevalent Party in this City, and with whom the Orthodox Christians were forced to joyn, having no Liberty of Conscience as to Publick and Solemn Meetings. Yet through the connivance of Leonius, they had their liberty to honour the Son of God, according to their Profession; for when the Gloria Patri was Sung, and the Arians Phrased it Glory be to the Father in the Son, the Orthodox Christians would add, and to the Son, declaring that the same Glory was due to the Son as to the Father. But Athanasius considered his place and Sphere, and how to the sin of joyning with Hereticks, he should add scandal and bad Example.

73. The Arians being constrained to restore Athanasius in this manner, not only perswaded their Emperour to the policy of making a Virtue of necessity, but to make some advantage also out of so bad a bargain. This was by desiring of Athanasius at his departure, when they thought good Nature and Gratitude would work, he having his Letters to the Churches, and all he could desire; that those of the Arian persuasion might have some one Church wherein they might publicly meet at Alexandria. To which when he could not in a manner deny, he answered, as not presuming to disobey the Emperour, but made bold unto his desires, to return his humble Petition, that seeing there were many Christians in that City of Antioch, which also in some points differed from Leonius, that they by his Imperial favour might obtain the like Indulgence. Constantius, though he disliked the answer, was gravelled by the Equity of the proposal; and the Arians considering that by granting the request of Athanasius, they should loose more ground at Antioch than they got at Alexandria; the whole matter was waved and passed over in silence. And much more reason they had, if it be true what we have from Socrates, that his Petition extended to the Catholics, dispersed all over, under the Government of Arian Bishops. But thus did Constantius restore Athanasius, abrogating what ever had been done against, and sent him away with three Letters Commendatory; two to the Church of Alexandria, and a third to the Governours of Augustonica, Thebais and Lybia; wherein he commands that all that Communicate with him shall enjoy their full his reply.

Constantius

Athanasius
returns.

And with the Emperour Letters goes to Alexandria.

Vide Athan.
& Socrat. l.
2. c. 23.

ibid.

Athanas.
p. 2. ser.
ubi supra.

full Franchise and Liberty; With him were several others restored, as Paulus Marcellus, Aclepas Bishop of Gaza, and Lucius Bishop of Adrianople, whom their several Churches were commanded to entertain.

74. Athanasius in his way homeward passed through Syria and Palatrine, and came to Jerusalem, where upon his desire, Maximus the Bishop called a Synod of Bishops out of Syria and Palatrine, by the decree of which he was received into Communion and restored. Now, as it ever happens to Men in Prosperity, he is courted on all hands, even by Enemies, Ursatius and Valens two of the most Factions Arian Bishops sending to beg his Pardon, and renouncing the Doctrine of Arius; which that they might seem to do Cordially they take a Journey to Rome, and make their Recantation before that Bishop, whom they thought for the Dignity of his See, and his Orthodox judgment, to have been most Eminent in the West, during those Controversies. But at Alexandria he is received with joy above the expression of Tongue or Pen, such as was manifested by publick Thanksgivings, Festivities, Feastings and other signs too pregnant to escape either to the view, or then envy of the Arians, who begin afresh to load him with Calumnies to Constantius. This they thought they might now do with the better success, because Constantius the Western Emperour, his great Patron was e're this Murdered by the Treason of Magnentius and his Followers; who, to the great scandal of Religion, were the first Christian Rebels, daring to rise against their Sovereign; a thing not once thought of by the Ancient Christians, though they groaned under the Persecution of Ethnic Princes. The Multitude of Orthodox Christians being increased at Alexandria at his return, and the Churches, where they usually met, being not large enough now to receive them, he was forced to make use of a large and stately one, built by Constantius, but not yet Consecrated; and this they interpreted as done out of pride or presumption, and in despite of the Emperours Authority, whom he would not deigne as much as to acquaint with his designed Dedication. They accused him also of holding intelligence with Magnentius, because that Usurper had sent certain Italian Bishops of Athanasius his Acquaintance on an Embassy to Constantius, whom in their Journey, taking Alexandria in their way, had been entertained by him; and they had laid to his charge that he had many times conferred Orders out of his own Diocesis and Province, contrary to the Canons.

75. Such were the difficulties that Constantius wrestled with at this time, having his hands full of Magnentius, and about to grapple with the Persian, that he thought it not reasonable to meddle with Athanasius, by disobliging whom he might procure to himself fresh troubles in Egypt, a Country he knew to be much at the Bishops Devotion; instead therefore of bad Deeds, he gave him good Words, and thrice did he Write to him encouraging Letters, after the death of Constantius, remembering it's probable what Promises and Oaths he had made to him. For two or three Years Athanasius remained in quiet at Alexandria, during which time Maximus his old Friend the Bishop of Jerusalem dyed, concerning whose Successors who were Arians a long time, there is great confusion amongst Writers, which Baronius attributes to the Strife and mutual Hatred betwixt the Arians themselves: For as it usually happens to all great Factions, that if they continue long, they part and divide asunder into lesser Divisions; so happened it amongst those Hereticks, of whom some thinking more honourably of the Son of God than others, although they denied also his Consubstantiality, yet coming nearer to the Orthodox Doctrine, were called Semiarrians. But Constantius having extricated himself out of his former difficulties by the suppression of the Usurpers, returned to his wonted humour, receiving impressions as formerly from the Arian Bishops. E're his return to Constantinople he ordered Philip his Lieutenant to remove Paul the Bishop thence, and restore Macedonius to that See, who fearing a Tumult of the Citizens, sent for him privately and letting him down into a Boat, conveyed him secretly to the place of his banishment. This good Bishop having long run the Fortune of a constant Confessor, at last arrived at the Crown of Martyrdom, being first banished into Pontus, by procurement of Eusebius and his Party, then by Constantius into Mesopotamia, where he was kept at Singra, thence he was removed to Emesa, and thence to Cucusus a Town of Armenia, about Taurus, where he was strangled by the Arians. His Body Theodosius afterward caused to be translated to Constantinople, and Buried in the Church which had been built by Macedonius his Adversary, but was afterward known by the Name of Paul.

where he is received with all the joy imaginable.

But is again Accused by the Arians.

Maximus Bishop of Jerusalem dies, and is succeeded by an Arian.

Paul of Constantinople banished, and afterward murdered by the Arians.

Athanas.
Hist. Ser. l. 4.

76. Things going thus with Paul, Athanasius his turn could not be far behind; but the Arians first use wiles and tricks before they come to force. Ursacius and Valens, who as we said pretended to be Converts, went to Rome to make their Submission and Acknowledgments to the Bishop. There they dese Arian and purge Athanasius; but for his greater Honour they advise Julius to call him to Rome, that his Virtue and Integrity might be the more apparent, and greater satisfaction might be given to the World; concluding with themselves, that this the Bishop would not refuse to do, it being an occasion of shewing his Interest, and getting Credit to his Authority; and that Athanasius would in vindication of just freedom as earnestly refuse to come, and so a breach would be made betwixt the two Orthodox Bishops and their Churches, at which the Arians might Triumphantly enter. Julius could not do this being prevented by death after he had sat in that See near Sixteen years. To him succeeded Liberius a Roman, who as some write, readily undertaking what he thought might make for the reputations of his See, Cited Athanasius to Rome, under pain of Excommunication. Athanasius though he had honoured the Roman Bishop, and in respect to his Faith more than the Dignity of his See, had given him the right hand of Fellowship, and willingly admitted him Umpire in those controversies betwixt him and his Enemies, yet he refused to obey his Summons (which seemed to be made Authoritatively) and thereby gives so dangerous a Precedent for the founding of an Usurped Supremacy.

Julius the Bishop dyes, Liberius succeeds who cites Athanasius to Rome.

Eusebii fragmenta. Bibliotheca petrum tom. 3. col. 125.

And upon refusal to come Excommunicates him.

Upon which Constantius summons a Council at Arles, wherein Athanasius and others are sent in banishment.

77. Upon this refusal Liberius proceeds to Excommunicate him as Contumacious, and receives the Eastern Bishops into Communion; which coming to the knowledge of the Egyptian Prelates, they call a Synod of Eighty Bishops, wherein they resolutely defend Athanasius, maintaining his Cause against all, and confirm him in his See; which when considered by Liberius, he was ashamed of his inconsideration and precipitancy. But these things made much for the Arian Party, being good preparatives for what Constantius had designed, to whom now they could Characterize Athanasius as a Man so troublesome and turbulent, that even his old Friends the Western Bishops had forsaken him; Constantius having overcome his Enemies, and so proud of his success, that he ascribed that to himself which he would not allow to the Son of God, calling himself Eternal and our Eternity, as a prelude to those sad Tragedies which followed, calls a Council at Arles by the advice of his Bishops, wherein Athanasius was Excommunicated. To this subscribed amongst the rest Vincentius Bishop of Capua, the Legate of Liberius Bishop of Rome, who now in his Letter to Hosius Bishop of Corduba, dislikes their proceedings. The Catholics to divert them from their purpose, proposed first to handle matters of Doctrine, but Valens (who together with Ursacius his Companion had recanted his recantation,) and the rest withstood that proportion, and resolving at present to wave the matter of Faith, carried it for the condemnation of Athanasius, and of several others who were sent into banishment.

And another at Milan.

There the Orthodox are banished and the Arians raise their pleasures.

78. This was a good Foundation for what was intended by the Arians, but whether this meeting was not solemn enough to carry a sufficient shew of reputation, or at the desire of Liberius and other Catholics, another Council is summoned to Millaine the year following, where met of the Eastern Bishops but few, by reason of the length of the journey, but of the Western above three Hundred, what the Arians wanted in Number was abundantly supplied in the presence and Authority of Constantius, who committed the absoluteness of his Power into their hands, for ruin of the Orthodox Faith. They improved it so far as to depose all the Orthodox Bishops, of which were most stable Eusebius of Vercennes, Paulinus of Trier, Lucifer of Calarita in Sicilie, and Dionysius of Milan, who that they might not by their presence in their several Countries, resist the Decrees of the Synod, were sent into banishment, where some of them were Murdered. Liberius being at Rome, thither the Emperor sent Eusebius the Eunuch his Chamberlain, both by fair and foul means to persuade him to joy with the Arians, and when that would not do, sent for him to Milan, where they had a discourse recited by Theodoret, wherein the Emperor laboured by all arguments to draw him to his party; when he pressed him to subscribe to the Condemnation of the wicked Man (as he was pleased to call him) Athanasius whom he charged with Treason and Sedition, he refused to Condemn him as a Man unheard, and when he pressed him with the general practice of the World (which now ran all after Arian) he replied with an instance in those three Persons that withstood Nebuchadnezzars publick Edict, and that his singularity (as he termed it) could

L. 2. c. 16. Athanasius ad Eusebium de deo. 8. c. 1. 2. c. 32.

could not weaken the Truth he professed, so little was he moved by Arguments drawn from visibility. When he saw he could not prevail he banished him to Berea in Thracia; and in his place was put Felix a Deacon of the Roman Church, as Auxentius into the See of Milan, both Arians we may easily believe, if we question not the cunning and Policy of that Party.

Alexandria delivered to the Arians.

79. Athanasius his doom we may be sure was very heavy, when the Defence of him was a great part of the Crime for which their Bishops were so severely censured. By their endeavours to clear him Constantius was so enraged, that he published a most severe Edict against him, whereby Sentencing him to Death, he commanded he should be Executed wheresoever he was found, ordering the Churches of Alexandria to be delivered up to the Arians, whom he licenced to do even what they pleased. In pursuance of this Decree he sends down Syrianus a Captain with some Thousands of Men to Alexandria. The Inhabitants begged of this Syrianus that he would act nothing till they had sent a Message to the Emperor. He gave them both his Word and Oath, but a little afterwards, he came upon them when they were not aware, being at Church, assembled with their Bishop upon an Holy Vigil, and purposing to spend that night in Devotion, being the next day to participate of the Holy Eucharist. He beset the Church round with his armed Men when it was now late at night, and breaking in, made most horrid slaughter of all Persons, no Sex Age or Quality considered. But he, whom they most aimed at, being earnestly besought to save himself by those about him, when they first perceived the Treachery, refused to make his escape, resolving to fare as the rest did, yet in the Crowd he passed through undiscovered, and by Gods great Providence got into the Wilderness. Thence he was minded to go to the Emperor and lay open his Case, before he perceived his settled Resolution for his Destruction, which being first apprehended by what Quarter the rest of his Brethren had in Egypt, was fully confirmed to him by the Edicts set out against himself, whereby orders are given to apprehend him in all places, and reward offered to such as could produce him alive, or bring in his Head to the Magistrate. The Alexandrian Churches are commanded to look upon him no otherwise than as the Emperours Enemy. Penalties are inflicted on such as comfort, relieve, or harbour him. Thus had he no place wherein to rest in safety, all the World being as it were in Arms against this one Man. All Officers and Soldiers are to enquire for him, some hunt after the prey to obtain a reward, and others would purchase him with Money, that by such a Present they might procure Interest and Esteem. But they are safe whom God keeps.

Athanasius condemned by the Emperor.

George supple his place.

80. Though he escaped, so did not his Flock, which (though his Enemies objected his Flight against him) yet was better provided for by his removal, than possibly it could have been by his stay, which would have brought him to certain Destruction, whereas his Flight preserved him, and thereby secured his Abilities for a better time and further Service. Inraged at his escape, they revenge it to purpose upon his Friends and Followers in Alexandria and Egypt. Heraclius a Count of the Arian stamp, with Sebastian an Officer, and a Manichee, executing to the full such Orders as they had received from the Emperor. Into the places of the exiled Bishops they thrust Men as despicable for Parts and Abilities, as Heretical in their Judgments; and into the See of Alexandria one George lately come from Cappadocia, and as some have written originally of that Country, though Ammianus tells us he was born at Epiphania a City of Cilicia, in a fulling Mill as was reported. Indeed he is very often in ancient Authors confounded with Gregory the Cappadocian, who being put into the place of Athanasius by the Junius of Antioch, was deposed by the Council at Sardica, and died, as Athanasius writes, Ten Months after the finishing of that Council. The likenesses of their Names confounded Transcribers, who often put one for the other; they are said by some to have been Country men, they were both Arians, both great Adversaries of Athanasius, and Intruders into his See, and being great Persecutors of the Orthodox Christians of Alexandria, were both killed as some say by that injured and inraged People. It is necessary therefore to use great caution and distinction in the reading of Authors, who write of them both. But they may be sufficiently discerned from each other by what we have formerly said of Gregory, and what we now come to speak of George.

81. Gregory was of a Clergy-man made Bishop of Alexandria, but this George being a Lay-person, having knavishly discharged a fordid Secular Employment, was thought good enough by the Arians for the Episcopal Function. Nazianzen tells us, that he was of a bad Stock, and worse Qualities, not at all endowed with ingenious Knowledge, or affable in his Conversation, not so much as pretending to godliness, or cloaking his Villanies with specious Pretexts, yet fit for any bold Attempt, and a proper Instrument to disturb the Publick Peace. Such an one in his beginnings as might be properly termed a Parasite, haunting good Tables; all his Designs seeming to be laid for the filling of his Belly. His first Preferment was most base and fordid, being the Proveditor General of Hogs Flesh for the Army. And here, faith he, he left off his roguing, and began his Villanies. Athanasius writes that he was a keeper of Provisions at Constantinople, where being found to have abused his Trust, and converted the Commodities to his own advantage, he was forced to run, and fled into Cappadocia. But it seems he was taken notice of for a subtle headed Man, and fit for business, and (being an Arian,) for such work as was to be done at Alexandria, which none but a Knave and Hucklester would, and none but a cunning and resolute Fellow could, go through. Hereupon he was commended to Constantius, had his Peace begged, and was Ordained Bishop of Alexandria, where he must abolish the Memory of, and expiate his former Crimes, by the Service to be performed against the Orthodox Christians.

Orat. 21.

82. Being put into Possession by the Emperours Officers in the time of Lent, he staid till the Week of Easter was past, and then began his Villanies. Then were the Sacred Virgins clapt in Prison, the Suffragan Bishops haled and tossed too and fro by the Soldiers, and the Houses of Poor and Rich pillaged and sacked. After the Whitsun Week the People assembling to the Celebration of a Fast, would not for all this be frightened into Communion with him, but refusing to joyn with him in the Holy Mysteries, gathered together in the Church-yard, which he understanding, procured that Sebastian to fall upon them, which he did, though on a Sunday as they were at Prayers. Enraged that he found but few, (for the hour being past, many were retired) he caused a Fire to be made, would embrace the Heresie of the Arians. When he could not overcome them by the humour of the Fire, he stripped them naked, and caused them so to be beaten and buffeted, that scarcely could their Friends know them a long time after. Forty Persons he scourged so with the Twigs of Palm Trees newly cut, and having on their pricking knobs, that many lay long under the Chirurgions hands, and others died of their Wounds, whose Bodies they would not restore to their Friends, but let them lye unburied. Such as remained were banished together with the Virgins. This done to fright the Multitude, they proceed against their Faithful Pastors, that the Orthodox Doctrine might fail for want of Teachers, banishing several Bishops of Egypt, and Lybia, mentioned by Athanasius, with certain Priests whom they handled so roughly, that some died in the Journey, and others in Exile. But above Thirty Bishops they made away.

The Cruelty of George.

Athan. de fuga et apud Ser. l. 2. c. 23.

Athanasius writes two Apologies for himself.

At a Council held at Bithynia Hilary Bishop of Poitiers is banished.

83. Athanasius escaping in the Wilderness there lay in great solitariness, but good security a long time, six years it is said, where he improved this sad opportunity in Writing several Treatises in his own Vindication, and for the strengthening of Orthodox Christians. Understanding that his Enemies calumniated him for flying, and leaving his Flock in time of danger, he wrote that piece concerning his Flight, wherein he proves it lawful to shun those imminent and certain perils devised for him, and clears himself of other Calumnies. And because not only the Arians, but the Emperour also, to prevent the censure of Cruelty and Injustice, had accused him of grievous Crimes, and given him the Character of a most profligate Person, he wrote another Apology to him, wherein he confutes those Slanders, relating in those two, and his Epistle to such as lived solitary Lives in the Wilderness, the whole Series of all those Sufferings and Troubles which he and the Orthodox Party underwent. But this last seems written after the Synod held at Ariminum, about which time he also wrote his second Apology to Liberius the Bishop of Rome, then restored to his Bishoprick. In the mean time, a year after the Synod held at Milan, a Meeting of the Bishops was summoned at Bithynia a Town in Gall at the procurement of Saturninus Bishop of Arles, the Ring-leader of the Arians in those Parts, wherein Hilary Bishop of Poitiers, for his former refusal to joyn in Communion with the Hereticks, and

Hil. Col. 286.

and for putting up a Bill against them at this time was censured and banished into Phrygia, the Faith of those, who formerly were zealous in their Profession, now waxed cold, and giving way to the great Deluge of Arianism, which out of the East bore down all before it even in the Western Countries.

Leontius of Antioch dies.

84. This same year died Leontius Bishop of Antioch, of whose Death when Eudoxius Bishop of Germanicia a City of Syria heard, being then at Rome, he desired leave of the Emperour (who now resided there, having triumphed over his Enemies) to return to his own Diocese, which he pretended had great need of his Ghostly Council and assistance. Coming to Antioch, by the assistance of those of the Emperours Chamber, he craftily insinuated himself into that See, and calling a Synod of Bishops, endeavoured to restore Aetius, who being formerly a Deacon in that Church, had, for his Heresie and Impiety by the Arians themselves, been Excommunicated. This Man being of mean Parentage, was in his Youth taught the Trade of a Goldsmith, afterward getting a smack of the liberal Arts, betook himself to Paulinus Bishop of Antioch, with whom he continued so long as the Bishop lived, but applying himself to fallacious ways of Disputing, and querks of Logick, he was by his Adversaries driven from that City, when Eulalius was Bishop, returning after the promotion of Leontius, he was made Deacon by him. Although he maintained the same things, yet did he separate himself from the Arians, because that after Arius his Perjury, they had received him into Communion, when he so lyed and dissembled with Constantine the Emperour. By reading the Elencha of Aristotle he got such a faculty of Disputing captiously, as amazed meanly intelligent Persons, and he would propound such Fallacies, as he himself through his half Learning of Aristotles Principles could not resolve. He had read over some of the Ancient Commentators, but condemned Clemens, Africanus and Origen, as illiterate Persons. He would exclaim against the Divinity of the Son of God, because he could not understand how there was an unbegotten Birth, as he said, or how to imagine that the Begotten could be co-eternal with the Begetter. Incurring hatred with the Orthodox for those Opinions, and with the Arians for his conceited knowledge, he was further branded with the Title of Atheist. For he held, as Epiphanius tells us, that the perfection of Man consisted in the knowledge of Divine things alone, without the accession of Virtue, which he so far discarded, as he commended (instead of condemning) fleshly Lusts and Pleasures, affirming that Fornication and such unlawful acts, had no more hurt in them, than picking of the Ears, blowing the Nose, or other sorts of avoiding Excrements.

Aetius and his Heresie condemned.

Ser. l. 2. c. 35.

And Photinus.

85. He esteemed himself of far greater Merit than Arius, and accordingly had the Honour of giving name to an Heresie as well as he, his Followers being after him called Aetiani, though he had the ill luck of breeding a Scholar, who so far it seems outstript his Master, that from his name Eunomius were they afterwards called Eunomiani. His great Abetter and Friend Eudoxius was so good a Proficient also in his Learning, that he had well nigh robbed him of his Glory. For priding himself much in being the Son of Cæsarius a Martyr of the lesser Armenia; he also improved his Interest and Reputation for the Cause Heresie and Impiety of Aetius, as well as his Person, and being both remarkable for Dignity and Luxury, his Companions and Followers, instead of Aetiani, came to be called Eudoxiani. But all he could do was insufficient for the recalling of Aetius, whom the Arians were resolved to Sacrifice to their Reputation, affecting much the Title of Catholics, and thinking to escape the odious Imputation of Heresie, by subjecting those unto the Punishment who were scarcely their Superiors in the Guilt. But their Severity fell especially upon Photinus Bishop of Sirmium, who being formerly Principled by Marcellus, maintained the Opinions of Sabellius the African, and Paulus Samosatenus, affirming, "That God is one, and alone, and not subsisting in Persons: That Christ is a Man begotten by a Man, and not from Eternity, being neither of the Substance of the Father, nor altogether like him. That the Holy Ghost is God, and no distinct Person. The Arians, though they held the Son of God to be but a Creature, and therefore their Opinion was a little more found than his, yet shewing much Zeal for the Similitude of the Son of God, as if that would heal and make up all, procured Constantius, then at Sirmium, to call a Synod to that City.

Epiphanius.

* Ser. l. 2. c. 35.

Several Anathematisms.

86. The Hæresie of Photinus being condemned, the Bishops drew up a short Form of Faith, to which they added those Anathematisms to comprehend as well that of his, and other opinions. "First, Those that affirm that the Son of things which are not, or of any other substance, than of God the Father, let them be accursed. Second, Or that there was Time or Age when he was not. Third, Or that the Father and the Son are two Gods. Fourth, Or that Christ was God before all Ages, and yet the Son of God, did not with the Father make all things. Fifth, Or that the Son of God, or any part of him is begotten of Mary. Sixth, Or that the Son is born of Mary, according to the foreknowledge, and not before all Ages begotten of the Father, and was with God, and that by him all things were made. Seventh, Or that the substance of God may be dilated or contracted. Eighth, Or that the Essence of God dilated makes the Son, or shall call the Son as it were dilating of his Essence. Ninth, Or shall call the Son, the Word of God seated in the mind of the Father, or the Word brought forth. Tenth, Or that God Man is begotten of the Virgin Mary, understanding thereby, that God is begotten. Eleventh, Or that shall expound these words [besides me there is no God] to exclude thereby the only begotten, who is God from everlasting. Twelfth, Or these [the Word made Flesh] to be transmutation into Flesh. Thirteenth, Or by Crucifying the only begotten Son of God, shall understand, that the Son of God did undergo Passion, Distraction, Change, Diminution, Annihilation. Fourteenth, Or that shall expound these words [let us make Man in our own Image] as spoken by God the Father to himself, and not to God the Son. Fifteenth, Or shall affirm that Jacob wrestled with God, as God, or with God the Father, and not with the Son as Man. Sixteenth, Or whosoever understandeth this, the Lord rained from the Lord, not to be meant of the Father and the Son, but that the Father rained from himself.

Vide Scer. 1, 2, 3, Sec. 1, 4 & 10.

87. Or Seventeenth, "Whoever shall expound these Forms of Speech, the Father Lord, the Son Lord, as if the Father being Lord, be both Lord and Son. Eighteenth, Whoever when he saith Lord of Lords shall thereby understand two Gods. For we do not place the Son, say they, in the same degree with the Father, but we make him subject to the Father. Nineteenth, Whoever shall affirm the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to be one Person. Twentieth, Whoever, when he calleth the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, shall thereby mean God unbegotten. Twenty first, Whoever saith there is no other Comforter beside the Son. Twenty second, Or that shall affirm the Holy Ghost to be part of the Father and the Son. Twenty third, Or that the Son, as one of the Creatures, is made by the Will of the Father. Twenty fourth, Whoever affirmeth the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to be Three Gods, let him be accursed. Twenty fifth, Or that the Son is begotten contrary to the Will of the Father. Twenty sixth, Whoever affirms that the Son had neither begetting, nor beginning, and so consequently affirm, that there are two without beginning, and two without begetting, and so appoint two Gods. The Son is the head and the Original of all Creatures, and the head of Christ is God, for so we refer all things reverently by the Son unto one principle of all things which is without beginning. Lastly, Weighing deeply with our selves that clause also of Christian profession, we say, that whosoever affirmeth Christ Jesus the Son of God who Ministred unto the Fathers at the Creation of all things, not to have been before all Worlds, but only since the time that the Son was born of Mary to have been Christ, and then his Deity to have begun, as Paulus Samosatenus was persuaded, let him be accursed. This we have transcribed, that once for all it may appear how absurd was the Hæresie of the Arians, how much it gave to the Son of God above other Hæresies, in allowing him a Deity, confessing his being before all Worlds, which the Father made by him; sometime, though not in the second Confession, they talk of Substance too and a perfect Similitude. But still they deny his Consubstantiality, that critical term which ever limits and determines their Doctrine, though it show never so high in the Epithets they give the Son of God. And not knowing what to say, or where to fix, they are guilty of prodigious uncertainty, whence so many Creeds and Forms of Faith, and so many Synods to make and marr, that Heathen Writers take notice of Constantius his Reign as very ridiculous in this respect.

88. Photinus was sufficiently censured, but this confession seeming too Orthodox, a second Model was drawn, wherewith the Semiarrians were offended, for that the word Substance was left out, and meeting afterwards at Anzyra a City of Galatia, they condemned this Model, asserting the word Substance, wherein they affirmed affirmed the Son was like the Father. This was quite contrary to the Second Decree of them at Sirmium, who, as Socrates writes, after a long contention about the signification of the Greek word ὅμοι, and the Latin Substantia; about the equality or unity of Substance, resolved that the Church of God should no longer be troubled with the interpretation thereof; and that for two Causes, both for that the Scriptures of God make no mention thereof, and because the meaning thereof exceeded the capacity of Man; the Scripture testifying, that no Man is able to set forth the Generation of the Son, in these words, his Generation who shall declare. This act therefore of the Semiarrians, seeming so contrary to the publick Cause, another meeting was had at Sirmium, in the second year after, where the Parties to agree, came to a composition, that the one should leave out the word Substance, and the other yield this to be inserted in the room of it, In all things like to the Father; and accordingly a third Form was drawn up, to which Constantius forced some Dissenters to subscribe. Now Baronius refers the first meeting at Sirmium to the Twenty first year of Constantius, the 357. of our Lord, although Socrates and Sozomen place it in the year after the Consulship of Sergius and Nigrinus, which happened A. D. 351. He takes his argument from the Subscription of Elofius Bishop of Corduba, to the Decrees of this Council, and the banishment of Athanasius, which could not be before the Exile both of that Bishop and Liberius, as also from the presence of Constantius at Sirmium, when Ammianus he gathers, fell out in this year. Others make these meetings held at Sirmium, viz. another the present 357, and another A. D. 359. Which produceth so many Forms of Faith, whereof the first was more tolerable, allowing the word Substance, but the Second utterly banished it, as never more to be used, and by the third they found a middle way, lest Satan should be too much divided against himself.

A difference amongst the Arians themselves.

Hil. de Syn. Epistol. 73.

L. 2. c. 27.

Theodosius Constantinus, ad A. D. 351. 357-359.

89. But when the Second Confession came to be subscribed, Elofius Bishop of Corduba, an ancient and Valient Souldier of Jesus Christ, became a remarkable example of humane Frailty, who refusing to set to his hand, was by Scourging and racking at length compelled to it, though a few years after, as is probably conjectured, he died at his See in the Orthodox Faith. Liberius also Bishop of Rome, who formerly had stood out against Deprivation and Exile, was conquered with those Baseline Arguments of the Arians, and subscribed both to the Confession of Faith, and the banishment of Athanasius. The Cardinal Annalist labours hard to clear St. Peter's Chair from the guilt and scandal of Hæretical pravity, telling us, that it was the first Confession of Faith to which Liberius subscribed, wherein was contained the word Substance, and that having nothing but Orthodox in it, according to the natural signification of the words, he was not obliged to consider what might be the meaning of the Arians. He endeavours to render invalid, what ever may make him guilty of Hæresie, by ascribing to the sophistication and Tricks of the Arians, whatsoever is found to his disadvantage in the writings of the Orthodox. But there are others, who from the credit of such Authors, as they conceive were never tempted to Lye, do much otherwise conceive of this action of Liberius. For Felix, who had succeeded him after his banishment, perceiving himself to be mortally hated for his Arianism, and that none upon that account would Communicate with him; that he might ingratiate himself with the People, thundred out Anathema against the Arians. Liberius perceiving this, when he was not only threatened with the extremity of Torments, but saw there was hopes of recovering his Bishoprick, by complying with the Times, wrote Letters full of flattery to the Arians, calling them the Sons of Peace, and both condemned Athanasius, and subscribed to the Second Confession of Faith made at Sirmium, hereby he recovered his Bishoprick, thrusting out Felix as an intruder, whom he caused to be starved to death: Upon which account Hilarius grievously reprehended and Anathematized him, and Felix, (though upon another account faith Baronius), was accounted a Martyr. The first that debauched Liberius, was one Fortunatianus, as St. Hierome tells us.

Hil. frag. Mart. 1. Rom. Jul. 29. Athan. ad solitarii.

De Scrip. Ecclesiast.

90. But Constantius the Emperour, understanding what Edoxius the Bishop of Antioch had done, both in reference to the Bishoprick, and Ætius, wrote unto the Inhabitants of that City against him, as one who had crept into that See without his knowledge and consent; and as to the Hæresie of Ætius, thinking he had not yet sufficiently provided by the late Transactions at Sirmium, he resolved to call another

L.

another

Sec. 1. 4. c. 13. Theod. b. 1. c. 26.

another Council : Being so resolved, he was perwaded by the Favourers of Eudoxius, to summon the Bishops to Nice, thinking, that this City, being as yet famous for the late Council thither assembled, would obliterate that Creed, and give reputation to his Hæresie, by obtruding that for the Orthodox Faith ; but afterwards the Emperours mind changed, and it was summoned to Nicomedia a City of the same Province. Here, when they should assemble, so great an Earthquake happened, that it destroyed well nigh the whole Town, and this constrains them to think again of Nice. But hither also the Earthquake comes, and so prevents them, that they know not whether to turn themselves. Some from St. Hierom gather that thence, the Assembly was removed to Ancyra, whither when the Prelates were travelling, Hilary wrote his Book of Synods in Phrygia, wherein he bewails the backsliding of those times, which he affirms to be so great, that in Ten Provinces of Asia scarcely was one Bishop to be found who knew and feared God. And now it was, that the Samaritians might make their protestation against the Second Form of Faith, agreed on at Sirmium. But the favourers of Eudoxius and Ætius perceiving things to go too favourably in behalf of the Catholick Cause, the word Consubstantial being only wanting to join to it, the Samaritians obtained of the Emperour that two places should be appointed for the Eastern and Western Bishops to meet at. The pretence was, that both sorts might have the more convenience of Travel ; but the design, that they might not be united in one Body, for then they feared the Orthodox Party would be prevalent ; but being divided into two Assemblies, divers forms of Faith and Decrees might pass them, whereof they doubted not, but some they might either easily draw or wrest to their purpose. In these changes and removes was spent this year, which was the Twenty Second of Constantius, the Fourth of Rome, the first Indiction. A. D. 358. T. Fabius Decianus, and Naratus Cerealis being Consuls.

91. The places determined for the Eastern Bishops, was Seleucia, a City of Isauria, and for the Western Ariminum in Italy, where Four Hundred Prelates, some say Six hundred assembled. But first this same year which was the Twenty third of Constantius, was the third Creed made at Sirmium (as we formerly hinted) on the Twenty second of May, where after great Contests, the Parties agreed to leave out the word Substance, upon condition, that Christ might be said in all things like the Father, which held them in dispute till the very Night preceeding the Feast of Whitsuntide. The Emperour Constantius, who was present at the making of this Confession, six days after, sent it away to Ariminum, where the first Session was held on the Twenty first of July. There assembled so many of the Orthodox Party, that do what the Arians could, they carried it quite for the recognition of the Nicene Creed, and Condemnation of Arius, and his Doctrine, rejecting besides all others Forms and Confessions of Faith, this new one come from Sirmium : And they deposed Valens and Ursacius the Ringleaders of the Hæretical Party, together with Auxentius Germanius, Catius and Demophilus, because they refused to join with them. These Men who were wont to carry all before them, because backed with the Emperours Authority, in a great shame put to him, to whom they lay open the danger of further troubles, after that the Council at Sirmium had taken so hopeful a course for the peace of the Church, which those Men leavened with the Principles of Athanasius, went about again to disturb. The Council sent also their Messengers to the Court, desiring, that having dispatched those matters for which they were called, they might have leave to depart to their own Sees. Constantius was about this time moving Eastward against the Barbarians, who broke violently into the Empire, and therefore telling them he could not at present attend those Controversies, he appointed them to expect his return at Adrianople.

92. The Arians in the mean time met at Nice in Thrace, where they drew up another Form of Faith, like unto the third made at Sirmium, leaving out both Substance and Consubstantial, and in some of them, in all things like, putting like only. Socrates tells us, that Ursacius called this Assembly together, and therein publishing that Confession read in Ariminum, and forged at Sirmium, afterward set it forth as agreed to by a General Council, gave it the Name of the Nicene Faith, to the intent, that using the Name of Nice, he might ensnare the ignorant and simple sort of People, who verily thought it the same Creed which had formerly been Composed at Nice in Bithynia ; till at length the treachery of these Deceivers was was discovered, and the Imposture derided. This same Author writes, that the Bishops at Ariminum, having answered the Emperours Letter, wherein he signified his pleasure that they should abide there till his return from the War, departed all to their own Sees. But Sulpicius Severus (who as he saith himself, had the knowledge of what passed in this Synod, from Gaudentius a Bishop) reports, that Constantius having dismissed the Messengers of the Council, who being young, unlearned, and imprudent, were drawn in to subscribe the Creed of Sirmium, gave order to his Præfect not to suffer the Fathers to depart from Ariminum till they had also subscribed the same Confession. At first they refused to Communicate with their Apostate Messengers ; but old Age, the cold of Winter, want of Necessaries, with threats of Tortures, so changed, if not broke them, that all in a manner subscribed, and twenty who remained, were entrapped by Valens. Being allowed to add what protestation they pleased, he joyined to their Protestation, that Christ was not a Creature, as the rest of the Creatures, whereby he meant, though they perceived not his drift, that he only was a Creature, though more excellent and perfect, as the rest. When they had received and admitted this Clause, Valens and his Companions triumphed, saying, they had not affirmed the Son of God, not to be a Creature, but only the most Excellent of Creatures, and herein like the rest. Now carried they all before them, inasmuch that the World groaned, and admired to see it self all turned Arian. And from those so contrary proceedings of this Council, it came to pass, that sometimes it is imbraced by ancient Catholics sometimes it utterly rejected as Erronious and Hæretical.

93. No better was the conclusion at Seleucia, where a Synod of about 160. Bishops was opened on the Twenty seventh of September. Here the Arians themselves were divided into two Factions, whilst some would have matters of Faith first handled, and others would take into consideration the Cases of Criminals, (whereof several, out of fear, pretending frivolous reasons, staid at Seleucia) both Parties alledging the Authority of the Emperours Letters, which were Ambiguously written. Some cried out against the making of new Forms of Faith, approving, as a Pattern, that which had been formerly drawn up at Antioch, at the Ecumenia or Dedication, which being to be subscribed, the other Party headed by Acacius, who had importuned them to abolish the Nicene Creed, and make a new one, would not subscribe themselves but by their Deputies, the Deacons, and Readers. This was done the first day of meeting, the Doors of the Church being fast locked, against which Acacius afterward protested, and by the assistance of Leonas a great Courtier, (who praesided by the Emperours order) having got the Factions again together, when they thought he was about to read something else, produced a Creed with a Preface to it. Herein after he had inveighed against his Adversaries, he rejects quite the clauses of Unity and Equality in Substance, both as having no ground in Scripture, and as the occasions of great Contentions, yet withall accurring the Clause of Inequality, and holding all the Patrons and Favourers thereof as Excommunicated Persons. When he had said, Sophronius, Bishop of Pompeopolis in Paphlagonia, told him plainly, that if the new devices and daily invention of his brain were laid down for Creeds, it could not otherwise fall out, but that shortly they should be found without one grain of Faith. In his Creed he had affirmed the Son of God to be like his Father, in the midst of disputation he was asked wherein ? To which he answered, that the Son was like the Father, not in substance, but only in Will and Mind, to which when it was replied, that in Books by him formerly written, he had held the Son to be in all things like the Father, he returned this answer, that no Man that ever was, of old time, or of late days, is wont to be tried by the Books he wrote. To such prodigious uncertainty and inconsistency doth Hæresie subject Mens minds. One while the Arians admit substance, sometimes nor, one while like in all things, another only like, sometimes any thing but Consubstantial, other whiles scarcely any thing at all will be admitted.

94. Leonas provoked by those Diffentions above all patience, refused flatly to praeside any more, and dissolved the Council, permitting them yet amongst themselves to meet in the Church where the Samaritians assembling, deprived Acacius, with George of Alexandria, and others of his Party. Deposing amongst the rest, Eudoxius of Antioch, they place don Arianus in his See, whom after his Consecration, their Adversaries procured Leonas to banish, against which proceedings, after they had in vain protested, they sent ten Messengers to plead their Cause before the Emperour. Thus much writes Socrates of this Council, who speaks of it as Composed altogether of Arians, whereas Hilary in his Book against Constantius, makes mention of the Bishops of Egypt their standing fast to the business of one Substance, all except George their Metropolitan. He explains further the meaning of Acacius his Creed, which rejecting both Consubstantiality and likeness of Substance, yet withall condemned Dissimilitude in the Son of God. For although they allowed him not to be like God as God, yet seeing he was the Son of his Will, rather than the Divinity, they allowed him like to his Father as such. But in that they held him neither to be God, nor begotten of the Substance of the Father, therefore they would not admit of the likeness of Substance. And here they disputed, that in God there could be no Generation, because there was no Female, and they proceeded to such irreverent Terms as justly offended all Godly Ears.

95. But though the Semiarians had dispatched their Messengers to the Emperour, Acacius was got before them, and so told his Tale, that Constantius who ever inclined to the worst and most rigorous Party, espoused his Quarrel. Yet must another Synod be called at Constantinople, whither were summoned out of the neighbouring Bitbynia about Fifty Bishops, and a new Creed must be formed, wherein were abolished as formerly the word zōa, or Substance, and the Subsistence of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, forbidden once to be named. Having subscribed this Creed, they took the several Causes of Bishops into Consideration, but first, after much Disputation condemned Aetius the Arch-Heretic. Then proceeding against such as they hated upon the account of private Grudges, in the first place, they deposed Macedonius Bishop of Constantinople, partly because upon his account some Slaughter had been committed, but indeed to revenge the Emperour of him who fought an occasion to do him a mischief; it was also objected against him that he had admitted into Communion a certain Deacon taken in Adultery. They deposed also Basilus or Basilas, who had succeeded Marcellus in the See of Ancyra, for tormenting a Man, for forging Slanders, and disparaging divers Persons, but indeed, for that he withstood them so earnestly, being one of the Messengers sent from Seleucia. After this, as well they that came from Seleucia, as those that from elsewhere were assembled at Constantinople, were commanded by the Emperour to subscribe that Creed which was lately sent from Ariminum, though different from the other of Constantinople, and to be observed in the West, as this in the East. So dreadful was the condition of the Church at this time, whilst every year produced almost a new Creed, and by virtue of those all Churches were so disturbed, as neither could they know what to believe, nor any Pastor left to teach them, such changing and rechanging of Bishops happened in every Province. Socrates in admiration of this number of Creeds, reckons up how many had been made since the Council of Nice.

After that made by the Nicene Council, saith he, the Bishops framed two others at Antioch when they assembled to the Dedication of the Church. The Third was made by the Bishops in Gall, which were with Narcissus, who exhibited it to the Emperour Constantius. The Fourth was sent by Eudoxius to the Italian Bishops. Three were in Writing published at Sirmium, whereof one being gloriously set out with the Names of the Consuls was read at Ariminum. The Eighth was published at Seleucia by the Complices of Acacius. The Ninth was this, set forth at Constantinople, with this addition that thenceforth there should be no mention made of the Substance or Subsistence of God. Whereunto Viphilas Bishop of the Goths then first subscribed, having till this time embraced the Faith established by the Council of Nice, and been an earnest Follower of Theophilus his Predecessor, who was at that Council and subscribed the Creed.

96. Hilary Bishop of Poitiers incensed against Constantius for those things, when he was now in Exile, wrote bitterly against him, which notwithstanding for reasons of State, the Emperour sent him hence to his own Bishoprick. Macedonius being banished Constantinople and succeeded by Eudoxius, (who had formerly intruded into the See of Antioch), now at length began to magnifie the clause of one Substance, but denied to the Holy Ghost the Honour of partaking thereof, together with the Father, and the Son, affirming he was a Creature, and one of the Ministering Spirits, being only in Degree and Dignity above other Angels. The Arians gladly embraced this opinion, being so consonant to their own, that the noise of Contention about the Son of God, and the buying their their brains about that Heresie, seemeth indeed the only cause why we hear no more of this. Into the See of Antioch after the removal of Eudoxius, was elected both by the Orthodox and Arians, Meletius formerly Bishop of Sebastia in Armenia, each Party having a confidence in him, though he had formerly subscribed the Form of Faith which Acacius his Party framed at Seleucia. For some space after his Translation he meddled not with any Mysteries of Faith, but preached to his People such Doctrine as conduced to Virtue, and a good Life; but afterwards he pressed them to the belief of the clause of one Substance, and to adhere to the Nicene Creed. Herewith the Arians much enraged, complained to the Emperour, who being then at Antioch, as well for this, as other reasons, another Council was called. Socrates writes, that the Faction of Acacius procured it, that they might have an opportunity of renouncing the Opinion they had formerly held, that the Son is in all things like the Father. After the deposition of Meletius, whom the Emperour banished, Euzoius (who formerly had been deposed, together with Arius) was by his order promoted to the Church of Antioch.

97. The Arians met together cannot but fall upon Matters of Faith, and it pained them to think of breaking up without the Production of a new Creed. They call in question what they had Decreed in time past, they affirm that the Clause of Likeness, passed the Synods of Ariminum and Constantinople, is quite to be abandoned, and not once to be named any more; they now think it time to speak plain, and no more conceal their opinion that the Son is altogether unequal and unlike the Father, not only in Substance, but also in Will, as also that, as Arius dreamed, he had his Original from nothing. They were therefore from holding this Heresie, that the Son is unlike the Father called Anomii, and from maintaining him to have proceeded from nothing, named Exuentii. And so fruitful is Heresie of other monstrous Births, that from the Hive of Arius proceeded many other Swarms, distinguished either by the names of their Leaders, or the particular ways and methods which they took, as the Eusebians, Phortians, Eudoxians, Acacians, Eunomians, Macedonians, Aetians, Psaryrians, Cyrrians and Dulians. But when it was demanded of those Acacians why formerly they had given Christ the title of God of God, that professed they meant it in that sense the Apostle wrote, when he saith all things are of God. And therefore the Son is of God, inasmuch, as he is included in the word All, for which cause they added in their Creed, According to the Scriptures. The Author of this Foolish Gloss was George Bishop of Laodicea, with whom the Acacian Faction joyning, though they were soundly charged with Sophistical dealing, yet weighed neither the Scandal nor the Censure. They repeated again the Form of Faith composed at Constantinople, which being done every one departed home.

98. Such was the liberty which this prophane conscious Age took to it self, of prying into the Mystery of the Holy Trinity, that innumerable were the Heresies it produced, whilst such as were out of the way never could agree to walk together, and almost every particular Man made choice of a peculiar Path: Some that agreed to the clause of one Substance, yet fancied strange things as to the Incarnation, concerning which another Heresie was about this time broached by one Apollonarius a Priest, and a Son he had of the same Name. These two using too much the Familiarity of Epiphanius the Sophist, when upon admonition they would not forbear his company, George Bishop of Laodicea fearing lest they might by his means be drawn to Paganism. Excommunicated them both. Discontented hereat, or as some wrote, being scandalized with the Arian Doctrine of the Bishop, they fell off from the Church, and being not heeded, endeavoured to establish a new Doctrine. First they taught that God the word was Incarnate, without a Soul in a meer Body, again recanting the same, they affirmed, that he took a Soul, yet not the Mind nor Reason, but that the Godhead supplied the place thereof. Secondly, That he brought that Body with him from Heaven, and made it of the same Substance with his Divine Nature, and that this Body, when it came on Earth, was passible, visible, and mortal. Thirdly, That Sin is part of a Mans Essence, and therefore if Christ had been a perfect Man, he must needs have been a Sinner. But besides those a worse Sect arose in Mesopotamia about this time, from their Praying and Devotion called Massaliani, Spirituales, and Enchaistæ, or Præciores, the Founders of the Another Style of Constantinople, and a new Creed.

See L. c. 4. gr.

Theod. l. 2. c. 27.

See L. 4. c. 23, 30c.

See. ibid. c. 41.

How many Creeds were made since that of Nice.

An account of several Heresies.

See L. 2. c. penult.

Grig. Nazianzen.

Ep. ad Nestorian.

See Basil. ep. 7.

See. in Ca. 1. Basil. See.

Epiph. her. 30.

See. in Ca. 1. Basil. See.

See. in Ca. 1. Basil. See.

Soft being certain Monks who lived in the Deserts of that Country. They placed all Religion in Praying, misled by a misunderstanding of that of the Apostle, Pray without ceasing, esteeming all other Offices of Devotion, Piety, and Virtue, as useless and unnecessary. They held that every Man had a Devil in him, even the Apostles themselves, which can no otherwife be ejected, than with this Spiritual Engine; that every Man had two Souls, whereof one more than Cæstelial, and that by this, even with their bodily Eyes they were capable of beholding the Blessed Trinity. They pretended to strange Revelations, whereby they attained high Perfection, even as high as Christ himself, as also to triumph over Devils, upon which account they were called Entbusasts.

99. But a Covetous Devil so far possessed them, that they denied any Alms ought to be given to any other, but themselves, because they were the truly poor in Spirit. They held it lawful to swear, and forswear, and taught Children, that it was lawful to disobey their Parents, so that the Gift or Corban were but brought into their Box. They pretended to Perfection in this Life, to so high a degree, that they could be impeccable in thought; had a strange fancy concerning Spiritual Purgation, as if a Sow and Pigs were seen to go out at a Mans Mouth; and visible Fire, yet without the Propriety of burning, to enter in. Such a virtue they made in Prayer, that it thrust out Devils in Excrements, through the Mouth, and other parts, being quite contrary in this opinion to the Doctrine of other Monks in Ægypt about the same time, who refrained from avoidance of all Excrements, as a Sin, because Christ said, that those things which come out of a Man, defile a Man, never considering the Explication of the Text, in which respect they condemned Marriage. So strangely did the Spirit of Error possess Monks at this time, who by their Devotions and Solitary Life, contracted as much of Spiritual Pride, as Melancholly, that some would, as too Holy, pray with no others, and therefore both celebrated, though Lay-men, Holy Offices, and Ordained themselves Bishops, others castrated themselves, some Rebaptized such as turned from Arianism, and others behaved themselves suitably to those Extravagancies as Epiphanius hath related.

100. So fruitful was Constantius his Reign of Heresies and Schisms, that the Church could scarcely perceive her self free from those Calamities which the preceding Pagan times had inflicted. For though her Sufferings from without were removed, yet she laboured under such inward Pressures, as almost equalled her former Troubles. Her best and most genuine Sons being so roughly handled by those who challenged the same Original, that she seemed even to slight the Friendship of the Scepter, which had defended her indeed from her sworn and protested Enemies, but had still kept her Eyes as moist as ever, by assisting her false, though highly pretending Friends, in the Persecution of those most dear unto her. Her cries were at length heard, and his days were accomplished, who was the furtherer of her sorrow. For Constantius, who had so long robbed the Son of God of his Glory, was now well nigh deprived of his own Earthly Diadem, and although he escaped Deprivation, yet it was by no less charge and price, than of his own Life, giving place to him who had fought it, and unwillingly resigning his Seat to that Person, for whom, he had in his thoughts designed no other Mansions, than those of the dead. He according to the depraved Custom of those times, deferred also his Baptism to his death, and then receiving it at the Hands of Euzoius the Arian Bishop of Antioch, sealed as it were that Doctrine at his end, which he had so much defended in his Life. Yet did he much advance the common name and Interest of Christianity, improving his Power and Authority for the Suppression of Pagan Superstition, and carrying on that Reformation which his Father so happily had begun. This because the continued Series of those Arian Controversies permitted us not hitherto to describe, we shall now see what Laws he made in reference to Religion. For by them the State and Condition of times is more fully known, than otherwise. Particular Relations of private Persons may fail, their discovery being more uncertain, their Fear, Affection, and other Impediments more prevalent. But from the nature and course of the Remedy, we may best distinguish and judge of the Disemper.

His Laws
Ecclesiastical.

101. And the first we shall take notice of is that Crime of Adultery, a Sin, which because such, it concerned Magistrates to prevent as Christians, and because of such a nature as to confound genitures, and procure so great Thefts and Robberies, as of whole Inheritances, it behoved them to prevent, as Fathers of their Country. The Emperours therefore, in the Third Year of their Reign, and the Consulship of Constantius and Valens, by a (a) Constitution, inflict death upon Adulterers as Sacrilegious against Marriage, not fearing the censure of Heresie for so doing, which had they lived in the time of (b) Binusius, they had certainly incurred. This same year they (c) forbid Christian Women to marry with Jews, as thereby casting themselves into great Temptations. And by another (d) Constitution, taking care lest incestuous Marriages, a thing too frequent in those days, should defile the Christian Faith, they forbid that any Man Marry his Brothers or Sisters Daughter. Perceiving how Religious Zeal is apt to run into the other extrem, that whilst it mends, it is always thereby apt to marr, and to change Superstition for Sacrilege, Desolation, and Rapine, in their Fourth Year, and the Consulship of Acydinus and Proculus, they were constrained to obviate that humour which ever rages in Reformations. Christianity now having spread far and wide throughout the Empire, and Christians encouraged by the Profession of Princes, very zealously opposed whatever they thought tended to Idolatry, and therefore having in their Grounds many Sepulchres Consecrated, as was the Custom of old to the Dii Manes, those without any regard to the Memory of their Ancestors, or Piety to the Dead, they did not only demolish, but convert all Ornaments of Sepulchre to vile and base uses. To stop therefore this current, and to prevent the objection of Pagans, that Christianity dwelled its Professors of Humanity, (e) a Law was made at Milan, against such who should violate those Monuments of the Dead, and convert the Marble and Pillars thereto belonging to other uses.

102. Neither could the Heathens take any encouragement hereat, whilst a distinction was made betwixt Superstition and Irreverence. Indeed notwithstanding what had been done by Constantine, and the discouragement given by the present Princes, yet very many, and those of the greatest Ranks, as Senators, and others, were both at this time Pagans, and continued such a long time after. But that by degrees the work might be brought to perfection, Constantius in the Fifth Year of his Reign, and the Consulship of Marcellinus and Probinus, Enacts a (a) Law against Idolaters, which forbids all sorts of Persons to offer Sacrifice. This notwithstanding, the old Inhabitant was so unwilling to be dispossessed and spoiled of his Goods, that Five Years after, there was need of another Edict, (b) whereby the Emperours Constantius and Constantius command the Temples of Pagans, which stood within the Walls of Cities, to be shut up, not thinking it fit to proceed further, but permitting those that stood without, to remain in the same condition as formerly. Yet this Constitution seemeth to have had this effect, that the Year following the ancient Centenary Sæcular Games, of which we have already spoken largely, were not celebrated, the Pagans it seems being discouraged, or fearing to be hindred, if they went about it. Notwithstanding what Constantine had done, for the encouragement of the Clergy, in freeing them from publick Offices of charge and trouble (which he even granted to the Jewish Priests) yet this was so far forgotten, that Constantius in his Thirteenth Year makes another Law, (c) whereby he sets free Clerks and their Sons from all Curial Employments, and from all disturbance of Civil Offices.

103. The Traytor Magnentius before the Commission of his execrable parricide against Constantius, in compliance with the times, made Profession of the Christian Faith. But when he had set up for himself, either out of his own Inclination, or which is as probable, to strengthen his Party against Constantius, he seems to have revolted from it; for he then restored those Sacrifices which formerly had been forbidden, as appears from the (a) Code of Theodosius. These Crimes procuring vengeance from Heaven upon him, his Reign was not of such length, as thereby much to endamage Christianity, to which some amends was made by Gallus Cæsar, who seemed for the small time he continued in Power, to be very zealous for Religion, and contributed to the Reformation. This appeared as soon as he was promoted to be Cæsar, when lying at Antioch he took occasion to rid that place of a very notable piece of Idolatry. There was in the Suburbs

Constantius
being baptised by Euzoius the Arian Bishop
of Antioch, dies

Señ being certain Monks who lived in the Deserts of that Country. They placed all Religion in Praying, misled by a misunderstanding of that of the Apostle, Pray without ceasing, esteeming all other Offices of Devotion, Piety, and Virtue, as useless and unnecessary. They held that every Man had a Devil in him, even the Apostles themselves, which can no otherwise be ejected, than with this Spiritual Engine; that every Man had two Souls, whereof one more than Caeſtial, and that by this, even with their bodily Eyes they were capable of beholding the Blessed Trinity. They pretended to strange Revelations, whereby they attained high Perfection, even as high as Christ himself, as also to triumph over Devils, upon which account they were called Entuſiaſts.

99. But a Covetous Devil so far possessed them, that they denied any Alms ought to be given to any other, but themselves, because they were the truly poor in Spirit. They held it lawful to swear, and forswear, and taught Children, that it was lawful to disobey their Parents, so that the Gift or Corban were but brought into their Box. They pretended to Perfection in this Life, to so high a degree, that they could be impeccable in thought; had a strange fancy concerning Spiritual Purgation, as if a Sow and Pigs were seen to go out at a Mans Mouth; and visible Fire, yet without the Propriety of burning, to enter in. Such a virtue they made in Prayer, that it thrust out Devils in Excrements, through the Mouth, and other parts, being quite contrary in this opinion to the Doctrine of other Monks in Egypt about the same time, who refrained from avoidance of all Excrements, as a Sin, because Christ said, that those things which come out of a Man, defile a Man, never considering the Explication of the Text, in which respect they condemned Marriage. So strangely did the Spirit of Error possess Monks at this time, who by their Devotions and Solitary Life, contracted as much of Spiritual Pride, as Melancholly, that some would, as too Holy, pray with no others, and therefore both celebrated, though Lay-men, Holy Offices, and Ordained themselves Bishops, others castrated themselves, some Rebaptized such as turned from Arianism, and others behaved themselves suitably to those Extravagancies as Epiphanius hath related.

100. So fruitful was Constantius his Reign of Heresies and Schisms, that the Church could scarcely perceive her self free from those Calamities which the preceding Pagan times had inflicted. For though her Sufferings from without were removed, yet she laboured under such inward Pressures, as almost equalled her former Troubles. Her best and most genuine Sons being so roughly handled by those who challenged the same Original, that she seemed even to slight the Friendship of the Scepter, which had defended her indeed from her sworn and professed Enemies, but had still kept her Eyes as moist as ever, by assisting her false, though highly pretending Friends, in the Persecution of those most dear unto her. Her cries were at length heard, and his days were accomplished, who was the furtherer of her sorrow. For Constantius, who had so long robbed the Son of God of his Glory, was now well nigh deprived of his own Earthly Diadem, and although he escaped Deprivation, yet it was by no less charge and price, than of his own Life, giving place to him who had fought it, and unwillingly resigning his Seat to that Person, for whom, he had in his thoughts designed no other Mansions, than those of the dead. He according to the depraved Custom of those times, deferred also his Baptism to his death, and then receiving it at the Hands of Eusebius the Arian Bishop of Antioch, sealed as it were that Doctrine at his end, which he had so much defended in his Life. Yet did he much advance the common name and Interest of Christianity, improving his Power and Authority for the Suppression of Pagan Superstition, and carrying on that Reformation which his Father so happily had begun. This because the continued Series of those Arian Controversies permitted us not hitherto to describe, we shall now see what Laws he made in reference to Religion. For by them the State and Condition of times is more fully known, than otherwise. Particular Relations of private Persons may fail, their discovery being more uncertain, their Fear, Affection, and other Impediments more prevalent. But from the nature and course of the Remedy, we may best distinguish and judge of the Distemper.

Constantius
being baptized by Eusebius the Arian Bishop
of Antioch, also

101. And

His Laws
Ecclesiastical.

101. And the first we shall take notice of is that Crime of Adultery, a Sin, which because such, it concerned Magistrates to prevent as Christians. and because of such a nature as to confound gentitudes, and procure so great Thefts and Robberies, as of whole Inheritances, it behoved them to prevent, as Fathers of their Country. The Emperours therefore, in the Third Year of their Reign, and the Consulship of Constantius and Valens, by a (a) Constitution, inflicted death upon Adulterers as Sacrilegious against Marriage, not fearing the censure of Heresie for so doing, which had they lived in the time of (b) Binnius, they had certainly incurred. This same year they (c) forbid Christian Women to marry with Jews, as thereby casting themselves into great Temptations. And by another (d) Constitution, taking care lest incestuous Marriages, a thing too frequent in those days, should defile the Christian Faith, they forbid that any Man Marry his Brothers or Sisters Daughter. Perceiving how Religious Zeal is apt to run into the other extrem, that whilst it mends, it is always thereby apt to marr, and to change Superstition for Sacrilege, Desolation, and Rapine, in their Fourth Year, and the Consulship of Acyndinus and Proculus, they were constrained to obviate that humour which ever rages in Reformation. Christianity now having spread far and wide throughout the Empire, and Christians encouraged by the Profession of Princes, very zealously opposed whatever they thought tended to Idolatry, and therefore having in their Grounds many Sepulchres Consecrated, as was the Custom of old to the Dii Manes, those without any regard to the Memory of their Ancestors, or Piety to the Dead, they did not only demolish, but convert all Ornaments of Sepulchre to vile and base uses. To stop therefore this current, and to prevent the objection of Pagans, that Christianity diverted its Professors of Humanity, (e) a Law was made at Milan, against such who should violate those Monuments of the Dead, and convert the Marble and Pillars thereto belonging to other uses.

102. Neither could the Heathens take any encouragement hereat, whilst a distinction was made betwixt Superstition and Irreverence. Indeed notwithstanding what had been done by Constantine, and the discouragement given by the present Princes, yet very many, and those of the greatest Ranks, as Senators, and others, were both at this time Pagans, and continued such a long time after. But that by degrees the work might be brought to perfection, Constantius in the Fifth Year of his Reign, and the Consulship of Marcellinus and Probinus, Enacts a (a) Law against Idolaters, which forbids all sorts of Persons to offer Sacrifice. This notwithstanding, the old Inhabitant was so unwilling to be dispossessed and spoiled of his Goods, that Five Years after, there was need of another Edict, (b) whereby the Emperours Constantius and Constans command the Temples of Pagans, which stood within the Walls of Cities, to be shut up, not thinking it fit to proceed further, but permitting those that stood without, to remain in the same condition as formerly. Yet this Constitution seemeth to have had this effect, that the Year following the ancient Centenary Secular Games, of which we have already spoken largely, were not celebrated, the Pagans it seems being discouraged, or fearing to be hindered, if they went about it. Notwithstanding what Constantine had done, for the encouragement of the Clergy, in freeing them from publick Offices of charge and trouble (which he even granted to the Jewish Priests) yet this was so far forgotten, that Constantius in his Thirteenth Year makes another Law, (c) whereby he sets free Clerks and their Sons from all Curial Employments, and from all disturbance of Civil Offices.

103. The Traytor Magnentius before the Commission of his execrable parricide against Constantius, in compliance with the times, made Profession of the Christian Faith. But when he had set up for himself, either out of his own Inclination, or which is as probable, to strengthen his Party against Constantius, he seems to have revolted from it; for he then restored those Sacrifices which formerly had been forbidden, as appears from the (a) Code of Theodosius. These Crimes procuring vengeance from Heaven upon him, his Reign was not of such length, as thereby much to endamage Christianity, to which some amends was made by Gallus Caesars, who seemed for the small time he continued in Power, to be very zealous for Religion, and contributed to the Reformation. This appeared as soon as he was promoted to be Caesar, when lying at Antioch he took occasion to rid that place of a very notable piece of Idolatry. There was in

Suburbs

The Grove of Daphne destroyed.

Vide Baronium ad
A.D. 351.

Suburbs of that City the famed Grove of Daphne, so much celebrated by Poets, and other Heathen Writers, for its Consecration to Apollo, and a Temple and Oracle of the Devil. Being much haunted still by the Superstitious Gentiles, he concluded he should spoil all their sport if he removed thither the Body of Babylas the Martyr, some time Bishop of that See. This being done, both what he had designed did succeed, and what was much more observable, that the Devil could not utter thence any Oracle as long as the Body there continued, which he confessed to Julian afterwards, whereas it was commonly thought, that this happened because no Sacrifices were offered. Thus did Gallus effect that which his Uncle Constantine seemeth to have purposed unsuccessfully, who to abolish the Memory of Apollo in Daphne, had there erected his Mother Helen's Statue, had called the place Augustale, and after himself Constantiniana Daphne, giving also to the Twenty third Legion, which he had lately raised, the name of Constantiniana Dafenensis, as from several ancient Medals, and Inscriptions, it doth appear.

Pagani who

104. But Constantius, that he might prevent all Treason against his Person, or remove that, which otherwise, through Gods displeasure, might endanger his Cause, when he undertook his Expedition against Magnentius, and Verano, cashiered all his Souldiers, who were not already, or now refused, to be Baptized, though he himself deferred it till his Death. It happened upon this occasion, that such as refused Baptism, were called Pagani or Pagans, which word being first peculiar to those that were not Souldiers, in contradistinction to Military Men, became after this, a common name of all Ethnicks. Baronius thinks that the Gentiles might so be called from this reason, that when the Idol-Temples were shut up in Cities, they retired into the Pagi or Villages, to perform their Superstitious Rites, which they did till the time of Honorius or longer. Honorius the Emperour using the word in this sense, interprets it, as meaning the Gentiles, so that it had not been long in use, as applicable to Idolaters. Baronius tells us, the first he finds thus to use it, is Optatus Milenitanus, who wrote against Parmentianus, in the Reign of Valentinian and Valens, and he contends against such as would produce Tertullian to the contrary. The word Gentile was taken from the Jews, but at this time the Romans, when they used this word, understood thereby Barbarians, as appeareth by the Rescripts of Valentinian and Valens, out of the Code of Theodosius.

105. In the time of Constantius it seemeth, that Secular Judges drew Bishops into their Courts, and would take cognisance of Matters peculiar to them, and purely Ecclesiastical, which upon complaint of Hilary Bishop of Poitiers, the Emperour taking into Consideration, by a (a) Constitution dated on the first of October, in the Nineteenth Year of his Reign, and the Consulship of Arbeto and Lollianus, forbids Bishops to be accused in Secular Courts, permitting their Causes to be decided by their Brethren, which is to be understood of Ecclesiastical. The next Year after, taking notice how much Idolatry yet was practiced, notwithstanding all former Laws, he in conjunction with Julian (who though a Pagan in his Heart, was at this time glad to dissemble) publisheth severe (b) Rescripts against Auspices, Mathematicians, Magicians, Diviners, and such like Creatures, with those that should consult them; as also against such as sacrificed to Idols, or worshipped their Images, making those Crimes Capital, like a severe vindicator of the Christian Religion, as he styles himself; But this was done rather in terror, the Rod was shaken, but seldom or never did it strike Idolaters, however it might reach the Fortune-tellers, against whom the Emperour might be acted by other reasons besides those of Religion. The Emperours in the following Year, and the One and twentieth of Constantius, (c) except from the general Collation to those Tradefmen were bound, the Clerks called Clerici Copiata, that is the Libitinarii, or those that ordered Matters belonging to Burials, Vespillones or Beavers, Polluitoris, or those that washed and anointed dead Bodies. They also confirmed Priviledges formerly granted to the Roman Church, out of consideration of the Dignity of that ancient Metropolis. This same Year also Constantius wrote a Rescript to the People against Inchanters, such as disturbed the Elements and raised Spirits; and to Orfitus Prefect of the City, against such as exhibited the old shews of the Gladiators. It was in the Prefectship of this Orfitus, that the great Obelisk was removed by order of Constantius from Alexandria to Rome, and there placed in the Great Circus, which

(a) C. Theod.
l. 12. de Episc.
& Cler.

(b) C. Theod.
l. 8. de Episc.
& Cler.

(c) C. Theod.
l. 1. de Episc.
& Cler.

C. Theod.
l. 1. de Episc.
& Cler.

long time after Sixtus Quintus translated into the Lateran Pallace, and made Christian by a Cross erected on the top thereof.

106. The Year following being the Two and twentieth of his Reign, and in the Consulship of T. Fabius Dacianus, and Neratius Cerealis, he published among other Constitutions, another Law against the several sorts of Diviners, and Fortune-tellers, whom if they were found in the Court, he subjected to Tortures. It is probable that something he had smelt out, concerning Julian, and what tricks he plaid at this time in Gall, where and elsewhere, when he could privately, he gave up himself to Magick, as we have formerly shewed out of Ammianus, who cannot, though a Pagan, forbear to accuse him of excess in this Particular. From him also we may learn, that Constantius was about this time much moved against Idolaters, who still continued their Sacrifices, and consulted Oracles, notwithstanding all his Laws formerly published against those Superstitions, which carried him out to that Severity, that such as should but be found to wear Amulets about them against Diseases, as the Quartan Ague, or were seen to wander about the Tombs, he subjected to Condemnation. And as he bent his endeavours thus to eradicate Pagan Superstitions, so did he curse the Jews, with whom he would not have Christians to Marry, or have Communion. The Insurrection they made in his Seventeen Year was so provoking, that Gallus Caesar, to suppress their Rebellion, destroyed many thousands of Men, Women, and Children, and burnt many of their Towns. In the same Year died Rabba, their great Doctor both in the School called Surana, and the other named Pam-bitana, to whom succeeded Nachman the Son of Iaac. In the Two and twentieth Year of Constantius, Hillel the Second, the Son of Judas, began the Computation, which the Jews use at this day. He built upon the Foundations laid formerly by Hillel the First, his Progenitor, who died A. D. 10. He took this for a Principle, that the Vernal Equinoctial fell out on the Twenty third of March, which was true in the days of Hillel the First; but the case was altered in the time of the Younger, and the said Two and twentieth Year of the Emperour Constantius.

Heron. in Circu.

Jacobus Coppilotus & Astronomi Calala.

M

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

From the Reign and Apostacy of Julian to the Second Oecumenical Council held at Constantinople.

The space of Twenty Years wanting five Months.

1. THe Tares of Arranisim were now grown so forward and flourishing that there wanted a Winter to check their growth, lest they should choke the Corn, and quite overrun the Lords Husbandry. As Friends, when they fall out, give advantage to such as seek the ruin of both Nations, and formerly allied, being once grown wanton through Prosperity, first quarrel and weaken each other, then lye open to Forraign attempts, and in contention for the Feems, and the right of Sovereignty, are made a prey by one that hovers above them both, for a fit advantage so happened it to Christians after the death of Constantius. Flavius Claudius Julianus his Cousin German and Successor (though against his will) having been Educated in the Christian Religion, yet from a Child, if we believe Ammianus, was much inclined to Paganism, and if we credit himself, had for the space of Ten years, though privately for fear of Constantius, yet Really and Cordially addicted himself to that Superstition, resolving that if ever his Stars so wrought as to make him Master of the Roman Empire, to recall from Exile his banished Gods, restore them their Temples, rebuild their Altars, and kindle again those Fires which the late zeal of his Prædecessors had almost extinguished, without any hopes of resuscitation. But this he thought he must effect by degrees, and used such arts as in contemplation of those means which he perceived had formerly been applied unsuccessfully, were most proper and likely to bring about his design.

2. His severity against the Eunuchs and other Courtiers of Constantius, though proceeding from private indignation and revenge, yet being joyned with Justice, and meeting with the same passions and interests in others (who had smarted under the late grievances, as well as himself) procured him applause and good esteem. He seemed to be sensible of the injustice of the Arians, and the hard usage of the Orthodox, whom he restored to their Countries, Sees, Livings, and Estates. But though at first he compelled none to his own way, and never lived to ripen those projects which he had laid as prævious to that design, yet did he take the course of all those who prudently resolve to turn the strong Current of the Multitude, first to discountenance dissentions, and give an indifferent liberty to all, yet so as to shew by his practice, what he himself approved, till by securing himself of the main chance, and getting firm possession of the Sovereignty, having once gained the Posts of greatest concernment, and made himself Master of all the avenues, he could turn the Engines of Peace, which are the Laws, against those who had lately been possessed of them, and then at length enjoyn, when had Obedience within his beck. His indulgence therefore extended as well to Hæreticks as Orthodox. Some of that sort, as Ætius, and others being in Exile. To all alike he gave liberty of Conscience, Inhibiting Constraint and Force, which he knew, if it came once to blows, would be first put upon his own Party, when the Christians, who filled all places within the Empire, should betake themselves to other Weapons besides their ancient Prayers and Tears. He commanded the Temples of Idols to be opened, offered himself at the Sacrifices, and not content with the Devotion and Attendance of an ordinary Pagan, both took upon him the Office and Title of Pontifex Maximus, according to the custom of his Heathen Ancestors, (in which he was Initiated with the ordinary Ceremonies,) and was also made Pontife over the Eleusinia, and ordained other inferiour Pontifes which he distributed into the Provinces.

3. In

CHAP. IV. The Constantinopolitan Roman Empire. Julian.

83

3. In compliance with this opportunity, offered the Exiled Bishops return to their own Sees, and amongst the rest Athanasius the great Champion of Christs Divinity. Some say he appeared in his Church soon after the Death of Constantius, but Gregory Nazianzen, in the work which he consecrated to his praise, faith, he returned thither after the Death of George, who being both hateful to God and Man, came to such an end, as his Carriage and Demeanour had deserved. For besides what we have formerly said of his Cruelties, his Avarice and Extorsions were great, wherewith he harafed the Alexandrians. Epiphanius writes, that he spoyled many of them of their Patrimonies, that he ingrossed to himself the trade of Nitre, and of the Salt-pits, procured the Monopole of Paper, and making a gain out of the vilest sorts of Materials, brought up a new Order of Letticarii or Biere-Carriers in the Church, which he restrained to a certain Number to be at his Devotion, suffering none, but those by himself appointed, to be employed in the Burial of the Dead. This was far from any care of seeing Christians decently Interred, his design was only his own profit, not to speak, faith he, of his last Cruelties. Being deposed in the Council of Seleucia, by the Semarian Faction, he regarded not at all the Censure, but returned to Alexandria, where not at all daunted, he fell upon his former Courses, plaguing as well the Gentiles as the Orthodox Christians. By these means he became so odious to all Parties and Conditions, that a fit occasion only was wanting to dispatch him out of the way, and that at length presented it self; about which, though there be some Variation in Writers as to the manner, yet all agree in the Substance.

4. That the Emperour had given him Licence to Convert the ancient Temple of Mithras or the Sun, which had layn a long time desolate, into a Christian Church, is affirmed by Ecclesiastical Writers, and that great heaps of Slaughtered Bodies which had been offered to that Idol, being found therein, were by the Christians exposed to publick view, to render the more odious the Irreligion and Impiety of the Gentiles. Hereby grievously incensed, and formerly provoked, by his insolencies having got advantage, and encouraged by the profession of Julian, they fell upon him, and slew him in the place. Ammianus tells the Story thus, that passing once by the Goody Temple, dedicated to the Genius of the place, with many People according to the Custom waiting on him, casting his Eyes upon it after a scornful fashion, how long, said he, shall those ruines continue unmolested? Upon report hereof, the Pagans furiously iraged, and hearing in the very nick of time, that their Governour was newly dead, they gladly laid hold on the opportunity, not quieting themselves till they had torn a Man so generally hated, into almost a thousand pieces. Ammianus relates, as causes of the Peoples fury, that he had incensed the Emperour against them, accusing them as spurning against his Government, that he was an Informer, and to curry favour with the Prince, had buzzed into his credulous Ears, that all Houses in the City built by Alexander the Founder at the publick charges, he might justly appropriate to his Exchequer. Some imputed his death to the favours of Athanasius, but it is generally agreed on, that he was killed by the Univerfal consent both of Christians and Heathens, for the reasons we have recited. The Emperour seemed at first exceedingly incensed, threatening bitter things against the Murderers, but at length qualifying his passion, it sufficed him to chide them by a Letter,* wherein he lays the fault upon all in general, for those Causes before mentioned, these take from him the reputation of a Martyr, seeing it is the Cause, not the Punishment, that maketh such, and deny him the Title of Saint. Upon which account we cannot have such hard thoughts of Tradition, as to think him the same with St. George the English Patron.

5. Athanasius coming to his See, after the removal of George, was received with all joy imaginable. The Arians, banished from the Congregation, held their Conventicles in private Houses, and Elected Lucius to succeed in the Bishoprick, which notwithstanding, he went on in his way without impediment in the discharge of his Episcopal Function. In the mean time Lucifer Bishop of Carthagenum in Sardinia, and Eusebius Bishop of Vercelle, a City, as Socrates tells us, of Ligurian Italians, being amongst others recalled by the Emperours Edict, considering how they might recover their Bishopricks with most quiet, and agreeably with the Canons, resolved that the one should go to Antioch, and the other to Alexandria, to procure a Council wherein those matters might be debated. Lucifer sending his Deacon to Alexandria, to signify his assent to the Decrees

M 2

of Athanasius returns to Alexandria upon the death of George.

The manner of his death.

Julian the Emperour.

He tolerated all Religions.

* Apud Socr. l. 3. c. 3.

of the Synod departed for Antioch, where he found the State of that Church much out of order, a great variance and division being in the People, as well, as by reason of the Heretical opinions of Euzoios, as also because the Favourers of Meletius and the Orthodox were at odds, those looking upon him as Ordained by Arians, though he held not their opinions. Lucifer Ordained Paulinus Bishop of that See. Eusebius arriving at Alexandria, dealt earnestly with Athanasius about the summoning of a Council, to which many Confessors, who had lately dared to shew their heads, being summoned, they Condemned the several Doctrines of Arians, Apollinarians, and Macedonians. They affirmed the Divinity of the Holy Ghost, as being of one substance in the Blessed Trinity, and that the Son of God at his Incarnation, took not only Humane Flesh, but a reasonable Soul also, as the ancient Fathers had delivered.

A Council held at Alexandria.

6. The Fathers perceiving that there was some difference of terms betwixt the Greek and Latin Churches, in the word Essence, and Substance, and Hypostasis, though they agreed in substance by reason of the several proprieties of Speech; by the perswasion of Athanasius, subscribing to the same thing in substance, were contented to lay aside those words which occasioned the difference, and to use no other than those found in the Scriptures, except in case of Errors, for a clearer discerning and judging of them. Taking into consideration the Multiplicity of Creeds, they concluded to lay all aside, except that of the Nicene Council, rejecting the Confession made at Sardica, as well as the rest; Athanasius being also very sensible what imputations the Arians had laid upon his retirement in those times of Persecution, which they called deserting of his place and trust, he took this occasion of clearing himself, and recited his Apology for his flight into the Wilderness. But there was an other thing which gave greater occasion to this Meeting, and took up the greatest debate, occasioned by the late Arian Persecutions. Several through infirmity had subscribed, and acted against their Consciences, the Terrors of Exile, and Tortures, having wrested from them a Compliance, which notwithstanding those that had made resistance and stood out, so censured them, that they held them unworthy of Communion, as also such as had any charitable opinion of them. This proved such a growing Evil, as stood in need of a speedy Remedy, for which Cause many out of all parts, both Asia and Italy, as well as Africa, had recourse unto this Council. After much debate, wherein some would have debarred those that had fallen from the Sacred Orders; it was resolved, that such as had relapsed through infirmity, or miscarried through ignorance, should upon repentance be received into Communion, and to their former Places. By this Decree, which was but conformable to what the Church had practiced in the like Cases of Samosatenus, the Novatians, and Donatists, the World was rescued out of the Jaws of the Devil, saith St. Hierome.

7. The Resolutions and Decrees of the Council, being dispersed amongst the Churches, did much good. But as God works good out of Evil, so the Devil will be sure to work Evil out of Good, and turn that to poison, which was intended as a Remedy. Eusebius, after the Council was broken up, went to Antioch, where finding much difference about the Election of Paulinus, he endeavoured to compose them to no purpose, and so got him home to his own Bishopric. From the State of affairs, he found reason to dislike of the Ordination of Paulinus, which Lucifer understanding, took it as a disparagement to his Judgment, and growing impatient, refused to Communicate with Eusebius. From this indignation he arose to that height, as to quarrel with the determinations of the Synod, and made a Schism from the Church, wherein he died, giving Name to a Sect, which continuing to the time of Socrates, were from him called Luciferians. Eusebius, from Antioch passed through the Eastern Countries, strengthening such as were weak in the Faith, and instructing them in the Doctrine of the Church, whence he travelled into Ilyrium, and coming into Italy, in like sort he diligently preached the word of God. Athanasius in like manner so managed his business at Alexandria, that the Church proceeded in a very flourishing Condition, till the Arians envying him this Felicity, joyned with the common Enemy, and moved Julian against him, who by this time had so far settled his business, and carried on his Design, as to be almost ripe for Blood and Slaughters. We must a little observe his Methods, and trace his Steps; for his Policies in his own judgment were very refined, and such as noted his Predecessors of indifcretion.

Vide Sacr. et Reg. l. 6. c. 6.

Nazian. c. 28.

Ruffin. 9.

Socr. c. 9.

The Sect of the Luciferians.

8. His first Principle was, that Christians were not to be compelled to his Religion, concluding with himself, that should he proceed to Death and Tortures, they would, as he had observed of former Persecutions, and as he himself was wont to Phrase it, flye as fast, and as thick to Martyrdom, as Bees to a Hive; and thereby gain both greater Reputation and Acceffion to Christianity. He thought that those whom death could not fright, yet Disgrace and lingring Penury might drive to Idolatry. Therefore he barred to them all accels of Honours and Employments, and when he was about to march towards Persia, took from all such Souldiers the Military Girdle, as refused to Sacrifice to the Pagan Deities. He thought Scoffing and Derision Engines able to batter that Faith, which the Sword could not reach, and accordingly made it his business to flout at, and jeer both the Christian Name and Profession, giving Christ himself no other Title than that of Galilean, calling the Worshippers of him Galileans, and this he did not only in his ordinary talk, but in his Epistles and Rescripts, and at length commanded by a Law, that no otherwise they should be called. He thought that if once he could deprive them of their Teachers, their Zeal, which those continually kept warm, would at length insensibly cool, and come to nothing. This made him take away such Stipends, Lands, and publick Salaries, as formerly had been granted by Constantine and his Sons, to the publick Ministry. And that as well Priests as People, might, through ignorance, have their Spirits abased, and their Wits without edge; whereby they might be exposed as well to the Contempt, as insinuations of their Enemies, he forbade they should be instructed in any of the liberal Arts and Sciences.

9. The Glorious advantages of Christian Religion, being (as an Apostate) known unto him, he endeavoured to transfer upon his Pagan impiety. Being Conciousto himself of the Virtues of Christians, and how much they adorned their holy Profession, he pressed, upon all sects of Philosophers, whom as the Champions of his Cause, he much cherished, the advantages of a good Life, which was to be answerable to their Pretences. To this purpose he appointed, that some should be set apart to instruct the People throughout the Towns and Villages, and in a familiar way, to reduce the speculative part of Philosophy into Precepts. The Poor he also took care for, that such as could not work might be relieved, and the Sick not perish for want of things necessary to their recovery. Reputing those means most effectual, and as deep and pravaient Mysteries for accomplishing that, in a Calm and Serene manner, which all the fury of so many Ages could not compass, he added some little Arts and Tricks to cheat the Christians, and trappan them into Idolatry. Having removed the Cross, which Constantine had added to the Labarum or Standard of the Empire, and reduced it to the ancient Pagan Model, he also added to the Images of himself, some Pictures of his Gods, as Mars, Mercury, and Serapis, that in the Ceremonies paid to his own Majesty the reverence of those Idols might be included. Such Victuals as were sold in the Market, he would cause to be polluted by things offered to his Idols, and Springs to be sprinkled with their Holy Water.

10. By these Courses presuming he could uadermine Christianity, he Vigorously prosecuted the reinforcement of decayed Paganism. This was both by his own example, by opening the Doors of Præterment to Pagans, and them alone, and also by taking from Christian Discipline such Patterns of prudential Orders, Rites, and Customs, as he thought might be productive of Peace, Security and Establishment. To this purpose, he intended to erect publick Schools in each City; in the Temples he would have observed such manners of Worship, such Seats and Benches as the Christians used, placed one above another; reading and explanation of prophane Authors, both in the Theoretick and Practick part, with Alternate Prayers, and Hymns, Animadversions upon Offenders, with penitence and satisfaction enjoyned. He purposed to build Hospitals, as also Monastaries both for Men and Women, exhorting the Pontiffes to set about it at the publick and private charge, as Nicephorus writes, and approving much the way of Letters Commendatory for distressed Persons, he took this course of transmitting them from one Place and Country into another. Then did he spur those on, who were ready enough to run of themselves, to the restitution of Temples, Sacrifices, and other rites of the Gentiles, and herein when many Christians, who had been instruments in demolishing those Buildings, which the Laws had ordered to be pulled down, were miserably abused, and Murdered; he not only connived at those things things, but encouraged them in such Outrages. Many also, whom their Zeal so far transported, as to revile him for his Apostacy, and oppose his Actions, he commanded to be put to death, and applauded most horrid Murders and Massacres upon this account committed throughout the Empire. Such as refused to Sacrifice, and threw away the Military Girdles, though upon other Pretextes, he would find some opportunity or other to disgrace, and even put to death, if he perceived they were of Interest to oppose his Designs, and if he could spare them in his Wars. At length when he had so far brought about his design, as to be something secure of his Cause, the Christians continuing stedfast to their old Principle, of suffering rather than Rebelling, though they opposed his Proceedings now and then, as to particular places and things, and ceased not to tell him his own plainly; he purposed to make away the most eminent Bishops, such as were Fathers of the Church, and Props of the Christian Religion. For this purpose, though at the first he pretended to be a Lover of Union and Peace, now he began to cherish their Differences, and use them against one another. And had he returned from the Persian War with good success, it was his Resolution for that Victory, to have offered an Holocaust of Galileans to his Gods, and have tied Christianity to his Triumphal Chariot.

11. The effects of all these Arts and Mysteries, was a change of the Scene for so short a time as he play'd his Tragedy, whereby one might behold nothing but Sacrifices and Incense upon the Stage, which was changed into a Temple, the Diadem transformed into a Miter, and the Scepter into a Sooth-sayers Rod; Dumb Devils in several shapes running too and fro, but in great Anxiety, as afraid of those, who were now constrained to act the Parts of Fools, and forced to put on the Vizards of Idiots, that they might afford matter of Triumph, and Insultation. The Priest wearing a great Beard, and a Stole, whereon were wrought Images of Bulls-heads, taking great pains to restore decay'd Altars, then cringing, and conjuring his obliged Deities to grace him with a verbal Incouragement, that he might know they were still in being, and assert their right against the late Intrusion of those miserable Sacrilegious Wretches, whom (the Gods approving, and prospering their own Cause, and Restitution to their ancient right, against which no Prescription could be pleaded,) he doubted not by most likely means, and due methods, to remove quite out of the way, being, as he well understood, a great eye-sore to Apollo, for whom he had furnished and prepared his Antient and Royal Pallace. Apollo knowing his Reign was at an end, and a period set to his Usurpation, would fain have put him off, as unwilling to show his weakness; and having been Dumb for so many years, it was grown even a trouble to him to speak; but unwilling he should know the true cause, and thereby discover his weakness, as well as Treason, he gave him such an answer, as shewed his Antipathy to the Servants, and Loyal Subjects of his Lord and Master, whereby he might stir him up to Persecute them, and carry on his own work, which he was glad to see done, though more sorry to think it would be but for a moment. For the Priest hereat enraged, and many Scuffles ensuing betwixt him, his Servants, and those whom he termed Varlets, and Sacrilegious, when his Choler was up, and he had resolved to renew the ancient Devices of his Predecessors against them, by adding Violence to his former Stratagems. The Lord and Master both of Apollo, of him, and all his, did but beckon to an Enemy of the Priest, whom he had reserved behind the Curtain, and he breaks into the House of the Priest, upon which news he retires, lays aside his Miter, and resumes his Diadem. After a little expectation, word was brought that the sport was at an end, for the Priest was slain; whereupon Apollo gave up all for lost, yet resolved to play at small Games rather than fit out, and promote the differences he knew full well to be amongst his Enemies, which prosperity he thought would not at all lessen. And so the Act abruptly ended.

12. Such, if the Gravity of History permit us to use those Terms and Remembrances, was the Tragedy to which Julian fitted all his Preparations. The Religion countenanced, and therefore Rampant was the Pagan Impiety Authority and Laws, trampling upon Christianity, and exposing it to the derision of its professed Enemy. The Emperour, though taking care for Restitution of all its professed Enemy. The Emperour, though especially concerned for the Temple of Apollo at Daphne, which he knew his Brother, his Uncle, and Cousins had most despised, because of the Oracle, which, although since the coming of Christ, the Devil had been dumb for the most part, as appears from many Testimonies, and especially from that Book of Plutarch, which would fain resolve the question why Oracles were ceased, yet it seems did sometimes, for the Incouragement of Pagans, give them answers. For those Christian Writers which make mention of those Passages, tell us, how the Body of Babylas, being removed into the Grave, though it drove him not quite away, yet put the Devil to silence, and that several reasons were given thereof, amongst which this obtained most credit, that it was because no Sacrifices were offered. Julian being now at Antioch, made an experiment, offering Sacrifices in abundance, but Apollo still continued dumb, at which the Emperour much disquieted, when he provoked him to answer, at length had this return, That the Grove was defiled with dead Bodies. There needed no Exposition upon this Oracle, Julian knowing that the Body of Babylas was hereby meant, which he commanded to be removed. Yet he did not offer any Indignity to the Reliques of that Holy Martyr, which the Citizens of Antioch, with great Solemnity, carried back into the City, singing Psalms in the way, and this Verse amongst others, Confounded be all they that worship carved Images, and that delight in vain Gods; whereupon many were laid in hold, and some were tortured.

He is much concerned for the Temple of Apollo at Daphne.

Leg. Chrysost. Orat. cont. Gentiles.

Psal. 97-7.

13. Sozomen here relates a remarkable Passage of one Theodorus a young Man, whom being set upon the Rack, amidst his Torments an Angel comforted, allaying his pains, wiping off the Sweat, and refreshing his Limbs with cool Water. He thus strengthened and assisted, sung the said Verse with greater Alacrity, which invincible Resolution being made known to the Emperour, he considered, that if he proceeded in his course, he should loose, and the Christians gain Reputation, and gave order they should all be discharged. The reason why he was the more ready to dismiss them, as also to suffer the Body of Babylas to be removed with such Honour, might very well be the experience he had had of the Divine Vengeance upon some of his own Relations, as Julianus his Uncle, Prefect of the East, and Felix, Prefect of his Exchequer, whom being formerly Christians, he had by his example drawn into the Fellowship of Apostacy. These two being sent by him to the Dominicum Aureum, as it was called, that sumptuous Church built at Antioch by Constantine, to fetch thence the Treasure; Julianus first caused Theodorus a Priest that kept it, when he refused to discover it, to be tortured, and when that would not do, to be Beheaded, pissed against the Holy Table, gave Euzoios a box on the Ear, who would have hindred him, and sore him down upon the Holy Vessels, whereof Felix viewing their Magnificence, said, Look with what sumptuous Vessels is the Son of Mary served. But Vengeance presently seized on them both, Julianus his Members and Bowels purifying in such a sort, that he could thence void any Excrements, which he vomited through his Blasphemous Mouth, till he miserably perished. Felix suddenly died by Bleeding at the Mouth. And other Apostates by sudden death began to receive the reward of their Impieties.

L. 5. c. 18. 19. 67. vide Theodoret. L. 2. c. 11. 12. Sup. l. 3. c. 19. Refusus.

The remarkable death of several Apostates.

The Temple of Apollo burnt.

14. But when Julian had purged the Grave and Temple of Daphne from all Impurities, as he and his God accounted them, by removal of Babylas his Body, whether at the Intercession of the Martyr's Soul, as some conceive, or otherwise, the Temple was better purified by Fire, which the Christians of those times affirmed was sent from Heaven, and consumed the Roof and the Idol to Ashes. Julian, though by Tortures he could not get any more out of the Priest, than that it was consumed by that means, yet took this occasion to slander the Christians, Ammianus also, amongst other opinions (which we have formerly mentioned) delivering this as one, that it was fired by their procurement, yet did certain Country-men affirm, that they saw a Thunder-bolt fall from the Air upon the Temple. However the Burning of it was much bewailed by all the Pagans, and Libanius a Sophist of Antioch composed some mourning and ridiculous Ditties. Julian more concerned than any, to divert the Joy of those he thought would triumph over the Ruines, bent his Wit how to plague the Antiochians, by defiling their Fountains, and mixing things sacrificed with their Victuals, which he practised at Constantinople with more success, for there the Citizens abstained from them, but the Inhabitants of Antioch followed the Apostles Rule, asking no Questions for Conscience sake, which the more nettled the Emperour. Certain it is from all Hands, that Julian both ill treated, and was ill treated by the Antiochians. He wrote a twitting Libel against them, called Misopogon and Antiochica, because the Christians of Antioch jeared him for his Beard, to which they made as fawcy returns, being a little (which we cannot but take notice of) removed from that dutiful demeanour of the ancient Professors even to their Pagan and Persecuting Princes. Such force hath Prosperity over the Tempers and Constitutions of the very best.

The Antiochian Libel against Julian.

Nicene Creed; yet, as appeareth from St. Hierome, rejected the word Homoufios, or of the same Substance with the Father, as also Anomaeos, or of a diverse Substance, and chose the word Homoioufios, as a mean betwixt both, as asserting the Son, neither of the same, nor of diverse, but of like Substance with the Father, and so herein cloving with the Semiarrians. Their Faith they sent in a Supplicatory Letter to the Emperor, whose answer was, that he was for Peace, and should countenance and esteem such as were of that Principle and Opinion, for which Themistius the Philosopher, in the Oration intituled Consul, and made in his Commendation, extolled him to the Skies, because that in granting every Man his Liberty, he stopped the Mouths, as he said, of Parasites and Sycophants, which kind of Men (such as was Acacius) worship not the King of Heaven, but the Earthly Crown and Scepter, much like to Euripus, sometimes carried this way, and sometimes that.

25. But Euzois Bishop of Antioch (of his own Faction,) and other Arians, little observed those Rules, who remembering their old Trade, endeavoured to bring Athanasius into an evil opinion of the Emperor, laying to his charge heavy Crimes, which the Emperor little regarded, yet either sent for by him, or of his own accord, (both which are written) he came to Court and fully falsified him. Though the Emperor was for Peace and Liberty amongst Christians, yet made he a distinction betwixt them and Pagans, commanding the Idol Groves and Temples to be shut up, whereat the Erbnicks wandered abroad and hid themselves, and such as wore the Pallium or Philosophical Habit laid it aside, and put on the usual and common Attire; the Bloody and detestable Sacrifices, wherein they had taken their fill, during the Reign of Julian, were also taken away. And yet though he was very cordial for Christianity, and abhorred the Religion of Pagans, yet did he favour Maximus and Priscus the Philosophers, who had been of Council with Julian, and were the great Enemies of his Faith, for which, as also for his intention to adorn Julian's Sepulchre at Tarfus, some who pry into the Secrets of God Almighty, think him taken away so shortly after by sudden death. However those Historians that write of these times condole his case, and it is their judgment, that as well the Ecclesiastical Affairs of the Church, as the Politick State of the Empire, would have much flourished, had it so pleased the great Disposer of all things, under his Government.

26. Valentinian and Valens who succeeded him, were his Fellow Confessors, having both cast off the Military Girdle, and refused to Sacrifice to Idols. They prosecuted the Magicians, especially Maximus they handled roughly, who had not been only the cause of much mischief in general to Christianity, but had created trouble and danger to Valentinian. At their first beginning also they made a Law against Idolaters, forbidding the Celebration of their Mytheries by night. But it seems their Zeal was too quick, the times would not bear it, such an alteration in mens minds had the courtes of Julian effected. Therefore by the violent importunity of Pratextatus a Pro-Consul, and a vehement defender of Paganism, they rather dispensed with, than abrogated it, as Zozimus writes. For the Pagans might take it the worse, because Valentinian in the beginning of his Reign, had published an Edict, whereby he granted liberty of Conscience to all, in which respect he is much commended by Ammianus. But such learned Christians as professing the Sciences, had been inhibited by Julian, they restored to their antient Liberty and Privilege, by a Law enacted for that very purpose. Notwithstanding they were both Christians, there was great difference as to their Faith. Valentinian clave to the Doctrine of the Nicene Council, and troubled none of the contrary Perswasion. Valens being Baptized by Eudoxius the Arian Bishop of Constantinople, espoused not only the Opinions, but the Quarrels of that Party, raising a great Persecution against such as owned the Clause of One Substance.

27. Valens lying at Constantinople, the Macedonians waited on him, and were not so forgetful as not to move him about the calling of another Synod, for the Establishment of the Faith. He thinking them of the Party of Acacius and Eudoxius, gave them License to meet together at Lampfacus, a Town situate on the Hellepont toward Asia, where assembled, they established the Form of Faith long before published at Antioch, and confirmed at Seleucia. They condemned Acacius and Eudoxius, who were not in capacity at this time either to hinder this censure, or to revenge themselves by reason of the Commotions and Wars raised by Procopius the Tyrant. It seems that however these Semiarrians spoke fair for the Son of God, yet they rather denied the Divinity of the Holy Ghost, which Socrates thought was a reason why so many of the Macedonian Sect in his days continued

Jovian dies.

Valentinian and Valens succeed.

Valens calls a Synod at Lampfacus.

Vide supra & Sec. l. 5. cap.

C.Th. l. 7. de malis.

C.Th. l. 9.

C.Th. l. 5. de med. & profess.

Sec. l. 4. c. 11.

Idem ibid. 2. & 4.

continued at Lampfacus. But their Decrees they send abroad to Bishops of their own Confession, and certain Legats to the Western Bishops, who in their Names subscribe to the Nicene Faith, and the Clause of one Substance. The Letter directed to Liberius Bishop of Rome, Socrates hath exemplified, as also his return to the Eastern Bishops, congratulating with them, that those who had formerly been drawn aside at Ariminum, and elsewhere, had now acknowledged the Truth, and made Reparation to the Honour of the Son of God. Thus was he imposed on, by the cunning especially of Eusebius Bishop of Sebastia, one who had been often deposed, and very skillful in such Arts as were conducing to make advantage of times and Persons, which he also did of this Letter. It seems that Liberius also had not let slip the opportunity afforded him under the time of Julian, of openly declaring against the Arians, which had reconciled him to his Flock, and obliterated the Memory of what he had done Eight Years before.

28. In this same year which was the Second of their Reign, of Christ the 365. they themselves being Consuls, the Emperours made many Constitutions of Religious concernment. As one (a) which exempted Religious Virgins, Widows, and Pupils, from paying of Poll Money. Another (b) that Christians should not on the Lords-day be convened before the Officers of the Exchequer, in Prosecution of what Constantine had formerly Decreed concerning the observance of this day. A third (c) against Magical Arts. Another whereby was forbidden the Condemnation of Christians to the Gladiators, which Custom formerly abolished had been revived by Julian. By a Fifth they increased the Authority and Jurisdiction of Bishops, formerly conferred on them by Constantine, and added to their Antient and Primitive Power. For when Persecutions ceased, and Christian Religion came once to be encouraged by the Prince, Bishops were constrained to erect Tribunals, which were much frequented, because as Temporal Commodities so Suits did increase. The Judgment, though it was not just the former in regard of the Form, many things being determined by the opinion of the Church, yet was it as * one observes, of the same sincerity. Whereupon Constantine seeing how profitable it was to determine Causes, and thar by the Authority of Religion, which was most dear to the Professors thereof, captious Actions were discovered, which the Judges could not penetrate, made a Law that there should lye no Appeal from the Sentences of Bishops, which should be executed by the Secular Judges: And if in a Cause depending before a Secular Tribunal in any State thereof, either of the Parties, though the other contradicted, shall demand the Episcopal Judgment, the Cause shall be immediately remitted unto him. Here the Tribunal of the Bishop began to be a common Pleading place, having Execution by the Ministry of the Magistrate, and to gain the name of Episcopal Jurisdiction, Episcopal Audience, and such like. Now the Emperours Valentinian and Valens, did much increase their Power, giving Bishops the care over all the Prizes of vendible things, and Authority to over-rule the Sellers in their Sale. How this their Power was either increased or diminished we shall see hereafter.

29. But perceiving what influence the Reputation of a Monastical Life had at this time into the Affairs of the State, they command such Persons to be sought for, and pulled out their lurking places, as had deserted Civil Offices, and betaken themselves into the Wilderness. And (what seems of greatest importance as to the State of Religion of this present time) though the necessities of Affairs had constrained them to tolerate a Liberty, yet left Christians might be constrained to defile themselves with the Pagan Superstitions, they took care, that they should not be set to the Custody of Idol Temples by a Constitution directed to Symmachus Praefect of the City, and dated on the Seventeenth of November, in these words, Whatever Judge or Apparitor shall appoint men of the Christian Religion to the Custody of Temples, let him know that neither his Life nor Fortunes shall be spared. By which Law the Aeditui or ordinary Keepers of Temples cannot be understood, who anciently of course were appointed to watch the Treasures, Images, Furniture, and other things Sacred to such Employments, from Thieves and Robbers; for such were not appointed by Magistrates, but either by lot and designation out of the number of Priests, or by the Testaments, or appointment of the Founders. But extraordinary Keepers seem here to be meant, extraordinarily appointed by Judges and Magistrates, to preserve those Temples from Force and Violence. For it may well be supposed, that Christians, who were so ill treated during the Reign of Julian, and suffered infinite Indignities, offered both to their Religion and themselves, perceiving many lately erected in his time, perhaps out of the Spoils of Churches, and vexed moreover

Sec. c. 11.

(a) C.Th. l. 4. de corp. (b) C.Th. l. 10. de excof.

(c) L. 8. de malef. De panu l. 8.

* Author. Hist. Com. Trid. l. 4.

L. 1. Code Epif. audient.

C.Th. l. 1. de fide Catholica.

Quifque judex

ad custodiendum

Templorum hominum Christianus Religiofis

adpofuerit fua

non foluit fua,

non fortunis,

offe parcendum.

Dat. 15. kal.

Dec. Aed. con-lentin. &

Valens. Cef.

Vide Jacob.

Grotius. de

Gentilibus confideramus cano-nicum.

by Toleration granted to their Persecutors, and something altered in their Temples from the patience of their Predecessors, would hardly hold off their Hands from executing their Indignation and Spleen against the Pagan Rites and Temples, and that within the Prefecture of Rome, holden at this time by Symmachus.

30. Hereupon grievous Complaints being made by Pagans to the Magistrates, they (it is very probable) appointed their Officials Apparitors or Serjeants, to press Men to watch and guard the Temples, being very many, if not most of them, both now and long time after of that Religion, such as this Symmachus himself was. Now they, though they had Officers enough of their own (for Cities especially) or had the Power of pressing sufficient numbers, yet out of Envy and Revenge they would punish Christians by the Preservation of what they so desired to destroy, and forced them to this Employment, wherein their Eyes, Ears, Noses, and all their Senses could not but be contaminated, vexed, and provoked by their Sacrifices, Incense, Prayers and other Rites, their Complaints making Melody to the Pagans, who thereby had opportunity to insult. How grievous to a Christian those abominable Rites were, Valentinian himself was very sensible, who having, when an Officer about the Person of Julian, waited on him to a Temple, was sprinkled by the Priest with their Holy Lustral Water, which he received with such Indignation, as he returned the affront with blows. Being sensible therefore of the Indignity hereby both intended and offered to Christian Religion, he forbade the thing by this severe Edict, at the Suit and Petition of Liberius Bishop of Rome, or some of that City where this intollerable Servitude was imposed. Therefore was this Constitution directed to Symmachus now Prefect there, as also that we have even now hinted against the Condemnation of Christians to the sport of Gladiators, which sport as yet could not be removed; but seeing the Pagans were so tenacious of it, he would not have them double their pleasure by such objects. But as all Christians were not free from Crimes, so did he not exempt them from all Punishments, but only such as were obnoxious to their Profession. They were therefore liable to that of the Bakers, a Body of Malefactors serving the City in that Employment enforced also by another Rescript of this same Emperour, to the said Symmachus, which seems with those other two to have made one entire Constitution, in which we have longer insisted, to make out the State and Condition of the times.

31. Valens being to undertake the Expedition against Procopius, thought fit to be Baptized, and received that Sacrament from the hands of Euzoius the Arian Bishop of Constantinople commended to him by his Wife, to whom he swore to defend that Hæresis to the utmost. Not long after he called a Synod at Singidunum a City of Pannonia, wherein it was accounted sufficient to assert the Sons Likeness to the Father. But the Legates sent into the West by the Council of Lampascus, maintained the Controversie against the Arians, finding no greater countenance than in Illyricum, where a Council being assembled by the Authority of Valentinian, that Legates should be sent back to the Ortensales, both in the Emperours Name and theirs, to take notice of their former Message, to applaud their Faith and Courage to assert it, and promise them all condescension on their part, with all good Offices to be performed. The same Year died Acacius surnamed Lysius Bishop of Cæsarea in Palæstine, the Antagonist of the Arians who chose to succeed him Euzoius another of that Profession, not the same with who in the time of Constantinus, as we said, was ordained Bishop of Antioch.

32. The Year following, which was the Fourth of these Emperours, died Liberius Bishop of Rome, into whose See was Damianus elected, after it had been void six days. But he being of Felix his Party, though constituted Vicar by Liberius, great Dissentions arose, and the Dissenting Party made choice of Ursicinus a Deacon of that Church to succeed Liberius. Such a Schism and Tumult hence arose, that both Parties armed with Power as well as Animosity, betook themselves at length to their Weapons, to the great Scandal of Christian Religion, and Insultation of the Pagans, of whom Ammianus observes, that in one day were taken up out of one place, no fewer than One hundred thirty and seven dead Bodies, and Vincentius Prefect of the City, not able to quiet them, was forced to withdraw into the Suburbs. But Damianus got the better of his Adversary, and Ursicinus was banished to Naples, where he ceased not to foment the

Valens is Baptized.

Liberius Bishop of Rome
dies.

A Tumult
about the Succession.

See 1.6.c.6.
Theod. 1.4.c.3.

Theod. 1.4.c.8.9.
See 1.4.c.11.
Vide Just.
Cappellum ad
A.D. 366.

Damianus

Vide que
supra ex Ammianus.

the Schism, and promote his own Interest, against that of Liberius. This same year the Emperours, by their Rescript dated May the Fifth, commanded all Goals to be delivered at Essex of all Malefactors, except Sacrilegious Persons, Traytors, Poysoners, Adulterers, such as committed Rapes or Murder; and forbad any one to be removed from Prison to the Theatre to be punished.

33. About this time dyed Donatus, made Bishop of Carthage by the Faction of the Donatists, of whom he was the head, and main Actor, into whose place they chose one Parmenianus, as earnest a zealot of the same Sect. He presently brandished his Quill against the Orthodox Party, and for that being challenged to a publick Disputation, refused to entertain such Commerce with the Bishops, as unclean Creatures, whereas he esteemed himself and his Followers as the only pure, undefiled, and the Children of God. But Oppertus Bishop of Milevis in Numidia, grappelled with him at his own Weapon, writing seven Books against him, wherein he chastised his Folly to purpose, yet treated his Person as a Brother; against that uncharitable and Hæretical opinion of his, that the Catholic Church was only in Africa, and that within the Communion of the Donatists, Ticonius an African also wrote, whom Parmenianus, having in vain exhorted by a Letter to revoke his opinion, did Excommunicate, as St. Augustine testifies in his Writings also against Parmenianus. During those stirs in Africa, Italy was still disquieted by the Schisms in the Roman Church, though Prætextatus the Prefect of Rome, and an Heathen, used all means possible to compound the differences, amongst which was banishment of some of the Party of Ursicinus: The Emperour gave him order to prohibit all of that Faction, any ingress into the City, thinking this would be sufficient, but they still continuing resolute, and chusing rather to meet together privately, and in Conventicles, than to communicate with those that sided with Damianus; he commanded they should not be suffered to come within Twenty Miles of Rome.

34. This was much about the same time that Valentinian the Emperour, having dispatched the War against the Allemans, came to Milan, where granting out a Rescript in behalf of Auxentius Bishop of that City, a notable Arian; the zeal of Hilarius Bishop of Poitiers, was much stirred up to undeceive the Prince as to his apprehensions of him, and therefore came and accused him of Blasphemy, whereupon a time was appointed for them to be heard, by two certain Commissioners, assisted by some Bishops. Auxentius so worded it in this Assembly, by condemning the Person of Arius, and colouring his profession, that he went away with the credit, and Hilary was esteemed as an envious Person, a slanderer, and sower of discord, who dyed not long after, having given an account of the conference, in an Epistle directed to all Catholics, that they might shun the Communion of the said Auxentius. Hilary dyed at his own See at Poitiers, and became so famous for his writings, and adhering to the Orthodox Faith, that he hath obtained the Reputation of a Saint, having a Church in the upper part of the City consecrated to his memory, wherein they shew a Room appointed to the keeping of a certain Trunk of a Tree made hollow, they say by his Bile or Choler, called the Cradle of St. Hilary, into which they put Mad-men, and think that by virtue thereof they recover their Senses. Hereupon such as upbraided one another with madness, bid them to be gone to St. Hilary's Cradle, though they tell such like stories also at St. Tuber another Town of France, in the Province of Narbonne. In the great Church also of Poitiers, dedicated to St. Peter, and founded by our Henry the Second, they show part of that Apostles Beard, which they say was brought thither from Rome by St. Hilary, at his return from a Council held there against the Arians.

35. The warning which Hilary had given concerning Auxentius, seems to have had this effect, that some Councils were called, wherein he, and others of his Complices, were condemned, yet he kept his Bishoprick till he resigned his life and it together. Much about the same time that Hilary dyed, Eusebius Bishop of Cæsarea in Cappadocia left this life, into whose place was brought Basil with much ado, who foreseeing what would follow, had withdrawn himself out of the way, but was elected notwithstanding, by the procurement especially of Gregory Nazianzen. His Brother Gregory was about the same time Ordained Bishop of Nyssa, a City of the same Country, who is gently blamed by Nazianzen for giving his mind to the study of Rhetoric, rather more than became a Christian Man. But they were scarcely warm in their Sees, when they forced to disoblige

Valens,

C. th. 1. 9.
tit. 38. §. 1. &
lit. 20 §. 11.

Hieron. de script. Eccl.

Ammian. 1. 27.

de St. Hilary.

Vide Itineta.
Gallier. p. 90.

Naz. in univ.
Basil & Ep. 1.

Valens ban-nishes the Orthodox Bishops

Valens, who though he had stood rather neuter, before his Baptism by the Arian Bishop, yet afterward remembering the vow he had made to promote that Heretic, and continually encouraged by his Wife, which the Arians were so wise as to make their own; he first Patronized that Sect, and then fell upon persecution of the Orthodox. He published an Edict for the banishment of such as being formerly sent into Exile by Constantius, had returned upon the promotion of Julian; and forasmuch as many since that time had been ordained, care was taken that they should be condemned in Synods called for that purpose; by virtue of those tricks were driven into Exile, Gregory Bishop of Nyssa, Basil his Brother, Eusebius Bishop of Samosata, Pelagius of Laodicea and others. About which time Eudoxius Bishop of Constantinople, the Confident and Ghostly Father of the Emperour, went to his own place, after he had held that See Eleven Years. In the third Consulship of Valentinian and Valens Emperours, the Seventh of their Reign, of the Rome 1123. A. D. 370.

36. Into his place the Orthodox party Elected Evagrius, a Man of their own opinion, who having been called out of Exile by Jovian, at that time remained in secret at Constantinople, to assist and confirm such as were of the Faith of one substance. But the Arians made choice of Demophilus, whereupon arose such Contentions and Disorders, that Valens then lying at Nicomedia, fearing worse, sent great numbers of armed Men into the City, and drove Evagrius into banishment. The Arians grown insolent at this success, and as knowing whom they had to back them, heap all public affronts and injuries upon their Adversaries, who thereupon betake themselves to the Emperour for redress, sending Eighty of the Priestly rank to Nicomedia, amongst whom Urbanus, Theodorus and Menedemus were most eminent. When they had opened their griefs, though he concealed much of his displeasure, yet he was so enraged as to give order to Modestus an Officer to apprehend, and put them to death, which order he executed in so strange a manner, as Socrates thought he was obliged to leave a description of it to Posterity: Modestus fearing to Execute them publicly, made them believe they should be banished, and for that purpose got them into a Ship, and thereby to be conveyed into Foreign Countries; but gave in charge to the Seamen that as soon as they came upon the Main, they should fire the Vessel and there leave them; they obeyed their orders to the full, for after they were come into the Aftacan Sea, they conveyed themselves into a Boat, and set fire to the Ship, which was driven by a strong Eastern Gale into the Haven called Cardiazus, where, together with her Freight, she burnt down to the Water. This cruelty, saith Socrates, was revenged from Heaven by a grievous Famine, which sorely afflicted Phrygia, whence the Inhabitants were forced to fly to Constantinople, and other Provinces for relief. Of which Famine St. Hierome also maketh mention at the Seventh year of the Emperour Valens.

37. Some Bishops yet escaped the rage of these tempestuous times, rather secured by that veneration which their sanctity struck into the Persecutors, than out of any merciful inclination; amongst which where Paulinus of Antioch, Epiphanius Bishop of Salamina, and Basil, who being tampered with to no purpose to change his Religion, was condemned to banishment, when the Son of Valens the Emperour fell sick, upon which accident execution of the sentence was stopped, and he was sent for to pray for the Health and recovery of the Child, of such force is Conscience to force an owe and acknowledgment, where Interest and passion are predominant, some say, he promised recovery of the Child, on condition the Emperour would turn to the Orthodox Faith, which he refusing, Basil left off Praying, and to the Child dyed; others write that the condition was of bringing up the Boy in the Catholick Religion, some make it of not Baptizing him by Arians, others of their not praying for him; but however the Child miscarried. Theodoret delivers it for a truth, that Valens taking Pen in hand to subscribe to the banishment of Basil, could not cut one Letter, but spoiling three Pens one after another, at last proceeding to attempt it, he was seized with a trembling in his hand, whereat astonished, he tore the Paper; yet proceeded he to persecute at Caesarea, such as held the Doctrine of one substance, and removing to Antioch, drove Meletius into Exile, turned the Priests out of their Churches, and here, as well as in other places throughout the East, tormented them, and made them away by several sorts of deaths, especially by drowning in the Sea.

38. The

38. The Orthodox Christians in those times of Persecution not knowing well where with safety to meet together to serve God, repaired to the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, at Edessa in Mesopotamia, in great numbers, which being understood by Valens, who in his Journey to Antioch, went to see that stately Fabrick, he gave the Governour a blow with his Fist, because he had not scattered those Conventicles, according to his former injunctions: He notwithstanding so publick an affront, gave notice to those Christians of the Emperours pleasure, as unwilling to put them all to death, but they nevertheless would not give over their meetings, which continued as full and frequent as formerly. Hereupon with a sufficient power of armed Men he marches down to execute his Orders upon such as he found in the Temple, and in his way meets a poor Woman, which having her young Son in her hand, hasted thither, and unwilling to be put out of her way, thrust her self into the midst of the ranks to march along with them; he becometh to ask her questions, to tax her folly, and expostulate with her, for her rash thrusting her self into most certain destruction, she plainly tells him, she was going where the People of God were met, and was so far from being deterred with his threats, that she said she made what haste she could, lest she should come to late, and fail of serving God by Martyrdom; he then demanded of her, wherefore she carried with her the little Child, to which she replied, that he might also meet with the same measure, and receive the like reward. Hereat as way laid, this Officer repairs to the Emperour, and telling the story, lays before him the resolution of the whole company, and the intamy to which he would expose his Reign by such a Massacre. Hereupon he desists, having so far already proceeded in those Cruelties, that some Rivers blushed at the bloody Massacre of Innocents, receiving a crimson tincture from their slain Bodies.

39. The Edict concerning the Banishment of Bishops, who had been Exiled formerly by Constantius, it may well be supposed fell as foul upon Athanasius as any. This Edict being backt with threats of severe proceedings against such Officers as should fail to execute what was enjoined, the Praefect of Egypt lets Athanasius know what he was to expect, and prepare for it accordingly. The Alexandrians aware of the storm, had resolved to secure him from it, if possible, and send word back to the Governour, that Athanasius was not comprized in the Edict; for though he was banished by Constantine, yet had Constantius restored him, and he had been driven into Exile by Julian, suffering rather more than any other Bishop by his direct command, from which he had also been restored by Jovian. When this would not satisfy, they plainly signified their resolutions to protect him by force, which so moved the Governour, that fearing a revolt, he demurred, and promised all security to Athanasius, till he could further understand the Emperours pleasure; but the Bishop was too much versed in such business, to be so lulled a sleep, for either discovering by his own foresight, what would follow, or receiving intelligence from some private Friend, he was aware of the Governours coming, and removed himself thither, where he was not easily to be found, the Governour coming in a dark and Tempestuous night, and finding the Bird flown, was much disturbed with the disappointment, and when all Men admired where he could lye so close, they variously discoursed of the matter; his Enemies said, as formerly upon such occasions, that he was a Conjuror and dealt with the Devil, some of his Friends attributed it to Divine Revelation, and indifferent Persons could not but very much apprehend his Sagacity. But he lay hid, it is said, in his Fathers Monument for some Months, till Eudoxius being dead, Valens became more peaceably inclined towards the Orthodox Bishops.

40. The Eastern Church groaning thus under Persecution, could not but justly expect some assistance and comfort from that of the West. The Orthodox Bishops having consulted together, Commissionate Basil to write to their Brethren, requiring their assistance, especially that of the Italians and French, who were nearer the Emperour Valentinian, and of greatest Interest with him, who, they desired, might be moved to write to his Brother, and take him off from this severe course; but little good came of it, more than some com-

Designs a Massacre.

His cruelty to those at Constantinople

Vide Socr. l. 4. c. 15.

In Chron.

Athanasius forced to shift for himself.

Socr. Socras Theod.

Socr. l. 6. c. 12.

Basil. Ep. 78. &c.

comfortable Letters written to those under Persecution. The Bishop of Rome, who by reason of his See, was first in order, and most concerned to settle in their behalf, meddling little, or rather stifling those complaints, left by offending Valens, he should make him his Enemy, and cause him to Parroize the Plea, and pretence of Ursicinus, who having been banished into Gall, was now permitted to return into Italy, on condition that he came not within the Suburbicarian Countries; therefore might Basilus, as he did, write again and again, inasmuch that when some pressed for a fourth Message to be sent into the West, he dissuaded it, bidding them rest contented, and leave off their intreaties, for he was proud, and no good was to be expected. Basil had a large share of trouble, not only in respect of the Arian Persecution, but through misunderstandings of the Orthodox Party, being accused of several Errors, by reason of the obscurity or strangeness of some expressions about the three subsistencies of the blessed Trinity, which mistakes he cleared sufficiently by several Writings, and after his death, his great Friend and admirer Gregory Nazianzen wiped off such aspersions as lay upon his memory, who was also of the Party in some other troubles which he underwent.

Ep. 10.

41. This Gregory was the Son of Gregory Bishop of Nazianzum in Cappadocia, whence he had the Surname of Nazianzen, being born * after his Father was in Orders, and as it seems, after he was made Bishop of that place, which was about the Year 325. From which, to the time we now write of, intervened Forty five. He had a younger Brother called Cæsarius, and a Sister, also younger than himself, by Name Gorgonia, of whom, he seems a very accomplished Person, and was very well esteemed at Court: Gregory, as also his Brother, being well seen in Learning already, went in his Youth to Athens, at this time the most flourishing Univerfity of the East, where he contracted a familiarity with Basil, and had occasion of making such observations upon Julian, who studied there also at the same time, as enabled him to give him that Character we have formerly mentioned; at Athens he was detained some time, to read Oratory, but withdrawing himself thence, he was afterwards invited to Court by Julian, who had taken especial notice of him; but detesting his Apostacy and Principles, he refused the Attendance, and drew off his Brother from the same Employment: Retiring to a solitary life with Basil, he composed two Orations against Julian, and being ere this ordained Priest, was afterward called home by his Father, to assist him in his Episcopal Function, in which Employment he continued, till Basil drew him very unwilling into the Episcopal Rank. For Cappadocia being divided into First and Second, as Basil was Bishop of the former, his See being at Cæsarea, so Anthimicus was of the later, whose Seat was at Tyana, betwixt them happened great Controversies, about the extent of their Jurisdiction, which caused Basil to erect some other Bishopsricks within his Diocess, and amongst the rest one at Safima, over which with much ado was set Gregory. But this composed not the differences, so that he perceiving he should offend, both by the one and the other, Anthimicus being resolute and chollerick, he withdrew himself again to a solitary life, but this displeasing his Father, he obeyed his commands, returning to his assistance as long as the old Man lived.

Sect. 1. 4. c. 16.

Valens suffers Athanasius to return to Alex- andria.

42. But we must return to Athanasius, and take our last farewell of him, who having now finished his long and troublesome course, was to receive his Crown. Valens wearied with his own Persecutions, or rather understanding how the Alexandrians were affected towards their Bishop, for fear of Commotions suffered him to return in quiet to his See, and there spend his last days, which he knew could not be very many. This was two or three years which he spent not only in Affairs of his own Province, but of the Catholick Church also, assisting by his advice and Council his Fellow Bishops, and contending for the Nicene Faith, where there was occasion. His Master found him to doing after he had governed the Church of Alexandria Six and forty Years, and weathered out so many Storms of Persecution under Constantine, Constantius, Julian, and Valens, that for Labours and Suffering Suffering next after the Apostles, he seemeth to discern the first place, and living in the Memory of Christians to all Posterity hath justly obtained the Surname of the Great. He was a Pillar, faith Nazianzen, holding forth the Mytery of Godliness against Spiritual Wickednesses in high places, meek and gentle, seldom angry, for which cause he was not unacceptable to his very Enemies, of a courageous Spirit, especially in danger; not ambitious, yet of excellent Parts both for Learning and Prudence. His Personage was comely, his Countenance Angelical, Affable and Courteous, yet Grave. His Speech was proper, concise and acute, his delivery pleasing. His Doctrine came to be accepted of by the Churches, and his Confession of Faith a Rule to theirs, even to this present day. Such was his Sagacity, that by Gods Blessing he miraculously escaped all such Plots, Devices, and Gins, as were laid for him, which made the Arians say he was a Conjuror, and so much as in the Legend of St. George, we read that he was oppoed by a Conjuror of this Name, we may conclude that they corrupted the true Story, changing George the Saint for George the Arian Usurper, as they dealt with all other sorts of Histories. The death of Athanasius fell into the Ninth Year of Valentinian; of Rome the 125. A. D. 372. Fl. Modestus and Fl. Aristheus being Consuls.

* Ἀθανάσιος πρὸς 27.
περὶ τοῦ ὁρισμοῦ τῆς οὐσίας.

Who dies.

Is succeeded by Lucius an Arian.

43. Into the See of Alexandria the Catholick Party elected Peter, an ancient Presbyter of that Church. But the Arians produce Lucius, whom formerly they had chosen to succeed George, and resolving now that they would not be defeated, they send, and give an account to Valens, both of Athanasius his death, and what had ensued, who fully complying with them, appoints Euzoios the Bishop of Antioch, being assisted by a great Officer (some name Magnus the Quaestor, others Palladius Praefect of the Province, and a Pagan,) to see Lucius possessed of the Chair. Accordingly they either Imprison or drive away Peter, who perceiving no good was to be done, (some say he escaped out of Prison) got himself to Rome, and by his Epistles gave account to the World, of the most horrid Outrages committed by the Arians, by Killing, Imprisoning, and Banishing the Orthodox, no Sex, Age, nor Condition being spared. Therefore the Arians being few in number, yet backed by the Emperours Authority (who by an Edict commanded all such as hold the Clause of one Substance to be expelled) got Possession of all the Churches of Alexandria. Then were Religious Houses in the Desert spoiled and beaten down to the Ground, those who inhabited them making no resistance, and being slaughtered by the Soldiers in so Savage a manner, as cannot well be expressed.

Vide Sect.
1. 4. c. 16.
Theod. 1. 4. c. 18.
Russ. 1. 2. c. 3.

Sect. c. 17.

St. Hilary
Bishop of Milan dies.

44. So sad a change was made in the East, from St. Athanasius to Lucius. But in the second year after happened so happy a one in the West, as made a great Compensation to the Church, for her loss of so excellent a Pastor. Ambrosius the Arian Bishop of Milan, whom St. Hilary had in vain laboured to remove, was now taken away by death, and great endeavours were used by both Parties for the choice of such a Man to succeed him, as might serve their Designs and Interests. Valentinian observing his rule not to meddle with Church Matters, had called to him the Bishops, and given them free Power to chuse whom they should think fit; but such a Tumult happened in the Church, in the heat of Contention, the People having a share in the Election, that Ambrose Governour of that Province, then in Town, fearing some great Inconvenience would follow, came to appease it. Having admonished them calmly to go to work about so serious a business, it came to pass that he himself was named to be Bishop, which he heard with much trouble, excused himself from the unfitness as well of his Person, as Abilities, being but a Catechumenist, whereas it was flat contrary to the Cannon of the Nicene Council, for such to be ordained. When no excuses would serve his turn, the Multitude being violently inclined towards him, he withdrew himself; but the Matter being referred to the Emperour, he acknowledged a particular Providence in the case, and so far as it was contrary to the Laws, for any in Publick Employments of the State, to be received into Orders, he most willingly granted a Dispensation.

Hieronymus
Chron.

Vide Ambrosii Theodoret. Sect.
alii.

C. 10. de Epist.
& Clericis. l. 3.

45. Ambrose in the mean time had made his escape from those whom the People had set to watch him; but upon notice of the Emperours pleasure, was brought forth, and then apprehending it his duty to submit to so signal a Providence, was Baptized on the last day of November, and consecrated on the Seventh of December following, both which days fell upon the first Peria. Though this Election was against express Canons, yet was there much joy amongst all of the Orthodox Party, and Congratulatory Letters written to, and fro. And so highly were the Citizens of Milaine pleased with it, that, as * Socrates tells us, being formerly at discord amongst themselves, they thenceforth imbraced Peace and Unity. Valentinian it is said acknowledged the goodness of God towards him, that he had such an Officer as was fit to be made a Bishop; but he lived not long to see the happy Fruit of this Election, dying the year following at Bergutium, as we have already described the manner of his death. His humour was not to interpose much in Matters of the Church as to the Government thereof, saying, It was not proper for him, being a Lay-Person, and it is certain he did not meddle enough, suffering his Brother to act his pleasure against the Orthodox Party, of which yet he seemed to be a Member. But as he was unequally Yoked with his Brother in the Empire, so with an Arian Wife in his Bed, which unlucky Conjunction so overpowered him, as to intercept and hinder that influence which else he might have had into the Peace and Tranquillity of the Church. Though he meddled little himself with the Discipline, yet as Emperour, he joynd with his Brother in the enacting of several Constitutions, which being of an Ecclesiastical Nature, and so conducting to the knowledge of the State of such Affairs, we must add to those we have formerly mentioned.

Valentinian
dies.

* C. 25.

46. The first of these sufficiently discovers how unwilling he was to meddle with Church Matters in the case of Chromatius a certain Bishop, who, being condemned in a Synod of Seventy Bishops, from them appealed to the Magistrate. For so doing by a Rescript in the Sixth Year of his Reign, he and his Colleagues impose upon him a pecuniary Mult, and take care for preventing the like in time to come. But as he was earnest for maintaining Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, finding what ease it procured to his Government, so was he sensible of the forward Zeal of Christians, who according to the Nature of Mankind, which is ever prone to one of the Extremes, thought they could never give enough to the Church, and that Women, especially acted by that fervent Devotion which is commonly seen in first Reformations to overrun discretions, lay open to the covetous designs of certain Church-men. For prevention hereof, in the Seventh year of his Reign, Valentinian and his Colleagues make the first Law of Mortmain, directed to Damasus Bishop of Rome, whereby Ecclesiastical Persons, Clerks, or Monks, are inhibited to receive any Inheritances, Legacies, or other Gifts from Women. Both Elie-rome and Ambrose take especial notice of the Cause, rather than the Edict it self, falling very foul upon the great and fardid Avarice of many Priests and Monks of that time, who accounting Gain to be Godliness, devoured Widows Houses, and made a prey of silly Women laden with diverse Lufts. But this Law was afterward repealed, and others elsewhere of the same and larger nature, enacted, according to comportment of times, and the inclination of such as were possessed of Supream Power.

C. Th. 1. 40.
appel.

C. Th. 1. 40. de Episc. & Cler.

His Laws.

47. This same year by another Rescript, they take care for the Reformation and Improvement of the Schools at Rome, wherein they forbid any Youths to stay longer than the Twentieth year of their Age, out of a Sense of the vitioufness of that City it seems, although the placing of Universities in Capital Towns, contributes much to the breeding of Youth, by acquainting it more with the World and Men, and prevents that Rusticity, to which Solitary and Monastical places are more subject. But the Year following several Constitutions were made, which shows the Temper of Valentinian very indulgent to Pagans, and indeed would make us jealous, that his suffering the Orthodox to be Persecuted, and his not meddling with Matters of the Church, proceeded from a great indifferency as to all Religion,

C. Th. de studiis liber. Rom. l. 1

C. Th. 1. 1. de tem.

gion, and unwilling to trouble himself with things of that nature. For whereas Christians could not be Stage-players, but upon their Baptism changed that course of Life, he signified his Pleasure to be, that those Scenici being publick Slaves, destinated to the common Theatre, should not be Baptized before the point of Death. By another he conferred upon Priests of the Gentiles, the Honour that was wont to be given to Excomites. But what was of most Consequence, by another Constitution they permit to Pagans the use of the Ara-ispina, provided it were executed without Magick, and give therewith liberty to every Man to profess what Religion he pleased. These things vehemently inculcate a suspicion of his lukewarmness, or (which is fully as probable) declare to us the Constitution of the times, to have been such as informed him to slacken the Reins of his Government, Paganism being yet so common and prevalent, as to make such a Party for strength and Interest, as the Scepter was not in any fair Capacity to crush it.

C. Th. 1. 7. de
decur.

C. Th. 1. 9. de maliciis. tit. 16.
§ 9.

48. For this reason in Charity we may believe, he suffered the Altar of Victory still to remain in the Capital, and thereto the Pagan Senators to pay their Devotions, for we cannot well imagine he could be ignorant of such a practice: And permitted the Ebnicks so far to abuse his Indulgence, as not only to use the old, but erect new Altars for fresh Sacrifices, as it appears they did by several Inscriptions. The Year following being the Ninth of his Reign, he makes a sharp Law against the Manichees, prohibiting their Meetings, fining their Teachers, and confiscating the Houses where they held their Conventicles; whilst his Brother Valens employs himself in furnishing Libraries at Constantinople. In that following, by another Law he restrains the Practice of Re baptizing, used so much by the Donatists in Africa. And although leave was given to Pagans to sin against the Law of Faith, yet not against that of Nature; if as Christians the Emperours would not restrain them, yet as Princes and as Men. Therefore whereas they assumed the Ancient Barbarous Power of Life and Death over their Children, thinking it a small matter to kill their Infants, by a Constitution in the Eleventh of Valentinian, that unnatural Custom is taken away. As for that Law mentioned by Socrates, whereby out of love to Justina, he should give liberty to all Persons to Marry two lawful Wives, it may justly be suspected of falsehood. For by Heathen Writers he is said to have been very Chast, that Justina which Socrates would have a Virgin, had been Wife, as appears from Zozimus, to Magentius the Tyrant, and Married to Valentinian after the Death of Severa. It was a thing so contrary to Christianity, that Heathens themselves disapproved it. Neither do the Historians of those times make mention of such a Passage. Only Socrates who lived long after, and such as received it on trust from him. For Valentinian it may be said, that he was a Christian Emperour, and had been a Confessor before he reached that Dignity. On the other side it may be believed, that through his connivance at his Brothers Actions, the Pagans had far better quarter during his Reign, than had the Orthodox Christians themselves.

Vide Inscrip.

C. Th. 1. 3. de heret.

C. Th. 1. 14. de studiiis. libellus bas tit. 9. § 2.

C. Th. 1. 9. tit. 14.
§ 1.

49. At the same time as Valentinian died, his Brother Valens then at Antioch with greater violence Persecuted the Orthodox Party, till Themistius the Philosopher took off the edge of his hatred, by shewing him that there were greater and many more Diffentions amongst Pagans in reference to Religion: than amongst Christians about Matters of Faith. Yet did he but divert the Storm upon the Monks of this time, upon whom he looked as Fugitives from the Commonwealth, and such as cast off those Obligations which nature and their Country had laid upon them, to betake themselves to a course of idleness. Having formerly laid such Burthens upon them again, as Constantine and Constantius had taken from off their shoulders; by another Rescript, he now commands them to be pulled by the Ears out of their Monasteries. and lifted in the Army, or upon refusal to be knocked in the Head, whereupon great Outrages were committed upon this sort of People about this time, and they received Letters full of comfort from several eminent Ecclesiasticks of this Age, who were generally affected to the Monastical Life. At the same time Gratian

Soc. 1. 6. c. 25.
Socr. 1. 4. c. 27.

C. Th. de Decur.

Origen. l. 7. c. 33.
Hieron. in Ciron.

Valens severe towards Monks

rian in the West ran a contrary course, who succeeding to his Fathers Principles, as to Religion, yet, out of a fence it seemeth of his remissness in point of Discipline, and too great Indulgence towards the Arians, the Year after his death, forbids their Assemblies under the notion of Heretical Conventicles, and confiscates the places of their Meetings. The same Year also the Three Emperours, Gratian, Valentinian, and Valens, joyn in a Constitution for the regulating of Ecclesiastical Causes, ordaining that the lesser sorts of Faults should be heard and determined in Diocesan Synods, but greater Crimes by higher Powers. In the mean while Paganism rather recovered strength than otherwise, the Gentiles erecting many Monuments of their Superstition, as to the Mother of the Gods, the Great Gods, (Dii Magni) and at this (the Daughter of Gnaeus, which gave name to the Country of Africa) the Emperours conniving at this Practice, as not able to resist that Impiety, which had been fostered to such a degree of vivacity by Julian, as was to be dulled and abated by time, before the Scepter could give it its fatal stroke.

50. But Valens, being at length taught some Moderation by Afflictions, having received a great overthrow from his Enemies, which was seconded with dreadful Pestilence and Famine, began to be more favourable to the Orthodox Bishops, recalling them out of Banishment, though he did not restore them to their Sees. Yet they at Alexandria took heart, and being encouraged by the Letters which Peter their Bishop brought from Damasus Bishop of Rome, they expelled Lucius from the Bishoprick, who got him in all haste to Constantinople, and confirmed Peter in his Seat, wherein he sat but a short time, for he died not long after, and left his Brother Timothy to succeed him. This same Year the Emperours, by a Constitution, exempt all Clerks from Personal Employments. And Gratian by another Rescript, restrains the Donatists in Africa from their common practice of Rebaptizing, as also the Assemblies of the Manichees, amongst whom was Augustine a young Man of the Age of Three and twenty, of which number the odd Three he had spent as an Auditor and Novice in their Discipline. He was born, as he himself writes, at Tagesta a Town of Numidia, in the Nineteenth year of Constantius, and the Consulship of Arbeterio and Lollianus, on the Thirtieth of November. His Mother Monica being left a Widow about the Seventeenth year of his Age, a most Religious Matron, was much afflicted for him, seeing him run such a course of Heresie and looseness. And not only by her importunate Prayers and Tears laboured for his Conversion; but dealt with such as she thought most able to convince him of his Folly, to reason him out of the Manichean Errors, and urged thereunto a certain Orthodox Bishop, especially, who thinking it not seasonable as yet to encounter him whilst young, hot, and newly entred into that course, he abounded so much in his own fence, the still followed him, weeping and bewailing her Sons condition. With which when the good Man was wearied, and could not put her off, he bad her, Go her ways, for it could not be, that a Son of those Tears could perish; as we shall see it came to pass.

51. But such is the condition of this present life, that as one comes upon the Stage of the World to act his part, another passeth off, having done his duty, which was the lot of Basil, the great Bishop of Cæsarea in Cappadocia, who dyed on the first day of January, and of the following Year: A Man of such esteem in his life time, that what ever he did was accounted a sufficient and warrantable Pattern, and even such passages as in another would have been accounted defects, as proceeding from him, were taken for no other than perfections; when dead, so precious was the memory of him, that through the great crowd at his Funeral, whilst Multitudes flocked to pay him their last respects, many were pressed to death. His Abstinence and Austerity of life, were such, that he only fed upon Bread and Salt, and drank nothing but pure Water; contented himself with one Coat and Gown, and made the ground his Bed; he was of tall and upright Stature, dry and lean in his Body, blackish wannish Complexion, had a large Nose, a round Forehead, wrinkles in his Face,

Basil Bishop of Cæsarea died.

C.Th. de here.
l. 4.

C.Th. l. 16. tit. a.
§. 23.

Inscript.
Gruteri p. 28.

Hieron. in Chron. Orcl. 7.
c. 73.

C. Th. l. 16.
§. 2. §. 24.
C. Th. de sanct.
c. 10.

De vita beata et Consequ.

O' Kierup excludit §. Blas myst.

Naz.

Baron. ex Anonym. episcop. constant.

long Vizaged, had hollow Temples, wore a great Beard, was something gray, and looked thoughtfully; he is said to have prescribed Rules of living to Monks, Clerks, and Lay-Persons: Yet this Asterica ascribed to him, are not to be found amongst the rest of his Works, in the Catalogue of Nazianzen. And Eusebius who Instituted the Monastical life in Armenia, hath been by some esteemed the Author of them; the Rule also going under his Name, is justly suspected, so far as there is no mention of it in Nazianzen; and there is another said also to be his, which contains only Thirty five Chapters. In the midst of his Book concerning the Holy Ghost, Erasmus thinks some things inserted which are no wife like his. His Epistle to Cæsarea Patricia is also suspected. And the Book written of his life, under the Name of Amphilochius is by all Parties accounted spurious, being full of Fables and things repugnant to other good Histories, and therefore unworthy of credit in the opinion of Baronius himself.

Socrum. l. 3.
c. 13.

Vide Juell.
Duplicat. euseb.
Baron. l. 5.
Ad. A. D.
178.

52. A Month after the death of Basil, dyed also Ephraem the Deacon at Edessa, on the first day of February, a Man of extraordinary Sanctity, whose Virtues are much set forth by Gregory Nyssen, in an Anniversary Oration. And this year was the last also of Valens the Emperor, whom as we may say, the Goths burning a live after a defeat in Battel, thereby revenged upon his Body the injury he had done to their Souls, by seducing them from the Orthodox Faith to the Arian Heresie. His death brought a new life and refuscitation of the ancient Heat and Vigor into the Eastern Churches; which Gratian by a seasonable Law for Restitution of all banished Persons to their proper Places, so cherished, that the Catholick Doctrine began speedily to flourish again. Yet so powerful was the Arian Faction, that he thought it unreasonable to apply any sudden remedy to that Sore, and therefore he gave liberty of conscience to all excepting the Euxomians, Photinians and Manichees, the grosser sort of Hereticks. But that the Catholics might not be overpowered by Faction or Interest, and receive the full benefit he intended them, Theodoret tells us, he sent into the East one Sapores, a Man of great note, who published an Edict at Antioch, and turned the Arians out of those Churches into which they had intruded. The Orthodox Bishops encouraged by his presence, and the favour of Gratian, met together at Antioch, where consulting how they might best improve the opportunity God had given them for the refuscitation of the true Faith, and prosperity of the Churches, they first composed differences betwixt Meletius and Paulinus, both Bishops of that Church, ordaining, that the Survivor should be immediately seized of the Bishoprick upon the others decease, without any farther Election, to which award they bound by oath Six of the Principal Presbyters of the Church, who seemed most fit to stand as Competitors at the next Vacancy of the See.

Some Heretics revived.

53. Hereby was removed much matter of Scandal, for the case of those two Persons had occasioned great Tumults and Seditions. The Friends of Meletius, as Socrates writes, would have joyned them together in the Episcopal Function; but Paulinus, objected it was against the Canons, for any Ordained Arian Bishops to execute that Office, and when he would not consent, the People endeavoured to effect it by force, making preparations for his Installment in a certain Church within the Suburbs. This being done, all the City was in an uproar, and great dissensions continued amongst the People, till this means of reconciliation was found out, wherewith the Multitude was fully quieted, only the Favourers of Lucifer, who had Ordained Paulinus, were offended with this Manner of dealing, and took hence occasion (to make (saith Socrates) or rather) to continue Schism, pretending that Meletius being Ordained by Arians, could not possibly be admitted to the Government of that See. But the Bishops having thus removed this notorious Eye-sore, appointed certain eminent Bishops to visit other Churches of the East, and to Constantinople was Gregory Nazianzen sent, which of all others stood most need of an able Physician. Yet, as it happeneth Socrus. c. 2.

Soc. l. 7. c. 1.

L. 5. c. 2.

L. 5. c. 5.

happeneth to those, who have to do with such distempered Persons, as account their Diseases health; his kindness was returned with opprobrious Language: And as Licurgus of old, when he acted the Physician of the State, they cast Stones at him, all which Indignities he bore with great pity and patience, continuing three years in this employment, wherein he made those five famous Orations, concerning Theology, which deservedly procured him the Surname of the Divine.

Carm. de vita

Jua.

A discourse about Hypo-stasis.

54. At this time there was much ado made about the word Hypostasis, which some understanding in the same sense as Substance, condemned such as asserted three Hypostases in the Blessed Trinity, as those that hold three Gods; and on the contrary those, who took the word as it is used for Substance or Personality, it condemned such as rejected it, as guilty of the Hæresis of Sabellius. Of this sort it, seems was Meletius, who importuned Hierome to confess the Hypostases, but he refused to comply with him therein, and consulted Damasus Bishop of Rome by Letters. This Person whom the Church in all Ages since his time hath, and that deservedly so much esteemed, was born at Stridon, a Town of Dalmatia, where his Parents lived in good rank. In his Youth he travelled to Rome with Bonofus his Foster Brother, a young Man of a very great Fortune, where they became Auditors to Donatus, and performed their exercises in declaiming, and otherwise, according to the Custom. Here when he arrived at ripeness of Age, he was Baptized, and then leaving that course of life, which formerly had been none of the strictest, he betook himself to great severities and laboriousness in Study: Afterwards he travelled Gall, Pontus, Bithynia, Galatia, Cappadocia, Cilicia, Syria, and Thrace, to improve himself by the Conversation of learned and Pious Men, and being much taken with the Lives and Rules of such as professed the monastical life in Syria, he was so allured by their example, that he chose the Desert of Chalcis, a Province lying betwixt the Syrians and Saracens for his abode. Here besides the constant practice of Scleragogy, he followed his book with great diligence, having got together in this place a good Library, through the assistance of Evagrius, one of his Associates, a very rich and noble Priest, afterwards Bishop of Antioch. But that which much Crucified the contentment he received from this course of life, was the jealousy and suspicion, which he being a West-Country Man, incurred with the Eastern Monks, and the contention which followed about the word Hypostasis.

In Ep. passim. in chron. alibi.

55. Having been formerly, whilst at Rome, acquainted with Damasus the Bishop (with whom he continued as Amanuensis for some time, till he was wearied with the virtuosity of the place) he consulted him by Letters, and at length tired with the importunities of Meletius and his Party, against whom, he seemed to patronize Paulinus, he returned unto him to Rome, after he had spent six or seven Years in that solitary course of life. Some say he first went to hear Gregory Nazianzen at Constantinople, where he spent three Years, and saw Jerusalem before his return to Rome. Nazianzen at the same time was visited by another Person of great Fame, one Maximus of Alexandria, a Christian made of a Cynick Philosopher, who boasted himself born of Martyrs, and had got repute for being banished for his Faith, into the Desert of Oasis; coming loaded with Fame to Constantinople, he was kindly received by Gregory, who honoured him with an Oration, made in his Commendation, of which afterward he changed the Title as written in praise of Hero his Companion; but in short time his design was discovered, which was to creep into the See of Constantinople, for which he had the encouragement of Peter the Alexandrian Patriarch; although he had formerly pretended to favour the cause of Gregory, who was very much desired by the People. Seven Bishops by him set on, when Gregory lay sick in the Suburbs, using the help of some Alexandrian

Vide Baronium ad Ann.
D. 378-379.Vide Naz.
Centra Mas-sim & in Carm. de vita
Edit. morell.

andrian Marriners, whom they had hired for their purpose, privily in the Night endeavoured to thrust him into the Episcopal See; but the Alarm being given, they were beaten out of the Church by the Multitude; yet nothing hereat dismayed, afterward they cut of his Hair, which he wore now after the Cynick fashion, (for neither he, nor Hero, though they were Christians abandoned their former Habit, and Deportment, as Nazianzen reports of them) and Ordained him Bishop, in the house of a Player; which practice being abhorred by all, as well Arians, as others, he was driven out of the City: Betaking himself to Theodosius, from whom he received no encouragement, and being rejected also by Peter of Alexandria, he thereupon fell into discontent, and the Hæresis of Apollinaris.

Theodosius made Emperour.

56. This same Year which was the Fifteenth of Gratian, and the Fourth of Valentinian the Second, was very auspicious to the Church, in the promotion of Theodosius to the Empire, who mended much what had been marred by Valens. Socrates writes, that falling into a very dangerous Disease at Thessalonica (in the Second year) he was very desirous of Baptism, for of old he was trained up in Christian Religion, and addicted himself wholly to the Faith of one Substance. Having sent for Acholus the Bishop of the place, he demanded of him, of what Faith he was, to which Acholus answered, that the opinion of Arius prevailed not throughout Ilyrium, neither was the new-found invention of his pestilent Brain planted in the Churches of that Country, but that all Christians throughout those Coasts retained that ancient Faith, which had been delivered by the Apostles, and continued by the Council of Nice; which the Emperour hearing, willingly received that Sacrament at his hands: A few days after being somewhat recovered, he went towards Constantinople, the Twenty fourth of November, in his first Consulship, and the Fifth of Gratian, where in the following Month he restored to the Catholics those Churches which for forty years had been unjustly detained by the Arians, who in vain fretted at so great both disgrace and loss, especially of the great Church, which by force they were ready to maintain, till overpowered by a Band of Soldiers, sent by the Emperour. Thus by deeds did he confirm what he had formerly professed to the World, having at Thessalonica published a Law, wherein Prohibiting and condemning all Hæresies, he commands all his Subjects to embrace that Faith which had by St. Peter the Apostle been commended to the Romans, and which at present Damasus Bishop of that See, and Peter of Alexandria (both whom he knew as, their Prædecessors for the most part to have been Orthodox in their opinions) owned and imbraced. At the same time and place, by another Rescript, he discountenanced all Violators, and breakers of Divine Law. And forbids by another, any Criminal Inquisitions to be made in Lent. This same year also those Emperours reinforcing the former Christian Custom, forbid such as were baptized, to be drawn back to the Service of the Stage.

L. 5. c. 8.

Soc. l. 7. c. 5.
Marcell. in Chron.C. Th. l. 2. de Episc. & Cler.C. Th. l. 4. de quæst.C. Th. l. 15
de sententiis & 4.

57. The following year was fully as propitious to the Orthodox, wherein the Emperours prosecuting their Patronage already undertaken by another Law, commanded, that in all places their Churches be restored to them, prohibiting the Arians, Phorinians, Eunomians, with other Hæreticks, to hold any Assemblies within the Towns. But Theodosius, who was the prime Author and procurer of those Laws, that he might not seem to carry on all things by force, and the terror of Imperial Authority, knowing how the Arians were addicted to Councils, and sufficiently understanding the interest and universality the Catholic Faith at this time obtained throughout the World, and not doubting of the good effects of a Council, which should be indifferent and free, and not clogged with the late force, and partiality of the Arians, he resolved to subdue them by their own Weapons. The Hæresis of the Macedonians who denied the Divinity of the Holy Ghost, he especially intended to eradicate by this Council, having never had any such effectual proper Remedy as yet applied, perswading himself that they were not of such obstinate and refractory principles as the Arians. And whereas the promotion of Gregory Nazianzen was much stomached by some sorts of Persons, upon the account of Maximus, Demophilus, and for other private respects, he resolved by this Council, which he summoned to Constantinople, to provide for the filling of that See. Accordingly he summoned the Bishops to Meet, though Damasus Bishop of Rome was against the holding of this Council.

Summons a general Council to Constantinople.

* Repugnante Damaso Barnesius ad
A.D. 333, num.
2.

CHAP.

CHAP. V.

From the Second Oecumenical Council summoned by Theodosius the First to Constantinople, to the Third called by Theodosius the Second to the City of Ephesus.

The Space of Fifty Years.

1. THE Second Oecumenical Council, summoned by Theodosius the Emperour to the City of Constantinople, met together in the Month of May, the Fifteenth year of Gratian, the Sixth of Valentinian the Second, the Third of Theodosius, Emperours, of old Rome the 1134. of New Rome the One and Fiftieth, the Seven and fiftieth after the Assembling of the Nicene Synod, the First of the Two hundred and ninetieth Olympiad, the Ninth Indiction, the Four hundred and nineteenth of the Æra Hispanica, A. D. 381. Fl. Siagrius and Fl. Annus Eucharis being Consuls.

2. Of those which embraced the Nicene Creed, here met Timothy Bishop of Alexandria, who had succeeded Peter his Brother, after he had possessed that Chair Eight years, (however Socrates faith, he continued but a short time,) Cyril Bishop of Jerusalem, who now after his Recantation addicted himself to the Faith of One Substance; Meletius who had been called hither a while before to the Entailment of Gregory Nazianzen, Acholius Bishop of Thessalonica, Gregory Nyssen, with others, to the number of One hundred and fifty Bishops. Of the Macedonian Sect also assembled to the number of Six and thirty, whereof the greater part from the Hellestont, and those of most note were Ektusius Bishop of Cyzicum, and Maxianus of Lampascus. It being a very necessary Ingredient to the Legality and Authority of a General Council to have it free, we cannot imagine that Theodosius shut the Doors against the Arians, such as had been fairly possessed of their Bishopricks, or that he summoned this Council of such Bishops only as were of his Faith, which Socrates seemeth to affirm. But a good riddance had been made of the Arians out of the Churches, by those Laws enacted for Restitution of the Catholics to their proper Sees, and the Custom of Titular and Supernumerary Bishops, (who cannot challenge such Interest in Church Matters) their thrusting into Synods to give voices not yet being received; their Party was inconsiderable, (if they adventured to be present, who were only valiant when backed with Authority,) and therefore no notice is taken of it.

3. In this Council, at the beginning whereof Gregory Nazianzen presided, Seven Canons were framed Seven Canons, "The First of which confirms the Faith of the Three hundred and eighteen Fathers, who assembled at Nice in Bithynia, to anathematize all Hæresies, especially of the Eunomians, Arians, Macedonians, Photinians, and Apollinarians. The Second prohibits Bishops to meddle with Matters which lye out of their Diocesses, and thereby confound Churches, which formerly had been regulated and bounded. Accordingly they ordain that the Bishops of Alexandria govern only the Churches in Egypt. The Oriental Bishops those of the East alone, reserving the Honour of Primacy to the Church of Antioch, according to the Rules of the Nicene Synod. And the Bishops of the Diocess of Asia they charge to concern themselves only therein, as also those of Pontus and Thrace in the Diocesses thereto belonging. The Third prohibits Bishops, without Invitation, "to move out of their Dioceses either for Ordination, or any other disposition of Ecclesiastical business, in observance of the Rule concerning every Diocese before recited; for it is manifest that in every Province the Provincial Synod ought to order and govern all things according to what was decided in that of Nice. The Fourth Decrees that the Churches of God which are settled in Barbarous Nations be ordered and governed according to the Custom of the Fathers. The Fifth declares the Bishop of the City of Constantinople ought to have the Honour of Primacy next after the Roman Bishop, and thereof renders this reason, because it is New Rome, even the same which procured to the other the Primacy of Order, viz. because he was Bishop of the Old, or Mother Rome. The Sixth determines concerning Maximus the Cynick, and his inordinate Ordination made at Constantinople, that he neither be taken for a Bishop, neither such for Clerks as had been ordained by him in any degree, all things appearing null which had been done by him. The Seventh Canon contains a Confession of Faith agreeable to that of the Nicene Council, which having not spoken fully concerning the Divinity of the Holy Ghost, the Fathers now add, And in the Holy Ghost, the Lord and Giver of Life, proceeding from the Father, together with the Father, and the Son, to be worshipped and glorified, who speak by the Prophets.

4. Not only were the Heresies against the Divinity of the Son and Holy Ghost condemned, but such as had been the Authors of them, wherein the Semiarrians, though they had been summoned by the Emperor, refused to join, who together with the Bishops of his opinion, used all means possible to persuade Eusebius and the rest of the Macedonians to reconcile themselves to the Catholic Church. They put them in mind of the Message which Eusebius and others in their names carried to Liberius Bishop of Rome, and the rest of the Western Prelates, that not long before they had communicated without exception in all Churches with such as professed the Faith of One Substance, and they pressed them with what they had formerly owned and decreed, protesting that this their aversion was neither Godly, nor Christian, seeing they had formerly ratified the self same opinion and Faith with them. But neither admonition nor reprehension would prevail, they saying flatly, That rather than they would subscribe to the Faith of One Substance, they would join with the Arians, and having made this answer, they left Constantinople, and sent Letters abroad into all Churches, that they should not in any wise consent to the Faith of the Nicene Council.

5. Though the business of the Council was finished, yet certain accidents happened, which held the Fathers still together. It happened that Meletius the Bishop of Antioch died, whom Gregory Nyssen commended in a Funeral Oration. Now according to former agreement, Paulinus was to stand possessed of the See as the Survivor; but certain factious Persons named Flavianus a Priest of Antioch to succeed him, which was received, and enforced by the younger sort of Bishops, hot, and accommodating themselves to the times, and the course of Preferment, who urged that it was not to be endured, that a Person ordained by a Western Prelate (such Lucifer was) should be Bishop of Antioch, and strenuously asserting the worth of the Eastern Church before that of the West, in that Christ himself had honoured the East with his Nativity. Gregory Nazianzen endeavoured to compose the Tumults hereupon raised, by propounding that Paulinus might be suffered to enjoy the Chair for that little time he was to live, and then the Orientals might maintain their right in the Election of his Successor. But hereby he incensed those of the contrary Faction against himself, as favouring the Occidental Bishops in the Cause of Paulinus. Whereupon he began to settle in that Resolution he had ere this taken up, of quitting the See of Constantinople, and in much displeasure departed from the Synod. He being withdrawn, they chose Flavianus Successor to Meletius, by which means the former Diffentions and Tumults were continued, the Church of Antioch being again divided, though one and the same People was subject to two Bishops, who both of them seemed to hold in Solidum.

6. This

6. This displeased Timothy Bishop of Alexandria also, who, whilst those things were in hand, came to Constantinople with some of his Suffragans, and certain Bishops of Macedonia. He declaimed also against the Confirmation of Gregory in the See of Constantinople, as done by Meletius of Antioch, whereas he challenged that right, as belonging to the Chair of Alexandria, which had precedence next that of Rome before the meeting of this Council. Herewith Gregory was so nettled, that now he perfected his Resolution, and making several Orations to the Fathers, abdicated himself from that See, and having hereby obtained leave of Theodosius the Emperor, departed into his own Country with such disdain and stomach, that he took up another Resolution never to come more into such Assemblies, and though he was the year following urged with much importunity to return to Constantinople, where these same Bishops were again assembled, he flatly refused, as having never seen, as he said, any good to come by Synods. After the departure of him, and such as were addicted to him, at the procurement of Diadorus Bishop of Tarsus in Cilicia, was chosen Neftarius a Native of that City, a Catechumenist as yet, well stricken in years, a Courtier, therefore however well skilled in secular business, yet little acquainted with the concerns of the Episcopal Function, which to teach him, he kept with him one Cyriacus a Cilician Bishop, as Sozomen writes, who tells us, that the Bishops having written down the names of those they thought fit for the place, he was from amongst them all chosen by the Emperor. Socrates faith, he was of noble Linage, whose Ancestors had been Senators, that he was a Man of unblameable Life, Pious Conversation, and though he was by Office a Praetor, yet the People made choice of him for their Bishop, and by the approbation of One hundred and fifty Prelates he was entailed Bishop of Constantinople.

7. The Council yet depending, Theodosius the Emperor on the Nineteenth day of July published an Edict, whereby he forbade Arians, Enomians, and such like Heretics to build Churches, either in, or without Cities, which since they were outed of their Possessions unjustly got, they had attempted to do. By another he also inveighs against Manichees, Eucratites, Apotacticks, and Hydropastes, other Heretics, making them infamous, and incapable of making Testaments, as he did Apostates about the beginning of the Synod. But that we may come to the conclusion of the Council, Socrates summing up what was done therein, tells us in short, that then it was decreed, that the Bishop of Constantinople should have precedence next after the Bishop of Rome, the reason being, because that City was called New Rome. Again, faith he, they ratified the Faith of the Nicene Council, they divide Provinces, and ordain Patriarchs, they decree that no Bishop shall leave his own Diocese, and intermeddle with Foreign Churches, for unto that time, by reason of the great storm and heat of Persecution, it was at every ones choice and liberty. Neftarius Bishop of Constantinople had that great City, together with all Thrace, allotted to his Jurisdiction; the Patriarchship of Pontus was assigned to Helladius Bishop of Caesarea in Cappadocia, after Basil. Unto Gregory, Brother of Basil, fell Nysa, a City also of Cappadocia; unto Otreius the Bishoprick of Meletina in Armenia, Amphilochius Bishop of Iconium, and Optimus of Antioch in Pisidia, had the Patriarchship of Asia. The Province of Aegypt fell to Timothy Bishop of Alexandria. Pelagius Bishop of Laodicea, and Diodorus of Tarsus, are appointed over the Eastern Dioceses, reserving the Prerogative of Honour to the Church of Antioch, the which then presently they granted unto Meletius. They decreed moreover, that if necessity did so require, a Provincial Synod should determine Provincial Affairs. The Emperor gave his Assent to all aforesaid, and so the Council was dissolved. Thus Socrates, whose words concerning the division of Dioceses, are to be understood according to those Rules we have formerly laid down.

8. This Council which had begun in May, thus concluded about the end of July following, on the Thirtieth day whereof Theodosius the Emperor published a severe Law against the Macedonians, as well as others, being then condemned Heretics. Herein he commands that forthwith all Churches should "be

"be given to those who held the one and equal Majesty of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and were of the same Faith with Nestorius, Timothy, Gregory, and other Bishops in that Synod, and whosoever dissented in Faith from them, should all be expelled as manifest Hereticks, never to be readmitted. In which Law, seeing the Macedonians are called manifest Hereticks, that is, such as are convicted and condemned by a General Council, it is not to be doubted, that at the promulgating of this Law, both the Emperour and Catholick Church hold that Decree of the Second Council, as a Learned Man observes against the Macedonians, to be the Judgment of an Holy, Lawful, and approved Oecumenical Synod, such as was the most ample Conviction of an Heretick, and manifestation of an Hæresie. Now this Edict was published before Damasus Bishop of Rome either approved this Council, or so much as knew what was done in it, the first news what was done herein not coming to him till after the Synod of Aquileia, (as both Stigonius and Baronius himself affirms) which was held on the Fifth of September, a Month after this at Constantinople was ended. Seeing then it is certain that this General Council was ended, and the Decrees thereof not only approved, but put in execution by the Church, not only before the Pope of Rome confirmed it, but before he knew what was done and Decreed therein, it is a Demonstration that a General Council, or a Decree thereof, may be, and de facto hath been judged by the Church, both of them to be of full and Synodical Authority, and approved by the Church, when the Pope had confirmed and approved neither of both.

9. Nay, neither Damasus, nor any of his Successors, till Gregory's time, approved this Council, as this Bishop witnesseth, who writes in one of his Epistles, That The Canons of the Constantinopolitan Council condemn the Eudoxians, but who that Eudoxius was, they do not declare; and the Roman Church hitherto neither hath, nor receiveth those Canons, or the Acts of that Synod, but herein it accepteth it, in that which was defined against the Macedonians by it, and it rejecteth these Heresies, which being therein mentioned, were already condemned by other Fathers. Hence it appears that the Romans did not approve the condemning of the Macedonians, because it had been Decreed in this Council; for then they should have approved the Canon against the Eudoxians, and all the rest of the Canons, seeing there was the same Authority in Decreeing them all; but the reason why they approved that against the Macedonians was, because Pope Damasus had in a Roman Synod, wherein Peter Bishop of Alexandria was present, diverse Years before this Council of Constantinople condemned that Hæresie, and what Hæresies were by former Fathers condemned, those, and nothing else did the Roman Church approve in this Council. Untill the Age wherein Gregory lived they did not receive this Council, for the word Hæresis which he useth, must refer to that, not to the time of his Writing this Epistle, which was in the Fifteenth Indiction, for in the Ninth Indiction, or Six Years before, he himself professeth to embrace this Second Council, as one of the Four Evangelists, which also to have been the Judgment of that Church he witnesseth in the Eleventh Indiction. And as the Council it self was rejected by them of Rome, so especially that Canon which gives Patriarchal Dignity to the See of Constantinople, and to the Bishop thereof precedence before these Patriarchs of Alexandria, and Antioch, and Authority over the Churches in Asia Minor, Thracia, and Pontus.

10. How great aversion the Church of Rome had to the meaning and design of this Canon, and how far it was from approving it, appears from several Epistles of Pope Leo, especially that to Anatolius, wherein he rejects it, as contrary to the Nicene Decrees, which he there defineth (erroneously sure) to be immutable, as if one General Council could not undo, what another had done in things circumstantial and indifferent. The Legates of this Leo in the

Ep. 31. l. 6. Et vide Notatum omnino ad Diff. 22. cap. 3. Constantinopolitanam Canoni huius ex est qui Apostolica Romana sedes à principio & tempore non recipit, quod ex Episto-la 31. ad Anat. 33. Leonis Papa ad Anatolium Constantinopolita-num & alii epistolæ Epistolæ facile est citare cognoscere. Item, ex 2. Epistolæ Leonis ix. una ad-versus præscriptiones Michaelis &
Lannis c. 28. altera ad eundem
Michaelum, sed multo clarior ex
1. Gregorii Epistolæ 31. l. 6. ad Eulogium Alexandrinum & Ana-thasium Antiochenum atque ex Epistolæ Nicolai 1. ad Michaelum
Imp. que incipit Prepositum.
Quoniam Constantinopolitanus Episcopus Imp. potentia freti secundum locum Patriarchatum solum sibi usurparunt idcirco pacis & tranquillitatis causa suis ipsi concessum. Sicut in 6. antiquæ, de prov. l. 1. 3. Papa dixit.

Hæresis nec habet nec recipit.

the Council of Chalcedon, according to their Instructions, protested that the Canons of this Council were not accounted for Synodical, and by command of the Apostolick See, as they said, earnestly oppugned this especially, against which also Damasus, as Turrian the Jesuite observes, had in a Roman Synod formerly made a Decree. And others of them say it was not allowed of till the Council of Lateran under Innocent the Third, which was six hundred years after the death of Gregory. Yet all this while was this Canon (which some make the Third, others the Fifth, as Gratian hath it), approved by the Church, and Authority ascribed to it, as of a General Council. By warrant hereof Anatolius in the Council of Chalcedon and Eutychius in the Fifth Synod, in the right of their See of Constantinople, took place of the Patriarchs of Alexandria and Antioch, none in those Councils repining thereat, nay God himself, as there is said, approving that precedence. And whereas this order had not been observed in the Ephefine Latrocinie, Flavianus Bishop of Constantinople being placed after those of Antioch and Jerusalem, the Fathers in the Council of Chalcedon stormed hereat, demanding why Flavianus did not sit in his proper Seat? which was next to the Roman Bishop or his Legates.

11. By Authority of the same Canon, Chrysostome, when Bishop of Constantinople, deposed Fifteen Bishops in Asia, ordained others in their rooms, celebrated a Council at Ephesus, and to it called the Asian Prelates, about Twenty Years after the making of this Canon, which had they not counted authentick, they would not, by obeying him, have broken the other laudable orders of the Church. The Judgment of the whole Council of Chalcedon, and consequently of the whole Catholick Church of that Age was, that this Canon was to be received and approved. They both knew there was such a Canon, and that Custom and Practice did concur with it; whereupon the glorious Judges, after full discussing of this cause (when the truth of this Canon had been diligently examined) testified and sentenced, that the Bishop of Constantinople had rightful Authority to ordain Metropolitan Bishops in the Diocesses of Thrace, Asia, and Pontus, and the whole Synod consented to them, first proclaiming, This is a just Sentence, This we all say, and then in the very Synodical Epistle to Leo testifying the same, viz. that they had confirmed that Custom to the Bishop of Constantinople, that he should ordain Metropolitan Bishops in Thrace, Asia, and Pontus, and thereby had confirmed the Third Canon of the Second Council. And this they did, though the Legates following their Instructions received from Leo, were so averse, that they said not without some choller, Let our contradiction cleave to these Acts. Justinian the Emperour, One hundred and sixty Years after, confirms this Canon amongst the rest, commanding it to be written in the Difficks or Ecclesiastical Books, and publicly to be read in the Churches, in token of publick and universal approbation of the same. The Emperour doubted not of obedience to be performed, as well by those of Rome as others, and they were silent, none contradicting or speaking against this Canon, till after his time, being loath to exasperate him. Yet did they not approve it, as appears from what hath been said, although the General Council of Chalcedon, and the Catholick Church both approved, and established it. So little necessity was there for a particular Bishop to approve or confirm what had been Decreed by the Major part in a Council; although such as consented were said to confirm the Decrees; as a Synod held at the Hellespont faith of this Synod of Constantinople, that Timothy, with the other Bishops then present, confirmed it, calling the Consent and Subscription of the Bishops present thereat, a Confirmation of the Council. But to return to our business.

12. This same Year, by command of Gratian the Emperour, and at the earnest desire of Palladius and Secundianus two Arian Bishops, a Council was held at Aquileia, whereat were present Two and thirty Bishops, and amongst the rest Ambrose of Milan, and Philastrius of Brixia, two Legates from the African Church, and Three from the Gallican. Herein the said Palladius and Secundianus, though they appealed to a General Council, and to the Secular Powers, were with their Hæresie condemned, and all the work finished in one Action, from One a Clock till Seven. And in this same year (if Baronius guesses it rightly)

This Council held without the approbation of the Bishop of Rome, yet Oecumenical.

The Bishop of Constantinople
next to Rome.

As 16. p. 136
& 137.

Lib. de Synodis
6, 7, 8. p. 65.
Notat ubi supra & Baronius de cristib.
Mansueti.
A. 1215.

Vide Dr.
Crachantibus quo supra.

Council Chalcedon.
As 11. in fine.
As 16. p. 136.

Post. As 16.
Rel. ad Leon.

Ibid. p. 137.

Novel.

Vide p. 168.
inter Epist. post Council Chalcedon.

Tom. 1. Cent.

rightly) fruitful in Synods, was another Synod held at Cæsar-Augusta or Saragossa in Spain, on the Fourth of October, against Priscillianus the Arch-Heretic and his Disciples. This Man, as Severus writes, being a Spaniard born, wealthy, and of very good parts, but given much to vain Glory, and above measure to Magical Arts, had been infected with the Heresie of the Gnosticks, which one Mark an Egyptian of Memphis brought first into France, and afterward into Spain; being once poisoned himself, he used such Arts and Industries as Infill the Venom into the minds of many others, of all sorts of Sexes, some Bishops being also drawn in, as Salvianus and Instantius. Here at the Churches being startled, after some private opposition made by certain Bishops, a Council was got together, wherein the Parties not daring to appear, were condemned absent, yet had they so much resolution and courage as to Ordain Priscillianus Bishop of Avila in Spain (the See long after of Tostatus that voluminous Writer) and though the Orthodox procured a Rescript from Gratian the Emperour to banish them Spain, as condemned Persons, yet used they such Industry, that having in vain sought assistance and encouragement from the Bishops of Rome and Milan, at length, they corrupted Macedonius the Magister Officiorum, and by his means obtained the former order to be reversed, their Sees restored, and their Persecutors banished in their rooms.

13. These Priscillianists held an hodge podge of all Heresies together, raked out of the filth of the Gnosticks, Manichees, and others. They taught Lying to be no sin, and lawful to Swear and Forfear, rather than reveal any thing to their disadvantage; they hold with Origen, that Souls sinned before they came into Bodies. With the Gnosticks and Manichees, they made two Gods, one Good and the other Evil. They taught with Bardeanes, that every Man had his fatal Star, and that our Bodies are compounded according to the operation of the Twelve Signs of the Zodiac. They confounded the Persons of the blessed Trinity, with Sabellius; they declaimed against Wedlock, separating married Persons, and with Tatianus and the Eucratites cried out against the eating of Flesh, as an unclean thing, and made by the Evil God, or malignant Angels. It was their Doctrine and Practice to fast on the Lords day, and on Christmas day, because they held that Christ did not take true humane Flesh, against their fasting on the Lords Day, the Synod Decreed and Anathematized all such as fasted on that day, whether in reference to any time, misperfection or Superstition.

14. To fast on the Lords day, it was ever accounted an abominable thing, in Ignatius his Epistle to the Philippians, he is called a killer of Christ, who fasts on the Lords day, and on the Sabbath or Saturday. Tertullian faith expressly, that they counted it wickedness to fast on the Lords day, nay even the Montanists themselves, though otherwise frequent in their Fasts, and excessive in their Scleragogy, yet excepted this day out of their Austerities. But the Manichees toward the end of the Third Age, out of their Singularity, changed the Custom, and fasted on this day. Of whom St. Ambrose faith, that they could not do it, because they justly condemned them for such a Practice; which Augustine also at this same time witnesseth to have been a great scandal. Eusebius, as Socrates calleth him, or Eutalius, as Baronius will have him, renewed the practice of the Manichees, which was presently condemned by a Provincial Synod, held at Gangra in Paphlagonia, which Decreed, that if any upon pretence of abstinence fasted on the Lords day, he should be Anathema. Now whereas the Synod of Saragossa condemns fasting on the Lords day, in reference unto times; this seems to have reference to the time of Lent it self, wherein it was accounted unlawful to fast on this day, as is clear from many Testimonies of Fathers and Synods. Therefore whereas from the first Sunday in Lent, unto Easter day, intervene just Forty two days, the Church of this Number fasteth only Thirty six, and to make it up Forty, according to the example of our Saviour; the four days between Shrove Tuesday, and the first Sunday in Lent, are added, as long ago * Rupertus (who lived at the beginning of the Twelfth Century) observed. But thus much of the Heresies of Priscillianus and his Followers, who the better

An other at Cæsar-Augusta wherein Priscillianus
the Arch-Heretic is condemned.

The opinion of this Sect.

Fasting on the Lords day condemned.

Jura perjuræ Secretum præ-dicare noli.
Aug. de heret.
Hieron. in cleron.

Causa temporis aut perjuræ aut aut super-stitionis cau.
tem. 1. can.

Die dominici jejunium nefas esse documus de Corona noli. c. 3.

Idem ad usum Physicorum c. 15.

Ep. 85.

L. 2. c. 33.
Int. or c. 42.

Can. 1. 8. Tem.

Vide Ambrode jejunio. c. 10
Hier. ad Lucian.
Epiphani. expo-
siti. num. 22.
Chrysost. hom.
11. in Gen. 2.

Syn. Agath. c.

12. Arel. 4. c. 2.

De divinis offic. l. 4. c. 9.

better to maintain their Singular and Heretical Tenets, besides the Scriptures received other Apocryphal Writings.

15. This same year the Emperours, taking notice how much Paganism through the encouragement of Julian, and connivance of Valentinian had increased, forbid their Sacrifices and Meetings. But this Law stood but as Probationer till the year following, being then abrogated in part by another, which gives them leave to meet, yet so as they wholly should abstain from Sacrifice. The truth is; they found their Zeal too strong for the Interest, Peace and Security of the Empire, wherein Paganism had yet such a Party, that most of the Senators were of that persuasion, and about this time the Consul and his Wife both Ethnicks. Another Law they made against the Clandestine Conventicles of the Manichees. And they published also an Edict for the restraining and punishing Lusty Sturdy Beggars, which as some have observed, had been much increased since the times of Christianity: For the ancient Christians endeavoured nothing more than the manumission of Slaves, upon which account, out of desire of Liberty, many of that condition became Profelytes. Out of the Histories of Africk, we are told that Paulinus Bishop of Nola fold all that he had, and at length himself to the Vandals, therewith to get Money to redeem Christian Captives. Hence came Manumissions to be made in Churches by the Bishops, and that on the Lords day, and after the time of Constantine, especially the number of poor and Indigent Persons, having nothing they could call their own but liberty, increased to such vast Multitudes, that no greater grievance lay upon Cities, than such Confluence of beggerly Persons, having no Trade nor course to live.

16. Hereupon at the earnest desire of the Bishops, Hospitals and Alms-houses for the sustenance of Strangers, Infants, Aged, Sick and Lame, unknown to former times, began to be erected by Princes or others. St. Basil complaining in his Sermons, that the sighs and lamentations of such as languished in the Churches, were confounded and mingled with the Prayers of Priests and People. Julian the Apostate, as we have already said, perceiving this was a very taking and plausible means to procure respect to Religion, resolved to Erect also such Hospitals, and to this piece of Policy excited his Pagan Priests. And for as much as those indigent Liberty or Freemen, did commonly expose their Children, as knowing that upon the Christian Principles and profession of kindness and mercy, they would be provided for, Gratian made a Law that they should remain in Servitude with those that educated them. Not long after Valens his Uncle permitted by an Edict, that Vagrants and Beggars should be reduced to Servitude, forbidding also upon pain of death, his Subjects to be take themselves into desert places, there to lead an idle life, which he commanded should be inflicted upon many. who contrary to the Laws, had withdrawn, and lived in those times solitarily in the Wilderness; yet had not those Laws such effect, but that Beggars still increasing, and lusty Fellows able to work, chusing rather to live in idleness and penury, the Emperours re-inforced the former Edicts, by theirs of this Year, which was that following the Synod of Constantinople.

17. But although Damasus Bishop of Rome was against the summoning of that Council, yet this year immediately succeeding, he had a desire to have a General and Oecumenical Synod held at his own City, and for that purpose solicited the Emperours; they having consulted the Eastern Bishops, answered it was neither necessary nor convenient to have so many General Councils called in so short a time; for this would make them cheap and contemptable, as Synods had been in the Arian days, and by the Journeys, and long absence of Bishops, the several Flocks should be exposed both to want and danger. However Damasus and other Western Bishops, are said to have held a Synod at Rome, the acts whereof are lost, but amongst others, one Canon was made, as Baronius tells us, quite contrary to what had been determined in the Council of Constantinople, in favour of that See; giving the first place to the Patriarch of Rome.

The Pagan forbidden to Sacrifice.

An Edict against Sturdy Beggars.

A Synod held at Rome.

C.Th. 7. de
Pagan.

C.Th. 1. 8. de Pagan.

Hieron. ad Marcellinum Zoa.

C.Th. 1. 9. de Heretic.

Vide Basil-
num. de republ.
l. 1. c. 5.

C. de Episcpis & clericis.
tit. 11.

C.L. 1. & seq.
de Infant. liberit.

Ad A. D.
182. ex coll. Fir-mæ Cremonensibus

Rome; the Second to him of Alexandria, his See having in the name of St. Peter been Consecrated by Mark his Disciple and Evangelist; and the Third to the Patriarch of Antioch, because St. Peter there resided before he came to Rome, and there the Faithful were first called Christians; a reason indeed sufficient to have given him Precedence above the other two, had not the Policy of the Church imitated that of the Empire, and the Bishop of Rome obtained precedence for the Dignity of that City, to which Constantinople now being Second, or New Rome, the Fathers had as much reason to alter the Case, and advance the See to the same place and Dignity.

18. The Year following was very fatal to Paganism, wherein Gratian the Emperour withdrew the former allowance for Sacrifices and Stipends allotted unto Priests, and so by taking away all encouragement, and removing the Fuel which hit herto maintained the flame, struck at the Root of that Superstition. For this cause (and not for having rejected the Title of Pontifex Maximus, which neither he nor any of his Christian Predecessors ever used) his Heathen Subjects might take part with Maximus the Tyrant, by whose Treason he was this year murdered at Lyons; his Piety and worth is very much extolled by St. Ambrose, and Aufonius his Schoolmaster, whom he dignified with the Honour and Employment of Consul, and otherwise very gratefully rewarded, having as Baronius observes, so much worth in him, as to understand and consider that Masters equally with Parents, can never be sufficiently requited. This Aufonius Gallus was a great Rhetorician, and an excellent Poet, as appears by what he hath written, and a Christian he shows himself by his Religious Poems, however his Amorous Verses have procured him, with some Readers, the repute of a Pagan; his pains were so well bestowed upon Gratian, that Theodosius wanting a Tutor for his young Son Arcadius, whom he had named Augustus, and assumed as his Partner in the Empire, desired of Gratian that he would send to him out of the West, a fit Person for so great a Trust. Gratian herewith acquainting Damasus Bishop of Rome, he commended to him Arsenius a Deacon of that Church, a Person very remarkable for Piety and Learning, who was sent accordingly to Constantinople, when he undertook his charge, Theodosius giving the Youth into his hands, said, Hence forth thou art more his Father than I. Coming upon them at a time into the School, he found Arcadius sitting, and Arsenius standing by, as he was teaching him, for which he chode the Master, as not maintaining the Authority and Decorum of his place, to whom, when Arsenius answered, that it was not fitting he should sit, and teach an Emperour, Theodosius out of disdain, took from his Son the Badge of his Imperial Dignity, caused Arsenius to sit down upon the Throne, and Arcadius to stand bareheaded before him, saying, Then his Son would be worthy of Empire, if with knowledge, he were also indued with Piety.

Which caused them with Maximus the Tyrant to murder him.

In a Synod at Constantinople the Heretic of the Sacrophori is condemned.

19. This year was another Synod summoned by Theodosius, to Constantinople, the Decrees of which, against the Hereticks were followed and re-inforced by his Edict, wherein amongst others, mention is made of the Sacrophori, who were the same with Massilians, and so called from wearing Sackcloath, against which Hereticks, one or two Synods were also holden about this time. But whilst Theodosius thus advanced the Orthodox Faith in the East, Christian Religion it self was in a little danger in the West, where at this time a great Famine raged, especially in the City of Rome. Symmachus the year following being Praefect of the City, a Man exceedingly affected to Gentilism, but otherwise of good repute, and exceedingly eloquent, taking the advantage afforded him by the death of Gratian, and Power of Maximus, when he thought Valentinian the young Emperour, would be very unwilling to disoblige his People, presented him a Petition in the Name of the Senate, for restitution of the Worship of the Pagan Gods, put down by the late Laws of Gratian. According to the old Custom of Pagans, who if any disaster happened to the Commonwealth, laid the blame upon Christianity, and the neglect of the Gods; he imputed the late Famine to no other cause, than the taking away the maintenance of Priests, and Vestal Virgins; but the device was quickly smelt out by Ambrose of Milan, who writing to the Emperour and re-felling all for him.

C. Th. l. 11. c. 12. de heret.

Christianus ad Letam.

Amb. ep. 50.

all the Arguments and Objections of Symmachus, prevailed so far as that an absolute denial was returned.

20. This Year, as Baronius gathereth from the Date of certain Rescripts, died Damasus Bishop of Rome, though Marcellinus Comes placeth his death Two years before, at the Month of October. Damasus Portuensis in his Book of Popes Lives, of Popes falsely ascribed to this Bishop, will have his Death to have happened on the Eleventh day of December, after he had sidden in that See Seventeen years and three Months wanting Four days. The See was vacant One and thirty days, and then succeeded him Siricius a Roman by Birth. About this time Theodosius taking into his consideration, that Jews made Slaves of Christians, and many of them thereby became Profelytes to their Impiety, forbids by an Edict that any Christians be in Servitude to them. And by another prescribes Arians, Macedonians, Enomians, and Apollinarians, formerly expelled, who still had the boldness to return and boast of their Doctrine. In the West Priscillian still created trouble to the Orthodox Bishops, to obviate whose Heresies, at the importunate Suit of Ithacius a Bishop and great opposer of that Heretick, a Synod was held at Bourdeaux in Aquitaine, by command of Maximus the Tyrant. So soon as Maximus had entered Triers, Ithacius puts up to him great Complaints against Priscillian, wherewith the Emperour (as Severus calls him) thoroughly moved, writes his Letters to the Praefect of Gall, and the Vicar of Spain, commanding that all Persons tainted with that Heresie, should be conveyed to the Synod at Bourdeaux. Of these Instantius being brought to his defence, when he could say nothing considerable for himself, was pronounced unworthy of the Episcopal Function. Priscillian from the Bishops appealed to Maximus, and that by their permission (for which the Historian blames their Fatherhoods) and therefore to him go both the Criminals and their Accusers, of whom Ithacius and Ithacius Bishops are much blamed for their too violent Prosecution, and the later as Audacious, Impudent, Talkative, Profuse, and given much to his Belly, whose custom it was to accuse them that were either Studious, or used Fasting and Scleragogy, as the Associates and Disciples of Priscillian, and was so bold as to object the Crime of Heresie to Martin a Bishop of that time, and a Man to be compared with the Apostles themselves.

A Synod held at Bourdeaux.

*A. D. 384.
Valentin II. 9.
Theod. 6.*

*C. Th. l. 3. tit. 1. §. 1.
L. 13. de heret.*

*Sulp. Severus
Hist. l. 2. p. 174.
8cc.
Edit. Giffelin.*

21. For Martin (Bishop of Tours) being now at Triers, continually urged Ithacius to desist from this Prosecution, and besought Maximus to abstain from the Blood of those Wretches, whom it sufficed to have Excommunicated by Sentence of the Bishops, being declared Hereticks, alledging it was a new and unheard of Crime, for a Secular Judge to decide Causes of the Church. As long as Martin continued at Triers, the Tryal was deferred, and when he departed, he got from Maximus a Promise, that he would not take their Lives, but afterward the Tyrant was drawn to the contrary Perswasion by Magnus and Rufus, two Bishops, and committed the procedure to Eudodius a Man bitterly severe, who after two Hearings of Priscillian, wherein he was Convict, and confessed he had made Uncleanness his business, kept Meetings of lewd Women by Night, and accustomed to Pray naked, he pronounced him Guilty, and committed him to custody till the pleasure of the Prince was known. Maximus was clearly for condemning him to death, which after Ithacius saw resolved, and the matter brought beyond possibility of prevention, to decline the Odium he saw would fall upon him, withdrew out of the way. But for Form sake, to conclude the Process, Maximus appointed another Accuser to demand Sentence, which was accordingly pronounced, and executed upon Priscillian, Felicissimus, Armenius, Latronianus, and Euchrecia the Wife of Dolpbius the Rhetorician, whose Daughter Procula, had been got with Child by Priscillian. Instantius the Bishop, and Tiberianus, were banished into the Island Sylina beyond Brittaine, and others were either put to death, or for a time confined to certain places in Gall.

Wherein Priscillian and others are condemned and executed.

Which Severus increases the Heresie.

22. Thus faith Severus, were those Men, who were indeed unworthy of Life, by the worth of Examples, either put to death or banished, this Tyrant Maximus, being the first that made Hæresie Capital, contrary to the judgment not only of Martin, but Ambrose, Augustine and other Pious Men of this Age. And, as it usually happeneth in this case, the Hæresie of Priscillian was not only not suppressed by his death, but more strengthened, and farther propagated. For his Followers, who formerly honoured him as a Saint, now revered him as a Martyr. The dead Bodies were conveyed back into Spain, and their Funerals celebrated with great Devotion. It became the greatest Point of Religion to swear by Priscillian, and amongst the Orthodox such Differences continued, and such abominable Disfentions, as could not be stilled for Fifteen years. And then, when by reason of the disagreement of Bishops especially, all things seemed to be disturbed and confounded, every thing being carried either by hatred or Favour, Fear, Inconstancy, Envy, Faction, Lust, Avarice, Arrogance, Drowziness, and Sloath; at last many contended madly, and pertinaciously against a few discreet and sober Persons. And in the mean while the People of God, and every good Man, became a by-word, and a mocking stock. With these words Salpicius Severus concludes his Ecclesiastical History, concerning the Excellency whereof, Joseph Scaliger and Gissalinus especially, a Learned Physician, who published it with Annotations, are to be consulted. Though all good Men out of an aversion they have to Vice, and by reason we are only sensible of present things, are apt to esteem their own times the most vitious, yet his complaints confirm much to us the Character which Erasmus gives of this Age, that It was a matter of Wit to be a Christian, that Faith was rather in their Papers, than their Souls, and there were almost as many Creeds, as Professors.

Christiannus. Illa etate in chartis erat fides potius quam in anima, ac pene tot erant symbola quot professores. Pref. in Tom. 2. Hieronymi.

23. Ithacius, who had been the great Prosecutor against Priscillian, continuing at Triers, where several Bishops, who approved what he had done, and espoused his cause as common, were assembled, Martin the Bishop of Tours was in behalf of several who had, according to their Allegiance, taken the part of Gratian, constrained to go to Court. Maximus who protected the Bishops, by their advice had resolved to send some Officers into Spain, furnished with sufficient Power, to make Inquisition after Hereticks, and spoil them of their Lives and Estates, by which course there is no doubt but a very great number of Holy Men would have been destroyed, little distinction being made amongst the several sorts, judgment being given from the eye alone, and one esteemed an Heretick rather for his pale Face or Garment, than his Faith. The Bishops knowing how little pleased Martin would be with these things, yet were very much concerned lest he should refuse their Communion, as foreseeing that his Example and Authority would easily procure him many Followers. Consulting therefore with Maximus, they think fit that certain Officers should be sent to meet him, with orders not to come to the City, except his purpose was in a peaceable manner to demean himself toward the Bishops there resident. He craftily overteacheth them, professing that he came in the Peace of Christ, and entering the City by night, went to the Church to his Devotions, and the next day to the Court, to sollicite the Tyrant in behalf of many Persons, of whom the chief were Narjes a Count, and Leucadius a Præident, who both had been of Gratian's Party.

24. But being as well desirous to preserve the Hereticks, as such Orthodox Christians as would suffer with them, he made it his greatest business to prevent the dispatch of the Tribunes into Spain with so severe a Commission. Maximus held him in suspense a day or two, either for that he would put weight upon the business, or by reason of his implacable disposition, or which was then generally guessed, out of Covetousness, to which Vice, although he otherwise he was indued with many good qualities, as Severus reports, he was much addicted, except in his excuse it be alleged, that the Treasury had been exhausted by former Princes, and the great expence he was put to by Severus Hist. quæ prius de Dial. 3. Ambros. Epist. Aug. in Cref. l. 3. c. 30.

Ille temporibus ingeniosa res fuit esse

Ad comitatum ire compellitur. Severus. Dial. 3. l. 15.

Pia enim erat sollicitudo Martinus ut non solum Christiani, sed qui sub illa erant occasione retinebantur, sed ipsi etiam heretici libere parer.

Martin Bishop of Tours persecuted by the Heretical Bishops.

by the Civil Wars, and perpetual Marches necessitated him to such courses as were burthenfome to the People. But in the mean time those Bishops, with whom Martin refused to communicate, being sensible of the danger to which they should be exposed, in case the earnestness of Theognisus, who alone had publicly condemned them, should be backed by the Authority of Martin, come trembling to the Emperour, complaining that Matters thus standing, they were præcondemned and lost Men, that this Man ought not to have been received within the Walls, who was become not only a Protector of Hereticks, but their Avenger, and in truth that they had profited nothing by the death of Priscillian, if Martin might be suffered to revenge his Cause. In sum, they cast themselves at his Feet, and with many Tears, and great Lamentations, implore his Royal Authority and Power to be employed against this one Man, who in Conjunction with Theognisus, as they had good cause to apprehend, might procure the overthrow of their Cause and Fortunes.

25. Little wanted of Martin his being condemned to the same Lot with the Hereticks. But though Maximus too much favoured these Bishops, yet he had him in so great esteem and reverence for his Piety, that he resolved to try another course, and therefore talks with him in private very lovingly, and labours to persuade him that the Priscillianists had been condemned, rather by public Justice, than the Prosecution of the Clergy, and that there was no cause why he should shun the Communion of Ithacius, and the rest of his Party: That Theognisus had done it more out of Malice, than for any good reason, and was singular in this Separation; in conclusion, that Ithacius had been acquitted by a Synod, which had met a few days before. Martin being nothing moved with these fair words, Maximus was very angry, and starting away from him, gave orders that Executioners should be sent to dispatch those for whom he had interceded; which as soon as he understood, though in the night, he got back into the Court, and promised, that in case they might be spared, and the Journey of the Officers into Spain countermanded, he would communicate with Ithacius. All this was instantly granted by Maximus, and the day following Martin, who judged it fit for him to comply, that he might divert the Sword which hung over the Necks of those formerly condemned, communicated with these Prelates at the Consecration of Felix a most Holy Bishop, and one that deserved to have been ordained in better times in the opinion of Severus. But the Bishops having got Martin amongst them, with all earnestness imaginable pressed him to subscribe to what they had done, but could not wrest it from him; He departed the next day, and in his Journey as he much bewailed his communicating with those Men, though for so little a space, Severus tells us, that an Angel appeared to him, comforting and exciting him to re-assume his former Virtue and Constancy. From this time he never communicated with any of Ithacius his Faction, confessed afterwards with Tears, that by so doing, though but for a moment, yet he had lost some of his former Power over the Evergumens. And although he lived Sixteen years longer, yet he never came at any Synod, but ever shunned the Meetings of Bishops, being of the same judgment herein with Gregory Nazianzen, and sensible of the great Corruptions of the times.

Sedecim postea exivit annos, nullam Synodum adit, ab omnibus Episcoporum conventibus secessavit.

26. The year following being the 385. of our Lord, the Tenth of Valentinian the Second, in the first Consulship of Fl. Arcadius the Emperour, and Fl. Bauto; the Year after the Birth of Honorius, Timotheus Bishop of Alexandria departed this Life, and was succeeded by Theophilus. Concerning Timotheus this is memorable, that he ordained Ammon a most Holy Monk, though to prevent being a Bishop, he had cut off one of his Ears, alleging, that the Law which was objected to the contrary, had been observed by the Jews, and professing that if he found a Man that had lost his Nose, but retained his Piety, he should not at all stick to ordain him Bishop. This Year Valentinian the Emperour published an Edict for releasing Prisoners at Easter, whereat Ambrose Bishop of Milan took occasion to upbraid him with Imprisoning Godly Men Timotheus Bishop of Alexandria dying. Theophilus succeeded.

C. Theod. l. 8. de Indulg. crim.

Men at the same time, wherein it was the Custom to set Malefactors at Liberty.

Valentinian
favours the Arians in the West.

But Theodosius endeavours to suppress them.

For the Year following he set forth another Edict, whereby he granted to the Arians liberty to meet together, at the Instigation and Procurement of Justin his Mother, a Woman so addicted to that Hæresie, that she used all inducements possible to promote it, and for that purpose endeavoured to take from the Catholics the great Church in Milan, and deliver it to them, which Ambrose opposing, the raised a great Persecution against him. Theodosius in the East, bent his endeavours against Paganism, which still seemed to revive, and recover strength, notwithstanding all the fatal strokes it had received. In the same Year wherein Valentinian published his Edict about emptying the Goals, he gave out another Rescript against Idolaters, and such as consulted the Entrails of Beasts, for the knowledge of things to come. Yet were the times still so bad, and the minds of his Subjects still so addicted to that impiety, that the Temples, and a great part of the Pagan Superstition, for all these Laws, he was constrained still to permit, and the year following, he with his two Colleagues, Valentinian and Arcadius, instead of dissolving, decide a Controversie about the Administration of the Heathenish Rites, in a Constitution directed to Florentinus the Præfatus Augustalis to this purpose.

C. Th. de fide Cath. l. 4.

Paul. in vita Amb.
Socr. l. 5. c. 11.

C. Th. de Pagan.
l. 9.

27. In obtaining the Archierosyna, or Chief Priest-hood, let him first be considered, who has done most Service in his Country, provided he have not forsaken the Service of the Temples, by applying himself to Christian Religion. For it is unseemly, yea, to speak more truly, unlawful that Temples, and the Solemnities thereof should appertain to their care, the Consciences of whom have been wrought upon by a true Sense of Divine Religion, and whom it became, although they were not prohibited, by all means to shun such an employment. Given at Constantinople on the Sixteenth day of June, Honorius the most noble Child at this time about a Year and three quarters old) and Evodius being Consuls, viz. A. D. 386. the Eleventh of Valentinian, of Theodosius the Eighth, the Fourteenth of Old Rome the 1139, of the New the 56.

In consequenda Archierosyna illi se potior, qui patria placuisse, nec tamen a Templorum cultu observatione Christianitatis abesse. Quippe indecorum est, imo, ne ovis dicamus, illicitum ad eorum curam Temples, & Templorum solemnitas pertinere, quorum conscientia cura ratio (vera ratio aut generatio) divine Religionis imbuti, & quos ipsos decet tale munus, etiam non prohiberentur, effugere emissis 16. Calend. Jul. Constantinop. Honorio N. O. P. & Evodio Coss. l. 1. A. D. 386. Cod. Th. de desertion. l. 12.

Archierosyna what.

28. This Archierosyna or Chief Priesthood, was not the Præsidency in the College of Priests, as some have imagined. But those that bore this Office, as we may learn from the Epistles of Julian in this Age, had it incumbent upon them to oversee and order the Temples, appoint what was convenient to each, take care of their external Ornament, and govern, and moderate the Priests therein Ministering. Such Chief Priests, in Greek Ἀρχιερεῖς, were of old Scopilians in Asia, whose Life is written by Philostratus, under Julian the Apostate, Arctasius in Galatia, Theodorus in Asia, (to whom he wrote two Epistles yet Extant, in the Life of 49, and 63.) and Chrysanthius in Lydia, as Eusebius signifieth in the Life of Maximus. Those Solemnities of the Pagan Temples (as Tertullian stileth them, besides others) were the Celebrations of Publick and Religious Mirth, and Vows, Festival Assemblies, Games and Solemnizations of Antient Sports; to which adhered somewhat of Gentilism, and Superstition belonging to the Temples. Feasts and Banquets which were especially universally and Religiously observed on New-years-day, as besides many more ancient, several Writers of this Age do testifie. Vows made on the Third of January in the Temples, with Feasts and well-wishes for the Health of the Prince. Such also were the Saturnalia, the Bromalia, or, as the Canon of the Synod in Trullo hath it, he Bromalia, celebrated in Honour of Bacchus, Synnamed Bromius, and the Sacrifices of the Lustrum. These, and such like, were the Pagan Solemnities, to the observation and care of which, the Gentiles endeavoured at this time to force the Christians, who also many of them of their own accord joynd in the Celebration of those Myteries, whereof the Christian Writers of those times complain, and as Tertullian of old exhorted Christians to fly from such Impurities, to both Synods and Emperours by Canons and Laws endeavoured to obviate this their Scandalous and (in many respects) pernicious Practice.

Aug. Serm. 6.
de urbi Domini De fidelitatem
c. 17.

29. For

29. For this Archierosyna or Superstitious employment being conferred on such as were Senators, and bore the greatest Offices in Cities, or had performed best service to their Prince and Country was much sought after, even by some Christians themselves, who studied more their reputation than the discharge of a good Conscience, easily being perwaded, that Prævarication and unlawful Communication in Heathenish Myteries, would not stick to this Action, which only respected the Decency and order of Administration, and was void of Superstition in it self; however it had regard to the Pagan Temples, and the Solemnities thereof. Now by the Inscription or Direction of this Law, to the Præfatus of Egypt (who as we formerly shewed, was called Augustalis) this vicious Custom, as we may learn, was most prevalent in that Country, which having of old, been more than any other addicted to Idolatry, was still more tenacious of it, as appears by a Law made the preceding Year, which notwithstanding yet the year following, viz. A. D. 387. So little Reformation was wrought, and former Constitutions so little obeyed, that to enforce them was sent Cyregius the Præfatus Prætorio into Egypt, who prohibited Sacrifices, as Zozimus with great grief witnesseth, as also Iadus. And notwithstanding all those endeavours, yet were not these Sacrifices wholly forborne, and laid aside, till the Year 391. through the indeavours of Eusebius the Præfatus Augustalis, and the Count of Egypt, at the earnest importunity and procurement of Theophilus the Bishop of Alexandria, as appears from Eusebius, in the life Adelfus. Zozimus, our own Ecclesiastical Writers, and a Law Extant in the Code of Theodosius. Neither is it to be doubted, but that Theophilus, by whose mediation and indeavours, Sacrifices at length were prohibited and taken away, procured also that the Christians, within his Patriarchal care, should be forbidden to discharge any more this Pagan and scandalous Office, whereof we treat.

This Office of Chief Priesthood forbidden to Christians.

All Pagan Superstition forbidden to Christians.

30. For although they themselves defiled not their Persons and profession, by the Superstitious Worship used in and about the Temples, and neither those Solemnities full of gross Idolatry and Pagan Impieties, yet as the Law expresseth it, it was unseemly, or to speak more truly, unlawful for Christians to have charge of Temples and their Solemnities, who ought to shun such an employment, though not thereto obliged by any prohibition. This becoming in those times a case of Conscience; the practice was condemned as unlawful by Gratian, as Zozimus the Historian witnesseth, and Tertullian had long before so decided it, in several places of his Book concerning Idolatry, for this charge, though it could not be called Sacrificing, yet as he terms it, might justly have the name of Adlacrificium, which word being rightly adjudged, and restored to him by a learned Man, he might as well use Admilitia is used by the Lawyer. Had these Solemnities been harmless mirths, destined only to Recreation, no such prohibition had been laid on Christians, but the very end and design of them was adlacrificium was superstitious and Pagan. As the Celebration of Games and votive Sports were in honour of their Gods observed, in memory of their Nativities, and Dedication of their Temples, as Lactantius writes, who thereupon concludes, that what Christian soever was present at the Spectacula, or shews which were made for a Religious end, such an one departed from the worship of the true God, and betook himself to the Pagan Deities, whose Nativities and Festivals he so Celebrated. For the Pagan used to keep holy the Eucania, or days of the dedication of their Temples, and had their Feasts and Banquets (Sympolia) in honour of their Gods; whence also proceeded their Contrarieties.

Ad cap. 16.
L. v. c. 1.
de offic. Pref.
præfatus consulit sanctus us ad sacrificium.

Symonia
c. 17.

Customs of Pagan Original or refemblance forbidden to Christians.

31. As Christians of themselves were too forward to undertake the charge of Archierosyna, tempted with the reputation thereof, so at these Games and Feasts, they were still constrained by the Pagans to be present, in other Countries besides Egypt, inasmuch that the African Fathers a little after, about the year 399. 61. could not but take notice of it, and ordain that the Emperours be petitioned, that seeing in many places, these Feasts were kept contrary to Divine Precepts, and which taking their Original from Pagan Error, Christians were compelled by Ethnicks to Celebrate, whereupon another Perfection seemed secretly to be made under Christian Emperours, they would please to forbid such Customs, and cause them

In censil.
Cath. sub. Ho-noria. c. 20. & 61. cod. off.
l. 1. c. 1. d. 1.
adrianus
revertitur.

them to be prohibited in Cities and Countries, under a certain Penalty, alleging, that Christians ought not to be compelled to those things which are contrary to Gods command, and in doing which they should incur great and apparent danger of their Souls. By such like means as this, it came to pass, that whereas by permission of some Constitutions of Christian Princes, those votive Feasts and Solemnities had been observed through the parts of Africa, with this caution, that they should be Celebrated without any Sacrifice, or other damnable Superstition, as Honorius limits them (which Law is strangely retained in Justinian's Code) yet Nine years after they were utterly removed, taken away, and prohibited by the same Emperour in another Constitution, Paganis l. 17. together with the other Reliques of Pagan Superstition, who makes it utterly unlawful to hold those Feasts, or any other Solemnities; giving unto Bishops Power and Authority to prohibit them, by the same Law which Tribonianus, though he retained the former, yet hath omitted in Justinian's Code.

Cod. th. de Paganis l. 17.C. th. de Pa-ganis l. 19.

32. So jealous were the Fathers of the Church, lest Christians should defile themselves with Pagan Impurities, and thereby give matter of scandal both to Infidels and Professors, that by their own Writings, Canons, and Imperial Constitutions by them procured, they laboured by all means to cause them to shun all appearance of evil in this respect. And for those reasons they were also sometimes so moved, as to condemn, forbid, and put down such Customs and Actions, as were taken from Pagan Precedents, though well intended and directed to a good end. So Ambrose Bishop of Milan at this time, perceiving how by the heedlessness of Church Officers, many Pagan Customs had crept in amongst the Christian Rites, both set himself with all his might to eradicate them; and with all expedition; therefore he not only declaims earnestly against such as superstitiously observed the Calends, or first day of January, procured, that on that day wherein the Pagans Feasted, Christians should fast and afflict themselves, and caused Acclamations and Shoutings which had wont to be made at the eclipse of the Moon, to be wholly left off, but abolished the Agape or Christian Feasts wont to be kept in Churches, because they had some resemblance to the Pagan Parentalia; by whose example Augustine, when Bishop of Hippo, was so moved, that he also procured them to be put down in the Church of Africa. Yet notwithstanding was it impossible to shake off suddenly all that might seem to have resemblance to Pagan Customs. For those habits stick close to Nature, wherewith she is first of all endowed; as an empty and hungry stomach, most imbraces and sucks such Juices as are first poured into it, and the Vessel retains that favour which being yet fresh and new, it had first imbibed with the Liquor, so doth the mind of Man most delight it self with the memory of those things, places, and times, wherewith in its Infancy it was acquainted, and however education and more ripe judgment may inform the understanding, yet the fancy is still tickled, and the affections insensibly overpowered, by such apprehensions as were most familiar and coetaneous to their simple and naked Originals.

Idem ferm. 30.

Aug. conf. 6.
Ep. 64. com.
Cath. 3. c. 39.Several Pagan Rites and Ceremonies nevertheless used.

33. Hence it came to pass, that notwithstanding all those Laws, Canons, and Precepts, yet old Customs were still continued for a long time after, of such a Nature and Design, as could not but be favour of Pagan Superstition, as worshipping of the Sun, with others which we may have occasion hereafter to mention. And the Fathers of the Church, especially the Roman Bishops were content to take off the Professors of Christian Religion from such practices, by not only permitting them to apply certain Customs to Christian ends and purposes, but to Institute also and Ordain several Rites and Ceremonies which had some resemblance to Ancient though Ethnic patterns, as appears abundantly from what Polydore, Virgil, and others have written of their Originals. And if in their Natures they were indifferent, if honest in their Designs, effectual in their Methods, for removal of impious Customs, if every way innocent, and in the main conducing to make impressions in the minds of Men, and introduce such Ideas as would obliterate old prejudices, and establish Pious affections, they were so many arguments of Christian Prudence, which ought to moderate rate

rate, and sway the Councils of those in Authority, according to time and place, the exigence of affairs, and the good or ill usage of such Customs and Institutions. Julian made use of such Christian Rites as he saw were prudent, and conducing in their very Nature and drift to order, settlement, and exergetical impressions, and why might not Christian Governours, as well as he, assume the quality of the Serpent, which is not inconsistent with the nature of the Dove? and having to do with such Persons as had been inured to such Customs, by a change of the design, and proposal of a new end, render them not only Innocent, but significative, and edifying, all Creatures being the possession of God, and the use of them as applicable to his Glory, as to vain and impious purposes.

34. But as there are no certain and particular Rules for individual actions, these things being left to the care and charge of Governours, who are only limited by decency and order, and confined within the borders of Edification; so accordingly were they affected, and steered the Helm as variously directed by Comportment of things, times, and Persons, in those primitive and more pure Ages of the Church; yet may we observe that the vulgar, as in all other cases, so in this, would be Master of Words, Phrases, and Terms. Therefore though Pope Silvester, as Polydore Vergil is of opinion, out of hatred both to the Names and Memory of the Gentile Gods, gave order that the days of the week should be called by the name of Ferie, and the distinction to be made by Prima Feria, Secunda Feria, Tertia Feria, &c. Yet so that the Sabbath and the Lords-day should hold their Jewish and Christian Names, and Places, as they did before; this became no certain Rule to Christians, Writers, or others. For though that day we still call Saturday, had amongst them the name of Sabbath, which was peculiar to it, and applicable to no other day whatsoever, for many Ages; and although that day on which our Saviour arose from the Dead, be by St. John called by the name of the Lords-day, by St. Paul the first day of the Week; yet Justin Martyr gives it the appellation of Sunday, which it still reserves, as also Tertullian by whom it is styled sometimes Dies Solis, and sometimes Dominicus, and in many Edicts of Christian Emperours, in the Synod held at Dixiplasium, in the lower Bavaria, A.D. 772. It hath also the name of Sunday, not to speak of Writers, and the ordinary speech of the Vulgar, with which this same name hath prevailed in all Ages downward. In like manner the Months have retained their ancient Pagan names, though at first given to them, as well as to the days of the Week in memory of their Fictitious Deities, the use of which, neither as to the one, nor other sort, did the Fathers forbid and condemn, although perhaps they could better have liked others; for if we keep the name of March, and yet think not on Mars, why may we not, saith a Father, preserve the name of Saturday, without thinking of Saturn. So long hath this Custom of Speech continued, that the innocency of the present design, together with the ignorance of the Vulgar, as to its ancient signification, may justly remove all suspicion of the prophaneness, and consequently the unlawful use thereof. The Holy Ghost it self hath not disdained to apply unto sacred purposes, words of Art used by Pagan Writers, as Paradysus, Hades, Apotholus and Clerus.

De invent. l.
1. c. 6.Idem de miseriaAug. contra Faust. l. 19. c. 5.And Months called as by them.Cyril Bishop of Jerusalem eyes.John succeeds him.Philastrius Bishop of Brixia in eyes.Hieron. de script. Eccl.

Idem ep. 61.

Aug. conf. l. 1. c. 2. c. 5. c. 13. c. 6. 11.

35. But to return to the series of Church matters, in this same year, which was the Eighth of Theodosius, dyed Cyril Bishop of Jerusalem, who had much experienced the vicissitude of humane affairs, and the condition which attends those that will live Godly in this present World, having been often driven from his See, and restored again, from the times of Constantinus. There are extant certain Catechisms, which, as it is said, he made in his Youth, but are suspected. He was succeeded by John, who as Hierome writes, (inveighing against him, under the name of Prætextatus) had formerly joyned with the Arians and Macedonians, and now of late, had been drawn off to the Orthodox Party, by the hopes of a Bishoprick. This year was also the last of Philastrius, Bishop of Brixia, who wrote against Heresies a good Book, wherein yet go under that name certain Tenents which this Age will easily excuse from error. Augustine by this time was reclaimed from his erroneous and loose course of life, having the preceding year, and the Thirty first of his Age, begun at Milan to be touched with a sense of the Orthodox Faith, and reality of Christian Religion. For there wanting a Professor of

R

Rhetorick

Rhetoric in that City, and Symmachus Præfect of Rome, being desired to send a Man fit for such an employment, by the assistance of his Friends the Manichees, he procured to be sent, being now Thirty years of Age, where falling into the Company and Familiarity of Ambrose the Bishop, by degrees he began to apprehend and dislike the errors of the Manichees; yet for the time, this change conducted so little to his proficiency in Christian Religion, that he did but make an alteration hereby to Antichristianism, being much inveigled by the Academick Philosophers, who at this time were in great esteem, and thereby hindered the progress of the Christian Doctrine. For they openly stuck not to affirm, that Christians had taken many Sentences out of Plato, and particularly St. John the Evangelist the Exordium of his Gospel, forasmuch as Plato talks much about the word or λόγος, but in so vast a different manner from that word, as it is sacred in Christianity, that such as are but meanly conversant in both, may easily discover the cheat, that it is in vain to instance in particulars; however this prejudice was in this Age whereof we write, none of the least remora's to the progress of Christianity, though some of later times have so canted in Platonick expressions, and doated upon his misapprehended Myteries, as to conjoin them with the Magnalia of our Faith; and more mischief had been the effect hereof, had not Ambrose obviated the design, by his Books written concerning Philosophy, against Plato and those his Followers, wherewith Augustine when older and wiser, confessed himself much edified.

36. Monica his Mother, following him to Milan, omitted no means she thought proper for his effectual Conversion, which was better and more easily accomplished, after the return of his Concubine into Africk, by whom he had a Son called Adeodatus. At the entrance of Bauto upon his Consulship, he made a Panygyric Oration, before Valentinian the Emperour, upon occasion whereof, afterward, he bewailed the state of his Soul, at that time, which with some impetuosity was carried out in the Prosecution of Carnal and Ambitious purposes, and wholly taken up in a disquisition of Academick questions, and Platonick Speculations. But at length, by the reading of St. Paul, and the fruitful conversation of Simplicianus, a Pious and Learned Priest, it pleased God, by degrees, to insinuate into his heart the knowledge and love of the truth, so that being as we said converted in the Thirty first year of his Age, after he had continued a Catechumenus for two years or more, he was baptized in his Thirty fourth year at Milan, by Ambrose the Bishop of that City, in the Feast of Easter, together with Adeodatus his natural Son, a Youth of about Fifteen years of age, of extraordinary parts, who dyed not long after in Africk, and Alipius of Hippo his dear Friend; after which they departed for Rome, and there, expected till the year following, a convenient time for returning into their own Countries.

37. We have often made mention of the Catechumeni, concerning whom, though the Reader, by the Circumstances of the Story, may apprehend sufficient for the knowledge of their condition in reference to Christianity, yet for his clearer insight into these Ecclesiastical affairs, it seems requisite to speak something more, both concerning those Persons, and other sorts, and ranks of Men, as they stood in relation to the Church. For there were several ranks and degrees, through which the ancient Christians thought fit that Converts should pass, for the information of their minds, and the subjecting of their Spirits to the holy Discipline, before they would admit them to the Sacrament of Baptism, the Eucharist, or Holy Orders. The first rank was of those, who were to learn the first Rudiments of Christianity, who were admitted to their Schools to hear the Charechists (such as Origen was in the Church of Alexandria, though not in Holy Orders, and but Ten years of Age) concerning whom Eusebius writes, that many Gentiles came to hear him Preach, and were converted, as Plutarch and Hieracles, his Brother, the first of whom suffered Martyrdom, and the other became afterward Bishop of Alexandria. Such as were bred up thus in Schools, were called Educati, and they and others being admitted to Homilies, Expositions, and Instructions in the Church, were called Audientes, this being the first step in the Christian School, and it pleased God, by his Preaching and Instruction to convince, such as came Augustine reformed from his loose course of life.

Is Baptized at Milan by Ambrose the Bishop.

The several Ranks and Degrees of the primitive Converts.

As Audientes.

Valentinian II.
Theodosius Arcadius.

Ep. 84. de doctr. Christ.
25. Retract. l. 4.

Confess. agnosc.

Vide post. in vita Aug.

Euseb. l. 6. c. 2.

Valentinian II.
Theodosius Arcadius.

rather for Novelty many times, than love to the truth, or perhaps to Scoff and Deride; if they began to like of the way, and judge it worth their while to lift at (though not just take up) the Cross of Christ, they were admitted to the rank of Catechumeni, for a more clear and full understanding of the Myteries of Faith, being permitted to stand in a more convenient and honourable place, than the Audientes, and as appertaining to the Church, though not yet fully received into her bosom, they were signed with the sign of the Cross at their Admission. These were the Christian Embrios, who increasing in the knowledge and the Holy Discipline, received from the Church such wholesome nourishment, as thereby to grow to the perfection of Children, vivacious and ready for the birth at what time they were regenerated by Baptism.

Catechumeni.

Competentes.

38. For which, when they were thought fit, and sufficiently instructed, they gave up their names to the Bishop, and humbly desiring to be partakers of that Holy Sacrament, they had the name of Competentes, to whom the Ninth Canon of the Council of Agatha ordains, that the Creed be publicly Preached in the Church Eight days before Easter, or on Palm-Sunday, which was performed in that part called Baptisterium, the place where the Font stood. This Creed (which was not read at the Service to which the Catechumeni were admitted) they were thoroughly to learn and understand, and for those days intervening before Easter, to fast and abstain wholly from Corporal Pleasures, as a means for Humiliation and Preparation to so solemn an Ordinance. On Easter Eve in some eminent place they recited the Creed, the Articles whereof (of the Apostles Creed) were not at this time whereof we write digested into that order and method which they now retain, it being observed by Learned Men, that St. Augustine in his Book concerning the Creed to the Catechumeni, therein neither maketh mention of the descent into Hell, neither of Life Everlasting. The Party being brought to the Font, it was demanded of him, if he believed in God the Father, and upon answer, that he believed he was dipped once; then was he asked, whether he believed in Jesus Christ our Lord, and upon the reply, being dipped the second time, the last demand was, if he believed in the Holy Ghost, and upon the like return, the dipping was the third time repeated: This Custom of dipping thrice in the more Primitive times, was introduced in remembrance of the Resurrection of Christ on the Third day, afterward, to signify the Blessed Trinity in opposition of the Arian Tenets. In process of time, when Hæreticks abused this Threefold dipping, to signify Three Natures of the Three Persons, Gregory the First, being consulted by Leander a Spanish Bishop, declared, that whether the Party were dipped Thrice or but once, he received that Sacrament, the Threefold Action signifying the Three days Sepulture of Christ, and the Three Persons in the Blessed Trinity; so also one single Act denoting the Unity of Substance in the Trinity of Persons. But left by complying with the Custom of Hæreticks who dipped Thrice, they might seem to consent to their design, he advised, that in Spain the Baptized Person should be but once dipped. Which Advice was afterward confirmed and enforced by the Fathers of the Fourth Council of Toledo.

39. The Substantial part of the Sacrament being performed by dipping (whether Once or Thrice) in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, having been enjoined to renounce the Devil and all his Works, the Pomp and Vanity of the World, they were Signed with the Sign of the Cross, by which Solemn Ceremony, the Ancient Christians testified their Faith in the Cross, that is, the Death of Christ, being not ashamed to own him for their God and Saviour, even by such a Token as was matter of Scandal to the World, and thereby they would also excite themselves, and admonish those newly initiated, to a remembrance of their duty engaged in this Virtual Stipulation, and to discharge their Baptismal Vow. That they might better perform this duty, they were assisted by Confirmation, wherein were used Prayer, and Imposition of Hands, which if useful then for those that were Persons of full Age, hath this advantage besides in such as are Baptized Infants, that now as it were by a repeated Act, they renew their Baptismal Vow, and take upon themselves, what others in their names had promised, a strong

R 2

Amb. de iis qui init. c. 4. Aug. in lib. de Symbolis ad Catechum.

Symbolum ab omnibus Ecclesiis una die, id est ante octidies dominicæ Refractionis publice in Ecclesiâ compertum, ritibus prædicari.

Perfessio. De baptismo. Prebapt. de Sacram. l. 2. c. 7.

Tertull. aduers. Iul. Præf. c. 16. Basil. de Sp. Sancto. l. 2. c. 15. c. 27. Concil. Tolet. c. 5.

De consensu. diff. 4. c. P. 2. off. consensu. Greg. l. 1. Ep. 41.

Infructi, Neophyti, Tirones.

Fideles.

a strong inducement and tie upon them to discharge that duty which now they have owned, and to which they have publicly professed to adhere. Being thus Baptized and made Christians, they were termed, Infructi, Neophyti, and by allusion to the Secular Warfare, Tirones. To express the Effects of Baptism, they wore White Garments, till the Octaves of Easter, the Lords-day following, or Low-Sunday, which hereupon was called Dominica in Albis. Now were they reckoned amongst the Fideles or Faithful, being permitted to stay after the Sermons and Reading of the Scriptures, allowed to behold the Holy Mysteries of the Altar, and partake of the Lords Table, all which had been denied to them when Catechumeni, to whom after the said Sermons and Readings, Missa est was pronounced, being not permitted to view the Sacraments. Yet were not those Novices for all this, permitted suddenly to enter into Holy Orders, it being against express Canons, for such to be made Priests and Bishops, although in the case of St. Ambrose and some others, the publick utility procured a Dispensation and Exception to this General Rule.

Gregory Nazianzen dicat.

40. But (to return from this Digression) the Year following, wherein Ti-masius and Promotus were Consuls, the Fourteenth of Valentinian the Second, and the Eleventh of Theodosius A. D. 389. Augustine having wintered at Rome, passed down to Ostia, intending there to sail over into Africa, but there he was kept for some time by the Sickness of his Mother Monica, which Pious Matron here ended her days. Having performed the last Offices of Duty to her, he sailed over with a prosperous Gale, together with Alipius and Evdodius his Companions, who accompanied him into the Country, where they spent their time in discharge of all Godly Exercises, and Augustine wrote several Books before he entered into the Orders of Priesthood, which he mentioneth in his Retractions. This same Year also departed to a better Life, in the Sixty fifth Year of his Age, Gregory Nazianzen Synnamed the Divine, his Death happening Three Years before St. Hierome wrote his Book concerning Ecclesiastical Writers, which the Author himself affirms to have been in the Fourteenth Year of Theodosius. He was of a middle Stature, a sweet and pleasant aspect, something pale, his Hair on his Head very thin, yet his Beard thick, his Nose somewhat flat, eye-brows high, his right Eye being a little contracted by a Skar. Though he seemed to be of a robust Constitution, yet was he sorely broken by continual pains of the Gout, and other Infirmities, which confining him to his Bed, he therein refreshed himself with several Elegant and Witty Poems made concerning himself upon various Occasions, of which most are yet Extant. He complains not so much of his Bodily Infirmities, as the pricks of the Flesh wherewith he was sorely afflicted, which having easily conquered in his Youth, by all the means and endeavours he could use, he could very hardly subdue in his old Age. He had made his Testament some years before, by which he gave all he had to the use of the Poor of the Church of Nazianzen, except certain Legacies left to his Kindred. Therein mentioning Alipiana by the Name of his Daughter, and Meletius his Son in Law; Baronius is careful to put us in mind, that neither was the indeed his true Daughter, nor he his Son in Law, forasmuch as he himself professeth, that he retained his Virginity inviolable. But she, together with Eugenia and Nemna, were the Daughters of Gorgonia his Sister, Married to Vitalianus, to whom the bare also Two Sons Peter and Phocas. Alipiana was Married to Nicobulus an eminent Person, and was the Mother of Nicobulus the Younger, of whom Gregory also maketh mention. But although Nazianzen being a Bishop, had no Children, yet his Father had, who was a Bishop too, and begot them in Wedlock after he was initiated in the Holy Orders, which we are content, seeing he himself hath no mind to it, to observe for the Cardinal. Amongst his Works which pass under the Name of Nazianzen, the Tragedy doth not at all favour of his Style, nor observes the strict Rule of Iambicks, according to his Custom, imitating rather Euripides as our Fulke hath observed.

Aug. Confess.
Pessin contra.

Lib. 1.

Great codex vaticanae, apud Bar. ad
A. D. 389.

41. About

Several Edicts of Theodosius.Who endeavours to suppress Paganism.Demolishing the Temple of Serapis at Alexandria.Which very much irrites the Pagans.

41. About this present time, Theodosius the Emperour gave out a Rescript against the Manichees, aswell inhabiting in the City as other places, Commanding that "Every where they should be expelled. Another Edict he published at Rome C. Th. l. 18. de heres. l. 11. de Malef. C. Th. l. 5. de "against Enchanters. Another at Milan, Forbidding execution of Malefactours "in Lent, wherein absolution of Souls (as he Phraeseth it) is expected: And "at the same place by another Rescript in the month of November he Prohi- "bits the Assemblies of all Heretical Clerks. But as the Emperour took care for the checking of those new roots of bitterness, which else would have sprouted more, and endangered the true and genuine Corn, so this year he laboured as much for the eradication of the old stock of Paganism, which notwithstanding all the Blows it had received, yet ever and anon seemed again to take fresh Root and blossom: Symmachus the famous Senatour and Oratour having clawed him by a Panegyrick, as he had formerly flattered the Tyrant Maximus, thought he had brought him by his pleasing Language into so good an humour, that he dared to request of him, that the Altar of Victory formerly in the Senate House might be restored. Hereat he conceived such Indignation against him, that he Banished him his Presence; and although afterward he was so far reconciled to him, either through his Apology of the Mediation of a Novation Bishop (as Socrates would have it) as both to pass by the Offence, and the following year to honour him with the Title of Consul, yet he proceeded more vigorously against that Superstition, for which he had interceded. For it appears from Prudentius the Poet, that after his arrival at Rome he made it his chiefest care to purge that City from Paganish Superstition and Idolatry, taking order with the Citizens, that Sacrifices and Heathenish Festivities should be abolished, and the Statues of Idols be broken in pieces, except such as were most notable for the exquisiteness of the Workmanship and fame of the Artificers.

Socr. l. 5. c. 14.
Prudent. carn.
adversus Sym-machum.

42. Hence it came to pass, to the great grief of the Pagans, that the Capitol was deprived of its Gods, the Nests where they had harboured, being all rent, and broken. And if Zozimus says true, Avarice clothed it self with the appearance of Zeal; as it ever happens in Reformations: For Stilico, he tells us, took away the Plates of Gold from the Door of the Capitol, and his Wife Serena, depriving Rhea the Mother of the Gods, of those Jewels which hung about her neck, apply'd them to her own private use and ornament. But had the Christian zeal of Theodosius stayed here, the Pagans had not forrowed to so high a degree. Still remained the Temple of Serapis at Alexandria, one of the greatest Marks and Encouragements of their superstition yet standing, famous throughout the whole World for the stateliness of its Structure, the Solemnity of its Worship, and the antiquity thereof; but this very Temple, this same year, by command of the Emperour, was utterly destroyed. The Pagans of Aegypt (as we noted before) were of all others most tenacious of their Heathenish Rites, and comported themselves less than any others to the practice and course of the present times, not forbearing to tellise their dislike by extravagant practices upon occasion, as they did at this season, raising great Stirs and Tumults against the Christians their Neighbours, who had discovered and laid open the wickedness of some of their Gentile Mysteries. The destruction of the Temple had been predicted by Bessarion an Abbat, as also by Antoninus an Ethnick Philosopher or Magician, which foretelling of his did very much incourage and confirm the Pagans, and open their Mouths in pleading for their Gods, though otherwise the loss they had sustained by the destruction of their Temple, had shut them with Shame and Confarnation. This gave occasion to St. Augustine to write a Book concerning the Divination of Spirits, as he himself testifieth at the beginning of that Work.

Eunapius in vita Adephi.Ruffin. Mar-cellinum.

43. What indignation was conceived by the Pagans, for the ruine of this famous Temple, appears from Eunapius Sardinus the Compiler of the Lives of Philosophers, a Man extremely addicted to Heathenish Superstitions and Magical Arts, and who lived at this time whereof we write. He rails exceedingly against Theophilus, whom he calls a Picarar Man, and the rest that were employed in that work deriding them for making War against the Stones, Statues, with other Materials, and twitting them for their Avarice, Sacrilege and Impiety, in spoiling the place of its rich Ornaments and Treasure. But he hath no patience when he comes to relate how into these sacred places, as he calls them, were Christian Monks introduced, men in appearance (saith he) but living as filthily as Swine. He adds, that they did publicly commit infinite and un-speak-

S

speakeable Villanies, yet was it held a piece of Piety in them to Conculcate and defile the esteem and reverence of the Holy place; for at that time (so he goes on) every one that wore Black, and shamed not to appear publicly in bad Cloathes, obtained a certain Tyrannical kind of Authority, into such an opinion of Vertue was that sort of men advanced, of whom also is spoken in the Commentaries of Universal History. They placed Monks (so he proceeds in his Ethnick fury) at Canobus, that for Gods who are seen no otherwise than by the mind, they might give divine Honours to Slaves and Flagitious persons, for they shewed for Gods the seasoned and salted Heads of such, as for the multitude of Villanies, had by the Judges been put to death, to those they bowed the Knee, those they received into the number of Gods appearing all ragged and nasty at their Sepulchres: Amongst these some were Martyrs, others Deacons, and were accounted Messengers and Arbitrators of Prayers and Petitions with the Gods, whereas they were perfidious Slaves, ignominiously subjected to Stripes, and bearing Scars in their Bodies, the Marks and Tokens of their Wickedness and Villanies. Yet such Gods doth the Earth bring forth. Thus the Impious Wretch out of his blasphemous mouth belcheth Lies and Slanders against the glorious Martyrs; a very fit Author for the Cardinal Annalist to use in behalf of his Catholic Religion and Worship of Relicks, against the Heretics of this Age (us poor Protestants) if all be considered: Just such another as Apion or Tacitus, or some such lying and railing Rashbekah, in the Jewish Masters.

44. But Rufinus hath described, together with this most Magnificent Temple, these most Flagitious Mysteries wont to be celebrated with those privy Frauds therein used to deceive the People. Socrates writes, how Theophilus the Bishop of Alexandria being authorized by the Emperour to destroy these Cages of unclean Beasts, shewed forth to the open face of the World the vain and ridiculous Practices used both in the Temple of Serapis and others, causing such things among them as resembled the Yards of men to be carried through the Forum, to their utter Shame and Ignominy. That the Pagans inhabiting Alexandria, and above the rest such as professed Philosophy, seeing how things went, could no longer contain themselves, but added new and far more grievous Offences to their former Acts, both Tragical and exceeding in Cruelty. They all jointly set upon the Christians, who standing upon their defence, a great Fray ensued, wherein died a far greater number of the Faithfull, than of the Pagans, who now in their cold blood considering what they had done, and apprehending the Emperours fore displeasure, ran away and hid themselves in several lurking places, of which number were Helladius and Ammonius, both Grammarians, of whom Socrates saith, he was Scholar in his younger years.

45. But the Fray being over, the Governour of Alexandria and the General of the Army came to assist Theophilus in the overthrow of the Temples, which now went down apace, the Idols of the Gods being turned into Kettles and other necessary Vessels, for the Emperour commanded they should be sold for the benefit of the Poor. Yet did Theophilus order that some one Idol should be reserved and set up in some publick place of the City, therewith to disgrace the Ethnick Religion in after-time. Socrates assures us, that to his knowledge Ammonius the Grammarian was much troubled thereat; saying, that the Pagan Religion thereby was subjected to much Infamy and Reproach. This was the greatest blow that the publick profession of Paganism had received, this place of Alexandria being, as it were, the Fountain of that Worship and Superstition, which being destroyed and removed out of the way, the other Houses, which were but as Chapels in comparison of this Temple, were more easily demolished. But the Gentiles acted with despair and rage, assembled all men for defence of their Gods, and killed many Christians, amongst whom was Marcellus Bishop of Apamea in Syria, by whose care the famed Temple of Jupiter in that City was demolished. Sulpicius Severus tells us also of several Temples razed by procurement of St. Martin in Gall, so that the Western Bishops were not behind their Brethren in contributing their utmost diligence for eradicating of this Superstition which held them yet still several years e'er it could universally be accomplished, so difficult a matter it was to enter into the strong Man's House to bind him and spoil his Goods.

46. About

46. About this time it seemed good unto the Church, (so Socrates expresseth himself) to take away the Office of such Priests, as were appointed throughout every Church, to receive Penitents after Confession, unto the Company of the Faithfull; and that for this occasion. Since the time that the Novatians separated themselves, and refused to communicate with such as fell in the Persecution under Decius, the Bishops added to the Ecclesiastical Canons, that in every Church a Priest should be appointed, for the re-admission of Penitents, to the end that such as had fallen after Baptism should in his hearing confess their Sin and Infirmary; which Canon is as yet in force among other Sects, only the true Christians embracing the Faith of one Substance, together with the Novatians have Banished this Penitential Function. Neither did the Novatians at the beginning allow of this addition; but the Bishops now governing the Churches, although they retained this Custom of a long time, yet removed it out of the Church in the time of Neftarius Bishop of Constantinople, by reason of an heinous offence committed in the Church, in such sort as followeth. A certain Noblewoman came to such a Priest and confessed orderly the Sins she had committed after Baptism, at length accused her self of another Crime, declaring that a Deacon of that Church had abused her Body. For this Offence, by this means brought to light, the Deacon was Banished the Church, and the People was much moved, as well in regard of the heinous offence committed, as that the Church was thereby much loaded with Reproach and Infamy. But the Priests being sharply rebuked, and the aforesaid Crime objected to them, Eudamios Minister of that Church advised Neftarius the Bishop to take away the Function of the Shriving Priest, and grant free liberty to every one as his Conscience served him, to partake of the Holy Mysteries, to prevent the like Scandal for the time to come. So much did Socrates hear of this matter from Eudamios's own Mouth.

47. About the same time Theodosius the Emperour committed such a piece of Severity as gave occasion to such an act of Church Discipline, which as for the Dignity of the Subject hath been remarkable to all Posterity. The thing was this. The Inhabitants of Thessalonica quarrelling with Botheritus, the Præfectus Militum in Illyricum, about their Waggon-driver, whom being imprisoned, he refused to release at their desire for the running of a Solemn Race, rose against him and slew him, which thing brought to the Ears of the Emperour did much incense him, yet at the intercession of Ambrose and other Bishops attending him at Milan, his Choler seemed to be allayed, and he promised to pass by and forgive the Fact. But the Courtiers coming to talk with him persuaded him not to let go unpunished a Matter of so bad Example, and thereupon the People being invited to the Circensian Games, were compassed about with Souldiers, who without any difference of Age or Sex, Guilty or Innocent, fell upon them, and running through the Streets killed all, as well Strangers as Citizens, whom they met; so that about 7000 Persons were thus slaughtered in a matter of three Hours space. The News coming to Milan, where the Bishops were assembled in a Synod, Ambrose in the Name of all, first by Letters signified to the Emperour, how horrid a Fact he had committed, and that thereby he had rendered himself unworthy of Christian Communion, and when Theodosius came to give satisfaction, and remove the Scandal, he publicly and stoutly refused him entrance into the Church for eight Months, till his Penitence might fully appear, enjoying him withall to make an Edict, whereby Sentence of Death and Confiscation of Goods should be stopped from Execution for thirty days, that the Merit of the Cause might in such a space of time be thoroughly weighed and examined.

48. The Emperour received this Chastisement with wonderfull Humility, Patience and Moderation, setting thereby such a Copy and Pattern of submission to Ecclesiastical Censures, as St. Ambrose, St. Augustine, with the rest of the Churchmen and Writers of that Age, and all ever since have both applauded and admired. But Erasmus an eminent German Physician, so learned in his Art that Riolan esteems him the greatest man that hath lived since Femelius, whatever his success was in Theology, wherein he travelled much also, hath passed a sharp Censure upon this Discipline so severely pressed upon the Imperial Majesty of Theodosius, terming it an unjust Act, and affirming, that it can never be maintained by any true and solid Reasons. However the Humility of Theodosius as well herein was eminent as in another point, wherein St. Ambrose also largely shewed his Ecclesiastical Authority. It was the Customs at Constantinople for the Em-

S 2

perours

Causing them to fall upon the Christians, of whom a great number are slain.

Amongst whom was Marcellus Bishop of Apamea in Syria.

Theodosius commits an act of Cruelty for which he undergoes Ecclesiastical censure.

Theodor. l. 5. c. 17.
Greg. l. 7. c. 24.
Niceph. l. 12. c. 40. &c.
Amb. Ep. 23. & in fun.
Theod. Aug. de Civ. Dei l. 5. c. 26. alii.

In Ambrose.

Vide Hist. Imper. de orig. me. Sc. tem. plurim. l. 2. c. 3.

And is removed from sitting in the Chancel by St. Ambrose of Milan.

perours to sit within the Chancel amongst the Clergy, at celebration of Divine Service, which Theodosius thinking with as little difficulty to doe at Milan, the Bishop would not suffer him to enjoy that privilege and convenience in his Church, but bade him go out and sit with the rest of the Laicks in the body of the Church, to which order he not only submitted whilst he there resided, but at his return to Constantinople is said there also to have observed it, though invited by the Bishops to reassume his former Seat: and Sozomen tells us, that his Successors herein followed his example, of which this Historian himself was an Eye-witness. But here for the understanding this and other passages more fully, we shall speak something concerning the form and fashion of their Churches in those Primitive times, with the order of their sitting, and how each Person was placed according to his calling and function, being much assisted in the disquisition of this matter from what our most Learned Mountague hath written of this Subject.

The first places dedicated to Divine Service.

49. The first place we meet with wherein Christians made their Assemblies was that Triclinium, or upper Room, mentioned in Scripture, where the Disciples assembled presently after our Lord's Passion. Yet according to convenience, and as they might doe it with safety they met sometimes in one place, and sometimes in another. In process of time, divers devout Christians gave their own Mansions to be Meeting places for their Synaxes or Holy Assemblies, which Theophilus (he to whom St. Luke Dedicateth his Book) is said to have done at Antioch, being if not the very first, yet one of the first of those Benefactors, which example was followed by Claudius Pudens a Senator at Rome, who consecrated his House to Divine Service, with the Title (as they called it) of Ecclesiastical Pastoris, or the Shepherd's Church. By little and little in succeeding Ages Houses were built for this very purpose, especially in peaceable times, as under Titus, Adrian, Antoninus Pius, Commodus and others. These they called Aedes Sacra, Oratoria, Edificia, Martyria, Koivuthera, Domus Orationis, Ecclesiae and by some other Names, never in those ancient times Templa or Navi, Templum and Ecclesia standing in opposition, before the time of Constantine: yet even in these times were some called Koivuthera, built and adorned more than ordinary, all which were demolished by Edicts of Dioclesian and Maximinus. After the conversion of Constantine they began to be built sumptuously, and to be called Templa, but not Monasteria, Sennae, Synagoga, or the like. Yet in Ignatius's Epistle to the Trallians, the Christian Assembly is termed Synagoga, contrary to what is affirmed by Gregory Martin a certain Literator, who brauls against us for sometime using the word Congregation for the Church (which we did in that notable Collect before the late Reviving of the Liturgy) as if they two were impossible.

The order and method of seating the Congregation.

50. The most ancient Christian Churches were of an Oval Figure, or Empusis, like some sort of Ships (upon which account the Body of the Church by Canonists is still called Navis) long, narrow before and behind, bulked out on both sides in the middle. In the midst was the Bishop's Seat, styled Episcopus for the Affides to it, and episcopi for its eminency. At the East was placed the Altar, though east at Antioch sometime in the West. In the middle was also the Ambo or Desk where the Old and New Testament was Read to the People by the Anagnostes or Reader. Round about the Bishop's Seat sat the Presbyters, and behind them stood the Deacons, except the Primicerius Diaconorum, or the Archdeacon, who stood the Deacons, except the Primicerius of his by him, being ever the Eldest in time, constantly attending the Bishop stood close by him, being ever the Eldest in time, and not preferred out of affection; excepting also those Deacons who by course attended at the Women's Seats to see all things decent and in good order. On one side sat the Lay-men, and on the other the Women, separated from the Seats of the Bishops and Priests by Cancelli or Rails, as also from each other. At the Mens Seats attended the Osarii, as the Deacons at those of the Women. The Young Men, if there was room fate, if not, stood; Boys were with their Fathers, Girls with their Mothers. Widows and Elder Women fate foremost, Married Wives and Mothers by themselves. The Younger sort of Women, if there was room, stood among the Grave Matrons; if not, behind them. The Deacons took care that none talked, whispered, laughed, coughed or sneezed aloud, slept or otherwise misdemeaned themselves in the time of Divine Service, every one being to demean himself with discretion, as understanding the business in Hand, with sobriety, watchfulness and attention to what was done or said. As for private Oratories or Chapels they had none, for private Houses or several Families, which use when afterward it crept into the Church, being Private Chapels forbidden.

ing forbidden, and the User censured by a Council in the Greek Church, we find prohibited also in Gratian's Decree, by the thirty first Canon of the same Council in Trullo. Such Clergymen were declared Excommunicate, that administered Baptism, or used Prayers in Oratories or private Houses, which in opinion of the Greek Canonists is forbidden in the fifth Canon of the Council of Antioch, and the Thirty first Canon Apostolical (as they are called) and held no better than a Schismatical Conventicle, erecting Altar against Altar. However we see both by the Roman Canon Law, and our own Provincial Constitutions and Customs, that Liberty was afterward indulged of having private Oratories or Chapels to Noble Men and others, a thing perhaps of lesser inconvenience than another practice crept very lately into our Churches, both contrary to Primitive Patterns and the practice of all Churches, as well Reformed as others. Every Man must now (as if like Horses, each Christian would kick another) have his own Stall so elevated, that he can scarcely look over it, as fit only for tolling and sleeping, so that if all kneeled when they Pray to their Maker (which certainly is the humblest posture) a Stranger coming in should not see one Man in the Church besides the Minister. A Custom which is both the effect and the cause of pride, sloth, irreverence and contempt of all good order. But enough to our purpose.

Sires about Jo- vinian.

And Origen.

51. The Law made by Theodosius for deferring execution Thirty Days, is yet extant both in the Code of Theodosius and Justinian, directed to Flavianus the Praefectus Praetorio of Illyricum and Italy, in the Name of Gratian, Valentinian and Theodosius from Verona, in the Consulship of Antonius and Syagrius, which is eight years before the true date thereof, for else Theodosius must have come into Italy before the Expedition of Maximus, which is against the testimony of all Antiquity, or the Law must have been made by some other than him, which at length was abrogated by Nicephorus Botoniates. But to pass to other matters. At this time great stir was made by Jovinian a Monk of Milan, who holding Wedlock equal in Honour with Virginity, was opposed and condemned as a great Heretic by Siricius Bishop of Rome, Ambrose of Milan, and Hierome, the later of whom in writing against him seemed so to extoll Virginity, as with the Manichees to despise and cast dust upon Marriage, which being very ill resented by many good Men, he was forced to write an Apology and explain himself. These stirs were followed or accompanied by others about the writings of Origen, of which John Bishop of Jerusalem was the great Defender. To him first wrote Epiphanius Bishop of Salamina the chief City of Cyprus, against whom he had conceived great Indignation, both for ordaining Paulinianus the Brother of Hierome in Palestine out of his own Diocese, and especially when he prayed for using in this expression, Lord grant to John that he may Believe aright. Epiphanius in his Letter to excuse himself, that he also reckons up many errors of Origen maintained by him; and signifieth, that the true offence he had given him was, his reprehending him for so doing.

52. This Letter passing from one to another, Eusebius of Cremona desired Hierome to Translate it into Latin, and keep it private, which he did about eighteen months. But then John made means to get it into his Hands, and accused Hierome both as an unfaithfull Translator, and a turbulent Person, who sought to encrease differences in the Church, by adding Oil to the Flame of that Controversy, which might else have been extinguished. Hierome herewith nettled, writes against him two Letters to Pammachius his great Friend, a Man of Noble extract, as descended from the ancient Family of the Camilli, wherein he vindicates himself as to the Translation, having used no greater liberty than a faithful and Learned Man justly might. And then he accuseth John as addicted to the Errors of Origen, which he sheweth to have been many, and more bitterly inveigheth against them than Epiphanius had done two years before, though he himself had translated many of Origen's Books, on which he had not been wanting to bestow very large Encomiums. But upon this account he also began to speak and write very ill of Rufinus and others whom formerly he had extolled to the Skies. Toward the latter end of one of his Epistles he makes mention of a Solar Eclipse, which had happened a few months before, to the great consternation of thousands of people, about Whitsonide. This fell out on the sixth of June one and twenty days after Whitsonide. And in the same year the Sun was again obscured on the second of December, which Cabricius erroneously, if Capellus be Judge, callst back to the twentieth of November; and because this Eclipse preceded the Coronation of Honorius forty days, Prosper and Marcellinus write as if it had fallen out the very day of that Solemnity.

C. Inp. lib. 9. Tit. 47. c. 26.

Siric. Ep. 1. Am. Ep. 80. Hier. adversus Jovin. Ep. 51. 52.

Op. Hierom. rom. 3. Ep. 16. & 64.

Ecd. rom. Ep. 17. & 64. & Tom. 1. Ep. 5. & 25.

Ep. 17.

53. A-

Ἐπιστολὴν, ὑπογράψας, ἐγγράψας, ἐκτελεσάμενος

Valentinian the second murdered by Ambrosius a Frank.

53. About this time in the seventeenth year of his Reign was Valentinian the second murdered by procurement of Ambrosius, the Frank. Ambrosius Bishop of Milan made his Funeral Oration, wherein he hath this expression, He died with- out Baptism, and yet enjoyeth Eternal Life, for he was but a Catechumenus though so long a Christian, and born of Christian Parents, so prevalent was as yet that bad custom of deferring Baptism. Theodosius was now got back to Constantinople, where having Built a Church in Honour of St. John Baptist, Baronius tells us, that the year preceding the Birth of Valentinian, he caused the Head of that Saint which had been found in the time of Valens to be therein deposited. Concerning this Ceremony, such Writers as mention it agree not amongst themselves neither as to the time nor manner. Other Translations also of this Head are said to have been made into Alexandria and Gall by other Persons. The Rhemists tell us in their Testament, that St. John Baptist's Head is at Amiens in France: others say his Head is in St. Silvester's Abbey in Rome, besides the scattered pieces of it in other places. There were also kept two Anniversaries for two several Findings of his Head, whereof one was in the Ruines, you must know, of Herod's old Palace, and another in the Field of Emesa. It's more worth the while to take notice that this year Augustine was ordained Priest by Valerius Bishop of Hippo, to the great content and satisfaction of the People, though to his own regret and trouble. Being now Priest, the Bishop caused him to Preach in his presence quite contrary to the Custom of Africa, which permitted not Presbyters to Speak in the Church when the Bishops were there; but after this example given, it began to be broken and antiquated in other places.

Augustine ordained Priest.

A new Edict against the Pagans.

54. Eugenius whom the Murderers of Valentinian had put in his Place, being cheated by the Promises of the Pagan Prophets, who made him confident of his success, gave them some liberty and encouragement in their Superstition, which caused Ambrose to write to him, and blame him for so doing; as also Theodosius to make a new Edict for obviating the progress of their Religion, forbidding them absolutely in any place to Sacrifice. He made also several Laws against Hereticks, and ordained that such Debtors as fled to Churches should either presently be taken thence, or that such Bishops as protected them should pay their Money, which once fell to the share of St. Augustine when Bishop. He being but Priest as yet, had a great and publick Dispute at Hippo with Fortunatus a Manichee, concerning the Original of Evil, wherein he gave him so eminent a foil, that he durst not any more appear in that City. At this time Primerianus the Bishop of the Donatists dying at Carthage, Primerianus was first chosen in his room, and then afterward Maximianus by others, whereupon arose a great Schism amongst the Donatists themselves, of which Augustine often taketh notice. The matter being brought before three Councils, Maximianus in them all had the better of his Adversary, but in a Fourth consisting of three hundred and ten Bishops, held on the Eighth before the Calends of May, two years after the beginning of the Dispute, Primerianus had the upper Hand, which great variety of passions and inclinations very much confounded the Donatists. The year after these things happened the Death of Theodosius, to the great detriment of Christian Religion, had not his Sons Arcadius and Honorius at their first entry by several new Edicts established and secured the Profession thereof, receiving as a reward of their Zeal protection from the treacherous attempts of Rufinus and his Companions.

Theodosius the Emperor dies.

Augustine made Bishop of Hippo.

55. The same year that Theodosius died, was Augustine in the forty first year of his age made Bishop of Hippo, though Valerius the Incumbent was yet living. He was for his Piety and Abilities grown by this time into so great esteem and so much taken notice of in all Countries, that Valerius fearing he might be called to some other place, and the Church deprived of so good a Pastour, dealt with the Primate of Africa that he might be Consecrated in his life-time, it being a thing highly convenient, and not altogether without precedent. When he had prepared the matter thus, and made the design known to the People, they received it with great applause, and in a manner constrained Augustine to accept thereof, though it was flatly against the Canons of the Nicene Council for a second Bishop to be ordained to a Church of which he confesseth that both he himself and Valerius was at that time ignorant. About this time Fritigildis a Queen of the Maxomans hearing of the fame of Ambrose, embraced (as Paulinus writes in his Life) the Christian Faith, and procured from him a certain Catechetical Treatise for her fuller information therein. At the request of the Bishop, she persuaded her Husband to submit to the Romans, and came to Obit sine baptismo 9. 14. nov. vita fin. accura.

Possid. in vita.

C. Th. de Pag.

C. Th. de his qui confit. ad Eccles. l. 1.

C. Th. de his qui confit. ad Eccles. l. 1.

Possid. in vita. Prosper. in Chron. Aug. Ep. 33. 110.

Milan

Milan to see that good Prelate, but he had left this life e'er her arrival there, dying not full three years after the departure of Theodosius, the day preceding the Nones of April and Easter-day, after he had sitten in the See of Milan 23 years and about 4 months, and scarcely completed his grand Climacterical. As St. Ambrose wrote some Books which are not extant, so many now extant under his name he never wrote as is confessed on all sides. Amongst the spurious things ascribed to him it's observable that the Misale going under his name makes mention of the Feast of the Assumption which was not received till After-ages. Nevertheless his service Book or Officium Ambrosianum supposed made by him was long in respect and use, till Pope Hadrian calling a Council with Assistance of Charles the Emperour abolished and burnt it commanding that of Gregory universally to be used. But not long continued this in such esteem but that the Roman Service came to be of two fashions, the new and old, as may be seen in Pamelius his Preface before Micrologus, who reporteth also out of Radulphus de Rivo that about the year 1277 Pope Nicholas the third removed out of the Churches of Rome the more Ancient Service Books and brought into use the Misals of the Friars Minorites, inasmuch that about 100 years after the said Radulphus happening to be at Rome found all the Books to be of the new stamp. But of later chopping and changing hereafter.

Durand. l. 5. c. 2.

56. St. Ambrose was followed into a better World by Nectarius Bishop of Constantinople, who died on the 27 of September of the same year, and Martin of Tours who departed this Life the night intervening betwixt the 10th. and the 11th. of November. To St. Ambrose succeeded Simplicianus and in the Room of Nectarius was consecrated, Feb. 26. John a Priest of Antioch, for his Eloquence surnamed Chrysostome notwithstanding the opposition of Theophilus of Alexandria who pretending a right in the Election of Bishops to that See endeavoured to bring in Lisdore a Presbyter of his own Church. To St. Martin that wonderful Bishop of Tours (whose miraculous Life is Written by Sulpicius Severus a Roman Citizen, a Man Noble, as Gennadius calls him, both in Birth and Learning) succeeded Briccius on the 29th. of November, though Baronius contendeth that this happened not till the fifth year after, rejecting the Testimony of Gregory one of Martin's Successors and alleging that of Severus. And all these were followed to another Life by Siricius the Roman Bishop who died February 21. of the following year having sat in that See 13 years and about two months. He first received Monks into the Clergy whereas formerly they were reckoned but amongst the Laicks. In the West also as some observe he disallowed the Marriage of Priests, admitting such to Orders as were Married, but forbidding after Orders received the use of Wedlock. The See was void 20 days and then was Elected Anasthasius and consecrated on the 14 of March the first Feria, being by Birth a Roman and however his Predecessour had inveighed against Marriage of Ecclesiastics, a Priest's Son, as Baronius himself gathereth from his Epitaph.

Sogom. l. 6. c. 2.

Hospinian. lib. 3. de orig. Monach. c. 12.

Siricius Bishop of Rome dies.

Anasthasius succeeds.

A Synod held at Carthage.

One of whose Canons prohibits any Bishop of the first See to receive the Title of Universal.

57. The year wherein St. Ambrose died was the third Synod of Carthage held counting from the time of Constantine as the Compiler did who yet ought rather to have called this the second, and that which he calls the second he ought to have reckoned for the sixth, as Baronius gathereth from certain circumstances. In this Synod are said to have been enacted 50 Canons, amongst which none is more remarkable than the 26 which ordains that the Bishop of the first See be not called Princeps Sacerdotum Prince of Priests, or Summus Sacerdos the Chief Priest, or any such thing, but only Bishop of the first See. This Canon Gratian hath put into his Decree a to which is added & neither may the Roman Bishop be called Universal, for Confirmation of which he brings in first Pelagius the second prohibiting any Patriarch to be called Universal, and then part of an Epistle of Gregory to Eulogius Patriarch of Alexandria, wherein he expostulates with him for giving him the Title of Universal, desiring him that he would doe so no more for this reason, Quia vobis subtrahitur, quod alteri plus quam ratio exigit præbetur, Because so much was taken from him as without cause was given to another; and then having told him that he desired rather to be eminent in goodness than glorious Titles, he backs or rather illustrates his former reason by a second, adding, Si enim universalem me papam vestra sanctitas dicit, negat se hoc esse, quod me fatetur universum, I am persuaded abtise hoc, recedant verba quæ vanitatem inflant & charitatem vulnerant. For if you holiness call me Universal Pope, you deny your self to be that which you confess me to be, Universal, which God forbid. Forbear those speeches which puff up vanity and wound Charity. No more of the Epistle hath Gratian transcribed, this making sufficiently for his purpose, but the Glossars think themselves concerned to tell you a Dist. 99. b Universalis autem nec est- am Romanus Pontifex appellatur. c Can. 4. d Nullus Patri. e Can. 5. f Ecce in pres. sed abtise hoc, recedant verba quæ vanitatem inflant & charitatem vulnerant. For if you holiness call me Universal Pope, you deny your self to be that which you confess me to be, Universal, which God forbid. Forbear those speeches which puff up vanity and wound Charity. No more of the Epistle hath Gratian transcribed, this making sufficiently for his purpose, but the Glossars think themselves concerned to tell you you farther that Gregory in that part which follows lets him know that this Title had been offered to his Predecessors in the Council of Chalcedon and from other Fathers, but they refused it; and they instance in several Popes, who have had glorious Titles given them by other Bishops. Baronius is fearful you should think those words Neither may the Roman Bishop be called Universal should be part of the Canon, assuring you they are Gratian's own, neither apposite for explication of this Canon but only as a hint or contents of what follows. He disclaims any right the African Church had to give Laws to that of Rome Superior to it; tells you the Bishops of Rome might have some reason to refuse the Title of Universal, which yet was their due, and concludes it was out of modesty that even the African Fathers refused those Titles which both as Metropolitans and Bishops belonged to them.

58. But, what if this Title had been given to several of Gregory his Predecessors, so was it to others also as we have * formerly shewed especially to the Patriarchs of Constantinople. Neither is it material whether the words formerly mentioned were part of the Canon or Gratian's own words, for if they were his, and contents of what follows, yet being true contents and being sufficiently made out by what Pelagius and Gregory say in the following Canons, we hope the Cardinal will allow the effect and purport of them to be Authentical, though these words be not, the Authour of which they will commend and dispraise, allow and reject at their pleasure, as he speaks for or against them. To let pass what the Cardinal takes for granted, and which we shall never yield, that the African Church was subject to the Roman; though the African Fathers had nothing to do to give Laws to that of Rome, yet they might do it (perhaps) to their own People, for the Canon is not against such as should take, but rather those that should give this Title which those of Africa might do to him as well as others. Whatever reasons Baronius alledgeth for the Roman Bishops their refusal of this Title is not very material, seeing both Pelagius and Gregory assign a true and urgent cause, viz. the wrong and prejudice that should thereby be done to other Bishops, which, however out of complement and assentation such Titles may have been given both to him of Rome and others, yet is a sufficient Bar to all such real and serious pretensions. And if the design of the Canon was to remove or to prevent arrogance in Bishops, it cannot well be imagined against whom this Engine should be levelled, whose Pride it should be designed to batter sooner than that of Rome, the eminency of which City together with other considerable accidents Elevated the Bishop's Reputation, and drawing the Eyes as well of the Africans as others upon him, drew out also expressions which puffed up vanity and wounded charity as Gregory expresses it.

59. To speak of one or two more of those Canons which are most worthy of consideration, the third ordains that Decrees of Councils be read to such Bishops and Clerks as are to be consecrated for their better information how to demean themselves, which as Possidius tells us in his Life St. Augustine procured out of a sense that he himself and ignorantly at his consecration offended against the Nicene Council. The 30 Canon which forbids feasting in Churches seemeth also to have been made through his mediation, for being very sensible of the disorders which were committed by occasion of this junketing in memory of Martyrs, and at the Graves of deceased Persons, he had formerly written to Aurelius Bishop of Carthage to put them down. But there's another Canon we must not pass over with silence because they of Rome make noise enough about it, and that is the 47 which reckoning up the Canonical Books of Scripture amongst them count those which we call Apocryphal. But that this Canon is supposititious, at least Dubious, our Divines contend for these reasons. First because it is commonly called the 47 of this third Council of Carthage, yet in some Books reckoned the 24th. of another Synod held under Boniface, as Surius Witnesseth. Then in this Catalogue are received five Books of Solomon, which number doubtless is faulty. Again the Synod in Trullo approves both this Synod of Carthage and that of Laodicea, which it could not do if this Council held for Canonical what the other judgeth no better than Apocryphal. And lastly, this Synod could not justly receive any Books as Canonical but as the Fathers had received before it, who rejected those Books as it were casual to the shew, particularly from * Athanasius, † Cyril, † Cyprian, Epiphanius, * † Gregory † Nazianzen, Hierome and others. Farther we ought to take notice that Canonical amongst the Fathers is sometimes taken absolutely and simply sometimes more largely and generally, as it is opposed to profane and secular writings. In the first sense the Holy Scriptures, as we count them, are Canonical only, only, in the second not only they but such Books as were composed out of them and contained Histories relating to this Church and in this sense the Canon might say we take all those for Canonical which we have received from the Fathers to be read in the Church.

Two other Synods held at Carthage.

60. The year following on the twenty seventh of May, was another Synod of 73 Bishops held at Carthage, in Books called the Fifth, but which ought rather to be counted the Third, wherein a Canon was enacted concerning baptizing of Infants, and a Petition ordered to be put up to the Emperours, for the rooting out of Idolatry. And this same year in the 8th. of November, was the Fourth Carthaginian Synod celebrated by 214 Bishops, who enacted 104 Canons, amongst which the 64 ordains, that he should not be accounted a Catholic, that designedly fasteth on the Lord's Day, the 100 forbids Women to baptize, the 44 commands that Clerks neither wear long Hair, nor long Beards, and the 84 Orders the Bishop do forbid none to come into the Church, and hear God's word, whether Gentile, Heretic or Jew, till the Missa of the Catechumen, or that Service was finished, whereat such were suffered to be present. Thus did Christian Religion not only subsist, but thrive, and get ground, notwithstanding all the Arts and Devices which Pagans could use. For this you must know, was the terrible year wherein the Ethnicks had foretold the Worship of Christ, should receive its Period. Peterceiving as St. Augustine tells us, that it was so far from being rooted out by persecutions, that on the contrary it won derfully increased, they devised certain Greek Verses, as given in answer to some Pagan, who consulted an Oracle. These acquitted Christ of this Sacrilege (as they impiously styled it) and laid all the blame upon St. Peter, who they foretold should by the Name of Christ be worshipped 365 years, and then the Religion should speedily and infallibly cease. These years added to the 33 years, Our Saviour is supposed to have lived upon Earth fix the end of this term, according to the vulgar Computation, in the 398 year of our Lord, the 6th. of Honorius the Emperour, of Rome the 1151, the 11 Indiction Fl. Honorius Augustus the fourth time, and Fl. Eutychianus being Consul.

The Pagan Superstition and Temples put down and demolished, both in the West and East.

61. How vain were the Hopes founded upon this lying Oracle appeared the following year, wherein Paganism it self received another Croak, by putting down the obscene and filthy shew of the Mamma, which having been formerly forbidden by an Edict, had been again restored three years agoe, but now either at the Intercession of John Chrysostome the Bishop of Constantinople, who ceased not to declaim against these Spectacula, or it being found by experience, hard to separate the Sport from its obscenity which had been pretended, was now by another Edict quite abolished. But this was but a Rite or Appendix of Pagan Superstition, which now it self this very year as St. Augustine observeth, went to wreck in all Places, the Temples of the Gentile Gods with their Idols, being every where demolished, especially in Africa by Gaudensius and Jovinus, two Counts of Honorius the Emperour. Now as it ordinarily happeneth upon such occasions, the Multitude shewed more Zeal than Prudence, for being licenced by the Edicts of the Emperours, to demolish those Temples of Idols they fell upon many excellent and stately Buildings, and thereby very much defaced the Cities. This drew forth a Rescript from Honorius, commanding the People to abstain from publick Buildings, and permitting lawful Sports, and such Recreations as were harmless and free from Pagan Impurities: Arcadius in the East gave them liberty to demolish such Temples as were in Country-Towns, and though in Cities they were permitted to stand for an Ornament of the Places, yet did Christians remove their Idols, and convert them to the use of their own Religion, which was generally done in all Places, though some were granted to private Persons, as appears by a Rescript, dated 16 years after this, and directed to the People of Carthage. Here the most magnificent and stately Temple of their Dea Caelestis, was turned into a Christian Church, and received the Chair of Aurelius, the Bishop of that City. This Dea Caelestis of the Carthaginians, was the same with Astarte the Queen of Heaven and Goddess of the Sidonians. The Idol which gave Oracles, as Capitolinus tells us, was placed upon a Lion, and contained most of the Names of all the Pagan Deities, being worshipped by several sorts

De Civitate Dei, lib. 18. cap. ult. Christiani quidem deus tangunt sacrilegi crimine, facinus innotuissimum, peritum, pugna, maleficia scilicet sublingunt de coelestis Christi nomine 365. Annot, deinde completa millenario numero Annerum sine mora summeque finem.

C. Justin. lib. 11. c. 45. C. Th. de panis leg. 17. C. Th. L. 15. c. 16. §. 2.

C. Justin. c. 1. c. 11. §. 3. Sic ut sacrificia Templorum prohibemus ita volumus publicum opus ornamenta servari. Ibid. §. 4. Ut profanus ritus tam salubri lege eliminemus, ita festos convivia civium et communem omnium letitiam non patimur subverti inde aliquid, ullo sacrificio aequo ulla suspensio, damnavit. Et. Ibid. §. 5. C. Th. l. 16. Herodian lib. 5. cap. 15. Astarte vel Astartis Ougarit apud Phoenices et Aegyptios quondam dea velut idola.

of People, by reason of the Diversities of Names, rather than distinction or variety of things, as St. Ambrose informeth. For though this Goddess was married by Helogabalus the Emperour to his God, we do not hear she was fruitful.

62. Christians having the liberty either to demolish or rife those Pagan Temples, had opportunity to pry into, and discover the inwards and most secret Mysteries of their Superstition. Hereby was the impotence of the wooden Snake discovered at Rome, where a quick one, or that of Esculapius (who had many hundred years before, because of the Plague been pretended to be brought from Epidamnus) was said to live in a Cave. And the Privacies of Apollo Palatinus; being now unlocked and searched, the Books of Sibylla, wherein the remarkable Accidents and Fatalities of the City were said to be predicted, were found and burnt by Stilico, which Rutilius a Pagan Poet of that time sadly lamented. Neither did the Gentiles take this patiently, sit still and look on, but in several Places made Insurrections, attempted the Rescue of their Idols and Temples, and suffered not the Christians to overcome without a bloody Triumph. At the same time the Church was vexed by Inteline differences and disputes. For in Africa the Donatists plaid such Pranks, that the Emperours Command by an Edict, that the Roysters which roved up and down should be punished and restrained by the Sword. Whereupon Petilianus complaining, and crying out against Persecution, Augustine replies that Thieves and Robbers were not to be heard if they quarrelled with Migistrates for restraining their Villanies. The Manichees were also so insolent, that this same Bishop who had more reason to understand them than most others, found himself concerned at this time to write 33 Books against Faustus, a Ringleader amongst those Hereticks. The contentions about the Writings of Origen, rather increased than otherwise, against which Hierome was the main Combatant falling foul, especially on John the Bishop of Jerusalem, with whom to some Persons he seemed rather to be offended than with Origen himself, yet did the Episcopal Dignity of John somewhat repress his Choler which flew all out upon Rufinus, whose Person was not guarded by any such Circumstance. But he bitterly inveighs not only against him but all Origenists, who some years before had in appearance made up the far greater part of the Christian World. When Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria, conceived they were to be wone and reduced by fair means, Hierome tells him by Letter, that such Levity displeased many good Men, and so far wrought with him, that he not only expelled them out of Egypt, but that they might be so used in other places, wrote his pascal Letters against them, by which for the following year he appoints Easter to be kept on the 19th. of Pharmuth, or the 14th. of April, requiring Epiphanius to procure his Letters to be published throughout Isauria, Pamphilia and Thrace. Hereupon the Origenists are also condemned by the Rescripts of the Emperours.

63. In the 400th. year of the ordinary Era of Christ, the Consulship of Fl. Stilico and Fl. Aurelianus in the Month of September, was the first Provincial Council held at Toledo, a City of Tarracoma in Spain, consisting of 19 Bishops, for settling matters about the Priscillianists, wherein were composed twenty Canons for establishing Ecclesiastical Discipline. Hereof the second is observable, which Gratian hath inserted into his Decree, forbidding Penitents to be admitted into the Clergy except upon Necessity, and then amongst Door-keepers and Readers, yet so as not to read the Epistle or Gospel. And if any had been formerly ordained Deacons, they were to be reduced amongst the Subdeacons, sitting with them as the Gloss expounds it in the Quire, and at meat, but without performing any thing of the Office. Now they explain whom they mean by a Penitent, viz. such as solemnly did Penance, for having after Baptism committed Murder, or other grievous Sins, and had been reconciled to the Church in Hair-cloath. The 8th. Canon forbids any one who had served in the Wars against Christians to be received so high as the Degree of a Deacon. Several of the rest concern the Wives and Children of Bishops, Priests and other Clerks, which whilst the Fathers were enacting, and endeavouring for Peace and Unity in Spain, the Difference still continued in the East, concerning the Opinions and Books of Origen. From the East the Contention flew into Africa and Italy, and in Rome Origen found many Favourers, amongst which Melania was very eminent, who much favoured the Cause and Person of Rufinus. But Marcella a notable stickler for the other Party, with Principia were so addicted to Hierome, that they ceased not to instigate, by all means possible, Anastasius the Roman Bishop against Rufinus, whom they procured him to cite to render a reason why he had translated the Books

Contra Symmachum.

Propter.

Aug. ep. 202, c. 6.

C. Th. de Episcop. cap. lib. 31. Aug. adversus litteras Petil. l. 2. c. 43, 44. De correctione Donatist. c. 11.

Hierom. Tom. Ep. 30, 31, 44.

Or for convenient Grievance hath it. Dist. 50. c. p. 1. n. 1. Placuit.

of

of Origen and Origen at Rome, and after he had mightily extolled them to the World, had presently thence withdrawn himself. He answered without making appearance by Letter, that he had not fled from Rome, but returned into his own Country, which he had not seen for full thirty years; that he was now weary and broken with Travel and Old Age, and therefore resolved there to fix, and that he had not been the first Translatur, nor had first extolled and commended to the World the Works of Origen. This refusal provoked Anastasius, not only to condemn Origen but Rufinus too, and the following year he renewed his Censure. Afterward he seemed somewhat to relent and incline a little to the Origenists, but as Hierome writes, was then translated, left by intreaty he should be brought to alter his Sentence formerly given. For he died on the twenty seventh of April of this present year, as some gather from certain Writings of St. Hierome, after he had governed but three years, though Baronius contends that he died not till April following, and so late in the See of Rome four Years, a Month and thirteen Days. Of his Actions recorded this is most remarkable, that he compelled Priests to stand whilst the Gospel was reading. For at this as well as at other times, there being great emulation betwixt Priests and Deacons in the Romish Church, the Deacons puffed up by the continual Addresses made to them from the People, because they dispensed the Goods of the Church, pressed upon the Priests, presuming to sit amongst, and give them their Blessing in the ordinary Feasts, and the Priests on the other hand acted by too much Indignation, disdained to stand upon their feet, when the Gospel was read by the Deacons.

64. We have formerly told the Reader, that Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria being by Hierome incensed against the Origenists, banished such Monks as were of that Persuasion out of Egypt. These men betake themselves to Constantinople, the Bishop whereof they acquaint with their grief, and endeavour to set him against Theophilus. Having the advantage of speaking face to face, they brought him into a good Opinion of their Cause, and made him patronize their persons by writing to the Bishop, whereby a very ill understanding was begot betwixt the two Prelates. But the Monks perceiving that they had profited little by seeking the Patronage of John Chrysostome, and that Theophilus was rather the more incensed both against themselves and him, made their Address to the Emperour, to whom they accused their Bishop of so heinous Crimes, as very much endangered his Head. Chrysostome being suspected to have an hand in the design, was very ill spoken of by the Party of Theophilus, and now Epiphanius engages himself openly in the Quarrel, who having sent the Decrees of the Synods held at Alexandria and Cyprus against the Origenists to Constantinople, when he perceived he profited nothing, but those men were rather kindly entertained, resolved to go thither and oppose them in Person. In performing his Resolutions great Contest happened betwixt him and Chrysostome, concerning which, various, uncertain and several incredible Reports are made, but Epiphanius in one respect had a great advantage of the other, for Chrysostome by the severity of his Carriage and Reproofs had incurred the displeasure of many persons, but especially the hatred of the Great Ones at Court. His rigorous Exaction of Discipline made his Clergy hate him. His refusal to eat with other men, and to be present at Feasts and lawful Divertissements increased the rumours, and gained credit to the Reports which they had raised, when he fell upon the Magistrates and Courtiers, they by their Countenance and Interest gave reputation to his Accusers, but when he came to fall out with Eudoxia the Empress, that utterly lost him. The insulting Invektive he made against Eutropius the Eunuch, who took Sanctuary in the Church after he had procured the Emperour to take away the Privilege of those places, being against a man in misery, though a guilty and obnoxious person, got him the Repute of Ill-natur'd and Cruel. The thing that preserved his Reputation and life was his excellent Preaching, which yet was the less esteemed of by reason of an Emulatour he had in the City.

65. This was Severianus a Syrian Bishop of Gabala, who understanding that Antiochus his Countryman the Bishop of Ptolemais had got good store of money by preaching at Constantinople, made him a stock of Sermons, wherewith he came and set up in that City. At first by his Flatteries he prevailed much upon Chrysostome, and got his good esteem, but being popular for his Sermons, when the Bishop had withdrawn himself to Ephefus for filling that See, then vacant by the death of the Diocesan; he began to make a Party for himself, and draw the affections of the People from their proper Pastour to himself. The Jealousie which hereupon arose was increased into Enmity it self by means of Serapion, an in-

T 2

Socrates l. 6. c. 4, 5.

Which caused Insurrections in divers Places.

The Roysters punished by the Edict of the Emperours.

The Origenists condemned.

A Provincial Council held at Toledo.

lent and turbulent Deacon of that Church, who on a time refusing to rise up and shew respect to Severianus, though a Person so far above him as dignified by the Character of a Bishop, Severianus thereupon could not forbear from reviling him, and brake into this Expression, If Serapion die a Christian, then Christ is not made Man. The latter part of these words Serapion relates to Chrysostome as spoken by themselves, who thereupon having this advantage as he thought against him, flew out into great Passion and Invectives, neither would be reconciled to him till Eudoxia the Empress in the Apostles Church cast her young Son Theodosius, if Socrates was well informed, at his feet. Whatever he did in this case, if she was not already, long it was not e'er she fell out with him, and conceived an implacable hatred against him. The Emperor Leo in his Oration in praise of Chrysostome assigneth the original cause to his rebuking of her for spoiling the Widow of one Theognostus of part of her Husband's Estate, who had been unjustly condemned, and defrauding another Widow of Alexandria of a Sum of Money due to her. It's reported of her, that she fell out with Epiphanius at his coming to Constantinople, because he would not condemn John of Heresie, threatening to open the Idol Temples and permit the Pagans the exercise of their Superstition. However it's reported from several hands that Chrysostome and he parted in displeasure, and at his departure they mutually prophesied, he that John should die in Exile, and John that he should not live to return to his own See, both which it's said came to pass, though there be no great certainty concerning the time of Epiphanius his death. Amongst the Writings which go under his Name, the Oration in praise of the Virgin Mary is none of his, though cited by Baronius, Canisius, and à Castro, but a Declamation of another Epiphanius of later time, smaller Learning, poorer Credit and Authority in the Mountague Church, one of the Conveners at the second Nicene Council.

Two Councils held at Milenus in Nomidia.

66. This same year, viz. the CCCCL. of the ordinary Æra of Christ, was Tom. Conc. 1. a General Council of the African Bishops held at Milenus in Nomidia under the presidency of Aurelius Primate of Carthage. There was another held at this place some fourteen years after, and the Canons of both are confounded by the compilers, as also with those of other Synods, for the first eight in order which respect Pelagianism can hardly be thought to have been made by the Fathers at this time wherein that Heresie was scarcely born, at least known unto the World. In the date the Collectours give the title of Clarissimi to the Emperours, which how ridiculous it is, appears by what we have formerly discoursed of such titles of honour, they had found V.C. in the Copies, which standing for their fifth Consulship they thus ignorantly interpret. In the mean while the enemies of John Chrysostome proceeded in their plots and designs against him. Socrates and others tell us, that being displeased with the Empress for taking the part of Epiphanius, he flew out into invectives against all Women, and spake so despitefully of them in his Sermons, particularly from that Text, Gather to me those that eat of the table of Jezebel, that the being made to believe he meant no other than her self, and Antiochus and Severianus, whom she maintained in the City, complained of him to the Emperour. It happened opportunely for them that Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria, being then summoned to Court as a criminal, was on his way thither. He is received not as such, but in triumphant manner lodged in the Palace, say some, and now private Cabals are held for the methods and ways of destroying John. They sent some Spies to inquire out the faults of his youth, thence to get some reflecting matter, but the design not taking, seven and thirty of them met together at Chalcedon, whither they cite him four times to appear before them, and when he refused them as unequal Judges, and was defended by forty other Bishops which assembled to him at Constantinople, they condemned him as contumacious and deposed him from his Bishoprick. When word hereof was brought to Constantinople all the City was in an uproar, watching day and night lest their Bishop should be taken from them, but the importunity of the Empress was so pressing upon her Husband, that by his command a guard of Souldiers took him by force, and putting him by night into a Boat, carried him to Pretennum a Mart Town of Bithynia over against Nicomedia, the People following and opposing the Souldiers to no purpose.

John Chrysostome of Constantinople deposed.

67. This violent hurrying him away so enraged the Multitude that a great Sedition followed. As those in adversity are generally pited, many that formerly had spoken against him, began now to take his part, and the Sermons of Severianus did but add Oil to the Flame, who ceased not to declaim against him, not as a Man that had been condemned for any Crime, but only as a proud and insolent person. Things came to such a pass, that the Emperour with those about him thought it requisite to recall recall him, and accordingly Briso an Eunuch belonging to the Empress was sent and brought him back to the City. Theodoret lays the cause upon a great Earthquake which happened at this time, by which Eudoxia was terrified and driven into this resolution. At his return he would gladly have remained without the City till he could be acquitted by another Assembly, and solicited the Emperour in that affair, but the People compelled him to go to his Church, and to preach to them as at other times, whence his Adversaries gathered matter again wherewith they charged him upon the next opportunity. He continued in his Chair for about the space of a year, preaching to the People those excellent Discourses, which being taken from his Mouth in Short-hand by some on purpose appointed, were afterwards published, to the great edification of the Church in all succeeding Ages: At length he split himself upon the same Rock, incurring afresh the displeasure of the Empress upon this occasion. The People erected her a Statue of Silver upon a pedestal of Porphyry very near to the Church of Wisdom, and at the Dedication celebrated Shews and Plays after the accustomed manner. Now either for that there was something in this Solemnity which favoured of Impiety and Superstition, the bonds of Christian liberty, and Imperial Laws made concerning such matters being violated, or because the place being too near the Church the noise and tumults made a disturbance in Divine Service, and in a manner prophaned the Ground; or out of his innate prejudice against all manner of Spēta, and the severe austerity wherewith his best friends cannot deny but he was much transported, he declaimed earnestly against the thing. The Empress herewith being sore nettled, and with the many scoffs and taunts he used against such as were Authors of the Solemnity, threatened him deposition and death also, and easily persuading Arcadius her Husband to lend her his Imperial Authority, wrote to the Bishops his Enemies requiring them to meet with all speed at Constantinople. Chrysostome upon notice hereof so far accommodated himself to the humour and condition of the times as to make another Sermon against her with this Exordium, Herodias rageth afresh, smothereth again, danceth as formerly, still seeketh the Head of John to be presented her in a Platter.

But recalled.

And in a Council held at Constantinople is banished.

68. His Enemies the Bishops being re-assembled consulted all manner of ways how to accomplish the business for which they were called. In conclusion, when they had examined many Witnesses but found no testimonies strong enough to convict him of any crime, they fell upon that point upon intruding into his See, and produced against him the Canon of the Council of Antioch, which ordains, That whosoever being deposed justly or unjustly should repofess himself of his See, without a Synod consisting of a greater number than those who deposed him should be again expelled and made irregular. Against this Canon he justly excepted that it was made by the Arians on purpose to intrap Athanasius and therefore ought not in conscience to be urged against him, but they easily overruled his Plea by interest in the Emperour, whom having wearied with their importunities they procured to remove him. At first he was commanded to keep his House, but when he refused to neglect his duty in the Church, except compelled so to do, and his Enemies still urged his expulsion to Arcadius, he was at length carried bound like a Malefactor into exile, those Bishops that were of his Party being imprisoned, and the People in vain bemoaning as well their own loss as the sufferings of their Pastor. Presently after happened a dreadful Fire, which beginning in the Church flew thence into the Palace where the Senate sat and did very much mischief. The followers of John the exiled Bishop accused the Partizans of Theophilus as Authors thereof, and they again charged them with it, whom they branded with the Name of Johannites. Socrates indeed lays it upon them as done out of indignation at what the Bishop suffered, however such inquisition was made, and such tortures inflicted upon them by Opatus a Pagan, the Prefect of the City, that several of them upon this account have had the Honour to be reckoned amongst Martyrs. Chrysostome seeing no relief could be obtained in the East, where Theophilus his bitter Enemy was so potent, betook himself to the Bishop of Rome, whom by Letters he acquainted with his case. This was Innocent who succeeded Anastasius, after the Church had been vacant one and twenty days. He would gladly have promoted and shewed the Power and Interest of his See, in giving him assistance, but his endeavours as well as aims were to no purpose.

To Anastasius succeeds Innocent in the See of Rome.

Anastasius chosen in the Chair of Chrysostome at Constantinople.

69. For the Enemies of Chrysostome to fill his Chair, and cut off all hope of his Restoration, elected Bishop of Constantinople Anastasius an old decrepit Man, of fourscore years of Age, Brother to Nectarius who had formerly governed that See, a Man less Eloquent than Fishes, and a worse Singer than the Frogs, if

Lib. 5. c. 24

Scr. 1.6. c. 16. Lxx. col. 18. Gr.

Legē Palladii Dial. de Vita Chrysostomi. Ang. de laudibus.

Palla-

Palladius be Judge, but of singular modesty and of meek behaviour, in the opinion of Socrates, who thereupon observeth, that the Church in his time enjoyed great ease and quietness. But many contemning him for the vast difference they found betwixt his parts and those of his Predecessour, and especially induced by a sense of that wrong which they conceived to be done to John, refused utterly to communicate with him, and separated themselves from his Church, which so provoked those of his Party, that great Persecutions were raised against them, some Imperial Edicts being procured for correction and restraint of those who refused to communicate with him and his Fellow Bishops. In the mean time, whilst Christians by persecuting one another, and rending the seamless Coat of Christ, gave matter of scandal to the Enemies of their Religion, a greater matter of scandal was offered to such in the West, by renewing a great and solemn act of the old Pagan Superstition. This was the Celebration of the old Secular Games, which had been omitted ever since the Conversion of Constantine vide Part 1. the Great, but now by permission of Honorius, who was made to believe that the omission of them would be fatal to the City, were for this one time more restored. Concerning these Solemnities, we have heretofore sufficiently spoken. This was the two hundredth year from that wherein Severus the Emperour celebrated his Games of an hundred and ten years, whereby it came to pass that they were confounded with the Centenaries, but the Romans, out of a fond respect to their old Superstition, desired to have them this way celebrated rather than not at all; and Claudian in the name of other Pagans, overcome with joy in Poetick Raptures, celebrates the praise of the Emperour for this so great an expression of kindness to his Subjects of the old stamp. But the Pagans having this Inch of liberty given them, improved it (as the Proverb hath it) to an Ell broad, procuring the old Spētiacula of the Gladiators also to be restored, to the view of which the Vestal Virgins went out in a solemn Procession. For these and other things, as Divines observe, the Land groaned, and both Emperour and People suffered the dreadful effects of God's Anger and Indignation, which within a year or two abundantly shewed themselves in the Invasion of Italy and other Parts of the West by the Barbarous Nations.

70. The same year that Chrysostome was driven into exile, St. Augustine the Bishop of Hippo disputed publicly in his Church two days together with Felix the Manichee, who overcome with his Arguments, confessed the truth, and renounced his errors. The year following, being the four hundred and fifth year of our Lord, in the second Consulship of Stilico, and the first of Anthemius on the eleventh of November, Asfacius the pretended Bishop of Constantinople died, having held the See a year and two months. About the Succession great heats and contention arose, and the Disputes continued for four months, after which in the next year, in the sixth Consulship of Arcadius and the first of Probus was Atticus Elected, a Man born at Sebastia in Armenia, brought up in the Monastick course of life by those of the Macedonian Heresie, from which afterward turning to the Catholick Faith he was made Priest of the Church of Constantinople, and became a stickler against Chrysostome; of mean learning, but of very good natural parts, and fit for business. By this means was Chrysostome kept out of his See, and still imprisoned, very hardly used, and removed at length from Arsupura. bisus toward Pityventis on purpose to harass him to death, in which Journey he died, and passed to an heavenly Countrey, whom in this World neither his eminent Piety, singular Learning, nor incomparable Eloquence could protect from the calumnies of Sycophants and unjust oppression. He was born at Antioch in Celsyria upon the River Orontes, of a Noble Family, his Father's Name Antioch in Celsyria upon the River Orontes, of a Noble Family, his Father's Name Secundus, and his Mother's Anchusa. He studied at Athens, where applying himself to Libanius for Rhetorick, and Androgathius for Philosophy, he profited in Learning to the admiration of the whole Univerfity, being yet a Pagan. Afterwards he and his Parents were converted, though he was very well learned in the Laws, yet resolving to betake himself to the Monastery, he studied Divinity under conduct of Diodorus, Carterius, Ensebius, Emifenus, and Basil the Great. Then was he made Reader of the Church of Antioch by Zeno Bishop of Gara, a Deacon by Meletius, after three years by Euagrius a Priest, and at length Bishop of Constantinople, and Patriarch of the Churches throughout Thrace, Asia and the Maritime Coasts. A most excellent both Man and Christian, but as such want not their failings, so is he observed to have been too rigid and austere, by which defect he seems partly to have brought much trouble upon himself. He wrote some Books whilst yet a Reader, some when Deacon, others when

The Secular Games Celebrated.

And the Spectacula of the Gladiators.

Asfacius of Constantinople dies.

Atticus elected in his stead.

John Chrysostome dies in exile.

Prudentius aduersus Symmach. c. 2.

Socr. l. 5. c. 17. Socr. l. 8. c. 27. Palladius ubi supra.

Socrates. Sec. l. 8. c. 2. Niceph. l. 10. c. 2. Theodoret. l. 5. c. 28. Palladius Metaphrasi.

when Priest, but most after he came to be Bishop. His Works yet extant were by Erasmus digested into five Tomes, since that published in an Excellent Edition by our Sir Henry Savil. Many Spurious pieces bear his name, which Sixtus Senensis and others have detected. The Liturgie laid to be his is of the same stamp, for it hath a Prayer for Alexius the Emperour who was born long after his death, and for Nicholas the Pope or else the Patriarch of Constantinople. The Copies much differ one from another. Amongst the Saints there remembered mention is made of Chrysostome himself. Worshipping the Image of Christ is spoken of, whereas he in his genuine writings as his 50th Homily upon Matthew accounts the Art of Painting Superstitious; and the second Nicene Synod though it scrape up all the Testimonies it can in behalf of Images, yet never citeth the Liturgie of Chrysostome.

Several Judgments upon his Persecutions.

71. Ecclesiastical Writers observe that many and remarkable Judgments fell upon his persecutors not long after they had accomplished the effects of their Malice. Observable is that story told of Cyrinus Bishop of Chalcedon, on whose foot Maruthas Bishop of Mesopotamia treading against his will, when they were assembled in a Synod against John, it so corrupted the brute that he was forced to cut it off; but the putrefaction running over his whole Body, and falling at length into his other Foot he was constrained to lose both and miserably died. Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria whose carriage in this business makes us suspect he too much deferved the Character given him by Socrates, notwithstanding that Baronius would fain make him a good and holy Man, not long after was taken with a Pain in his side and died. Antiochus and Severianus scarcely overlied him. Hail of an unusual bigness fell at Constantinople, four days after which was taken away Eudoxia the Empress by a miserable manner. Neither were other Calamities wanting, as Plague, Famine, Inundations, Earthquakes, Droughts, Wars and such like miseries as shortly after befell Greece. However Chrysostome was looked upon in the East whilst he lived, when dead his memory presently began to be very pretious throughout the whole Church, which Impotent the Bishop of Rome perceiving excommunicated Asfacius his Successor, though already departed this World, together with the Emperour Arcadius and Theophilus the Bishop of Alexandria, if credit may be given to the later Greek Historians, and a Book in the Vatican Library cited by Baronius, whereas the more Ancient Writers and those of better Note relate no such matter, and Theophilus whom they will have deposed late fast in his See till his death, not to speak that the Synod which Condemned Chrysostome how unjustly soever, could not wish more Justice be condemned by Impotent without an hearing.

Several Edicts against the Pagans, Calicolas and Jews.

72. The year following, being the 408 of the ordinary Era of Christ, Honorius the Emperour published some Rescripts against the Donatists and Pagans, which upon the death of Stilico were become high and domineering in Africa to such an height that pretending such Laws as had been made formerly against them to have been his mere device without any Imperial Authority, they rose up against the Orthodox Christians and murdered certain Bishops. In one of those Rescripts of the Emperour together with the Donatists are the Calicolas condemned, who are also in another Edict of the following year joyned and sentenced with Jews. What these Calicolas should be is very obscure, the name being new and unheard of as the Edict it self bears mention, though they are joyned also in an Edict of Constantine. Some have thought them Pagans and Worshippers of the Dea Caele formerly mentioned, some a sort of Esseni amongst the Jews, who worshipped the Host of Heaven; but that they were Christians herein appears because they were Baptized. Yet are they not reckoned amongst Hereticks by those that have made Catalogues of such, so that they seem to have been a sort of Judaizing Christians or Christianized Jews, and to shun the Odium of Judaism might take upon them this name of Calicolas living under their Majores, as the Jews did under their Patriarchs. But this same year also Theodosius the Emperour gave out another Edict against the Jews who upon pretence of celebrating the Memory of the hanging of Aman dragged Crofics up and down the Streets and burnt them in derision and despite of Christian Religion. He requires the Governours of Provinces to prevent this Scandal and upon Commission of the like Offence threatens the Jews with forfeiture of their remaining Privileges. About this time died Porphyrius Bishop of Antioch a great Adversary of Chrysostome's, who after the death of Flavianus had invaded that See by fraud and Tyranny. For whilst the whole City in the grove of Daphne was intent upon the Spētiacula, he was ordained Bishop by Severianus, Acacius and Antiochus those of his faction with such speed that Vide Socr. l. 6. Cap. 14. 17. Lat. Sacram. Niceph. Theod.

C. Th. de heret. c. 19. & de Paganis.

Ursiphr. l. 43. Cod. Just. lib. 1. tit. 9.

Calicolarum nomen inaudito quidem modo nomen crimen superstitionis vinitis dicunt. Vide Theodoret. l. 5. c. 28. in leg. Aug. Ep. 163.

Vide cod. Just. lib. 1. tit. 1. leg. 3.

Tit. cod. l. 11.

Socr. l. 1. c. 24. Niceph. l. 13. c. 30. Theod. l. 5. c. 33.

Porphyrius Bishop of Antioch dies.

that many accustomed Rites were thereby omitted, for which fact the People was so enraged that they had set fire to his Houfe and burnt him, but that by strong hand they were overpowered by the Governour of the Town, whom he had corrupted with Money. In his place was chosen Alexander a Man brought up in the Monastick courfe of Life, and of great repute for Piety and Learning, who by joyning in one the parties of Paulinus and Meletius restored Peace to that Church, and made an end of that Schism which had lasted fixty years, from the Election of Eustathius.

73. The next year was the City of Rome besieged by Alaricus, upon which occasion when as the Pagans betook themselves to their false Deities, Zozimus the Historian relates that Innocent the Bishop of that City did secretly consent to certain solemnities of that superstition induced by the great profress made by the Tuscan Assassins, for which report as a mere Scandal, Baronius is exceedingly concerned. Considering the temper of the relater we cannot but joy with the Cardinal in his charitable opinion, (though this be not so much a reason to him as something else, and he refuse on Authority how vile soever of which he may make use against us Hereticks) yet cannot but wish that he who shewed so much zeal in behalf of a particular Bishop would have employed a little in opposing some Reliques of those Heathenish impieties which yet cleaved to the Professours of Christianity. For not to speak of that Deluge of Wickedness of which Chrysostome, Hierome and other Fathers of this time complain, which spread both over the Eastern and Western Empire, the Emperours though Christians as well as their Pagan Predecessors suffered their Images to be adored, and this very year according to the old Custome speak of themselves as Gods, and Attribute Divinity to their Persons, none opening his Mouth in reprehension of so unwarrantable a practice. Notwithstanding the Fathers of the Church, to give them their due in this tion. Norwithstanding the Fathers of the Church, to give them their due in this particular, ceased not to declaim against the Spectacula and the Licentious practices of the Stage, of which the Pagans, as Augustine observeth, were the first Founders, yet Christians fill too much loved and retained these obscene Sports, frequenting Bawdy Houses, Salvian also complains, and the Emperour Honorius is noted as guilty of incest for having Married two of Stilico's Daughters Successively. Yet amidst those great difficulties therewith at this time he was incumbered, he forgot not to publish several wholesome Laws against Magicians, Pagans, Jews I. 10. and the lately mentioned Catholicks, which are yet extant in the Code of Theodosius Tit. de multi. Pagani de cathol. verum. in behalf of Prisoners also, commanding that every Lord's day they should be let out of Prison to receive the Almes of good People, and to the publick Bathes for the Improvement of Religion; the consideration of which made St. Hierome deny it was for his Sins that so great Calamity now befell his People, and lay the Siege and Captivity of the City of Rome at the Doors of the obdurate and perfidious Gentiles.

Honorius sends forth his Edicts against Magicians, Pagans, Jews and Catholics.

Rufinus dies:

74. The year following wherein Rome was taken by Alaricus being the 410 of the ordinary Æra of Christ, Ruffinus the Priest of Aquila and great Patron of the Perfon and Works of Origen died in Sicily, having retired himself thither upon approach of Alaricus. Against him St. Hierome unbandomely insults being now dead, and not able to answer for himself; but he had given him such Nick-names whilst alive, that no wonder he should maintain what he had formerly said and done : For in his Writings he ordinarily gives him the name of Scorpius, sometimes he calls him Griminus, the forerunner of Pelagius, and other good Epithets he gives him, by the content and Approbation of Baronius; who over and above accufeth him for foisting into the Books he Translated things quite different from the Design of the Authour. Indeed his Translations of Greek Authours as now extant seem to have been the products of a most negligent, ignorant and dissolute Interpreter, but the Annalist hath no great reason to condemn him in this Point having made so much use of him in reading those which he could not understand in their own Language. This makes him accuse Joſephus most falsely for contradicting himself about Salome, as if he sometimes called her Herod's Sister, and sometime his Wife, whereas the very place he quotes is Sister, but herein he follows Ruffinus his Translation, and having no skill in the Language (which certain it is he had not, faith one who was able to judge) or otherwise relying upon Interpreters he is often plunged upon Absurdities as in due time and place may be made apparent. In the mean time we shall take notice that Theodosius the Emperour this year published several Rescripts against Priscillianists, Eunomians and Montanists to be seen in the Title of Hereticks in the Code of Theodosius. As also that about this same time Syneſius whose Epistles are yet extant was made Bishop of

Theodosius
publisheth several Rescripts against the Priscillianists, &c.

Nulli habetur ambiguum e-tiam ab here-dibus & pro heredibus posse rescripta nostri numinis allegari.
c. Th. l. i. t. 2.
l. 10.
Tit. de mulct.
Pagan. de custod. reorum.

g Tom. 1. Ep. .
k- 16. 59.
y Præf. in Hieron.

By il-ut

Bp. Mount-ague, Appar.
C. A.

of Problemais, concerning whom some admire he should be reckoned amongst Ecclesiastical Writers, much more intrusted with so great a charge. He was Born Vide Elogium, l. 1. c. 15
Synfius made a Greek and Pagan, of a Noble Family, in his Youth given to Hunting and the study of the Liberal Sciences, wherein he excelled being of the Platonick Sect. Synfius Epp.
Enagrius who calls him Bishop of Cyrene desiring not to forget him, that the excellency of his virtues, as he saith, might set forth the simplicity of his Style; writes, that he was so eloquent and so profound a Philosopher that being had in great admiration by impartial Christians they perswaded him to be Baptized, and take upon him the Priestly function, though he neither admitted nor would be brought to believe the Article of the Resurrection; and this they did, hoping very charitably of him, that those things would follow after his other virtues, and that the grace of God would suffer nothing to want in him that belonged unto his Souls health, which hope of theirs, saith our Author, was not in vain. For how Excellent he proved, both the learned Epistles he wrote, after he was Priest, and the Book he dedicated to Theodosius, with other notable Monuments of his industry, do declare.

try, to declare.

75. This that Enagrus writes of him is but agreeable to what he saith himself in his Epistles; yet Baronius concludes that assuredly there was no such matter as his being ordained by Theophilus, the Bishop of Alexandria, holding such an opinion concerning the Resurrection, pronounces those highly mistaken that believe it, and as knowing fully his mind affirms he did but jest and not write what he thought, his design herein being to prevent the imposition of the Episcopall function upon him, which he as much as death abhorred. Certainly Enagrus and Nicephorus might by living nearer to his Age have as good opportunity, to know the meaning of Synefius as the Cardinal, whose good opinion of Theophilus (for Men must be good or bad as makers for his great design) hath no good foundation in Antiquity. Synefius not onely refused to be Bishop upon the account of the Resurrection (for Hereticks seldom refuse such conditions as may enable them better to propagate and countenance their errors) but out of a Lazy humour which very hardly would admit of business, and especially because he flatly refused to live without his Wife in the Ministry (which since the promotion of Siricius had become too commendable) neither converse privately with her as a Concubine, whom both God, the Law and the sacred hand of Theophilus, as he saith himself, had given to him. Notwithstanding this his Protestation yet the People was so importunate that Theophilus ordained him Bishop, not hoping that he would change his mind as to keeping his Wife, but in his belief as to the Resurrection; for the Cardinal is not ignorant (however he conceals all he may) that notwithstanding the Custome which at this time obtained in Thebais (introduced by Theodoros a Priest of Tricca and Author of certain wanton and amorous Books intitled Aschiopica) that a Priest using the Company of his Wife which he Married when a Lay-man should be deposed, yet such Bishops and Priests in the East as refrained their Company did it at their own choice without any Law or Compulsion, and many of them notwithstanding their Government and Administration of their Episcopall function, in the time of Socrates begat Children on their lawfull Wives, which we shall have occasion to shew that in the East they ever did, and in the West for many Centuries yet downward, till the Decrees of the Roman See at length with much ado obtained. As for Synefius after his Consecration he contended against Heresies indeed, and exhorted his Presbyters so to doe. Of his Writings few are extant, except a Volume of his Epistles, from which it appears that he thought soberly and orthodoxly concerning the Holy Trinity, concerning other Doctrines he speaks not much, but of this little whatever he thought of the Resurrection, some things cannot be commended, as that the Mind of Man is the Seed of God, that Angels by their conversation with Men have contracted ill affections, that thereupon the Son of God came down, that sins are purged by punishment. When Bishop he wrote some Books concerning hunting, much busied himself about the works of Homer and such frivolous things. In adversity he was to overcome with passion and dejection that he was near killing himself for the death of his Son. It repented him that he had suffered the Episcopall function to be imposed on him. He lived still with his Wife, and begat Children after his Consecration, and was of a candid, free and open spirit. But enough of Synefius.

76. The year following, which had Theodosius the Emperour alone for Consul, by reason of the Disorders in the West, a Conference was held at Carthage, betwixt the Catholicks and Donatists, which though it had the usual effect upon Disputants themselves, yet of the ordinary People, and those called Circumcell. Col.

Lib. 5. c. 22.

Aug. Brev.

His Works and Character.

Theodosius
publisheth an Edict against the Donatists.

Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria dies.

Cyril succeeds.

Morgan or Pelagius an Heretic.

First taken notice of by St.
Chrysostome.

Being summoned to Di-ocletis, he hypocritically re-cants his assertions.

Which are chief.

Liones, very many are said to have been reduced into the Right way; and the Emperor following on the stroke lately given by the Orthodox Bishops to this Heresie, in the next year publisheth a severe Edict, which inflicts exile and most grievous Fines, upon such as should still pertinaciously continue in that Schism. This same year on the fifteenth of October, died Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria, of a Lethargy, after which followed a great Contest about the Election of his Successour, some tickling hard for Timothy the Archdeacon, and others for Cyril the Nephew of Theophilus. Though Abundantius Governour of the Town undertook his utmost endeavour for promotion of the former, yet Cyril carried it three Days after the decease of his Uncle, and if Socrates deal fairly with us, affirmed to himself more Power than he ever had enjoyed. From this time forth, he tells us, the Bishop of that See besides the Government of his Clergy and Jurisdiction in Ecclesiastical matters, took also upon him the management of temporal Affairs, as a token whereof Cyril presently shut up the Novatian Churches in Alexandria, and not only rifled them of all their Treasure, but robbed also Theopemptus, their Bishop of all his Estate. But from these differences at Alexandria a Dissention of greater Consequence diverts us, a notable Heresie springing up in the Church at this time, the Sower of which Cockle had his Birth and Original in this our Island of Britain. His British Name was Morgan, of the Greek and Latin Pelagius, signifying in English, near the Sea. He was a Monk of the Monastery of Bonium or Bangor in Flintshire, wherein lived two thousand Persons famous for their diligent labour, as well as their solitary Course of Life; but quitting that Place travelled up and down the World, and contrary to the observation passing the Seas changed his mind, as well as the Air, and either received from others, (for Baronius would lay the load upon Rufinus) or himself conceived many and grievous Errours, which now disturbed the Peace of the Church, after her Triumphs over the Arian Heresie.

77. The first that took notice of his heterodox Opinions, St. Chrysostome seemeth to have been in his fourth Epistle to Olympias, wherein he lamenteth his fall, whom formerly he had looked upon as an Holy Man. This was two years before the death of that good Bishop, the ordinary year of our Lord, 405, about seven Years before the time that Proper assigneth for the Worlds taking notice of this Heresie, though St. Augustine also much about that time, as we may easily perceive had smelt it out. But all this while for fear of a discovery, and the brand he should infallibly receive from the Hands of the Pious and Learned Fathers of the Church, he published his Tenents in the Names of other Men, by the means and procurement, especially of Caelestius his chief Disciple. Not only St. Augustine (whom as some observe how truly I know not, by Divine dispensation, Africk brought forth the same day, that he was born in Britain, as an Antidote against the Poison) both by Words and Writing opposed this Doctrine. But St. Hierome also, though concealing both the Names of Pelagius and Caelestius, yet hinting at his Original by twitting the Island of Britain as fertile in Tyrants, and the Scotish Nation. He deduceth the Pedigree of these Errours, from the School of the Stoicks, all along through the Successions of Origen (who yet certainly was rather a Retainer to the Academy than the Porch) Eugrius, Ponticus, Rufinus, and others of that perivasion, taking in the Alliance of the Manichees and Priscillianists, and descending to Jovinianus. At length Caelestius published his Heresies at Carthage, yet craftily under the notion of questions onely, where as soon as published, they were refuted and condemned by an Assembly of Ecclesiasticks, there gathered together. After this Pelagius not able to hold any longer pulled off the Vizard of an Orthodox Priest, and openly maintained his opinions, upon spreading whereof and advice from Carthage, a Synod of Bishops was held at Lidda or Diopolis a City of Palestine, under Eulogius Bishop of Cæsarea, and Metropolitan of that Province where Pelagius recanted, and out of fear hypocritically anathematized his former assertions.

78. Those were twelve in number as Baronius findeth them in the Cresconian Edition, inserted after the Epistle of Aurelius Bishop of Carthage, to those of the Provincia Bizacena. 1. "That Adam was created mortal, so that whether he had sinned or no he should have died. 2. That his Sin hurt onely himself, and not his Posterity. 3. That Infants newly born are in the same State, that he was before his Fall. 4. That neither through his Death and Prevarication could all Men die, neither through Christ's Resurrection shall life again. 5. That Infants though they should never be baptized, yet may obtain Eternal Life. 6. That

Rich

Pestifero vomitu coluber sermone Britannus.
Camden, in Profer. Aquit.
Cestria. Uffe-rius de primord. Ecclæs.
Britan.
Caelum non animus mutant qui trans mare currunt.

In Chron. de peccat. meritis
l. 3. cap. 1.

De peccatoris meritis & Ep.
Demeter.
Hist. Scot. l.

Ep. ad Cresc.
Phonem.

"Rich men though baptized, yet except they renounce all they have cannot obtain the Kingdom of Heaven. 7. That the Grace and Assistance of God is not afforded to the several Acts, but they depend upon free Will, belong to the Law and Doctrine. 8. That the Grace of God is given according to our Merits. 9. That none could be called the Sons of God, except they were made utterly void of all Sin. 10. That the Will is not free if it stand in need of God's Assistance, it being in the Power of every one to do or not do any thing. 11. That our Victory is not from the Help and Assistance of God, but proceeds from our own free Will. And 12. that forgiveness of Sin is not given to those that ask it, for the Grace and Mercy of God, but according to the Merits and Endeavours of such as by their Repentance do deserve it. Those Assertions are of the very same Nature, with such as are found in the Books of St. Augustine, St. Hierome, Prosper and others, who have had occasion to mention them in their Writings, and speak of some other Tenents, most of which are rather Consequences of those, as some of those are of others, than really divers and distinct from them; the Summ of all being this, that as we are born without Goodness and Vertue, so absolutely without vice or flaw in our Wills and Inclinations. For if all depend merely upon our own Will, the Law might send them to Heaven who lived under it, as well as the Gospel can do us, and if they really were not, yet they might have been without Sin; and to what purpose should the Church put up her Prayers and Petitions for Infidels, and such as resist the Truth, or that those who are already converted, should grow in Grace and Vertue, and persevere in them till the end, if we receive not these things from God, but are endowed sufficiently with Power within our own selves, and the Grace of God be onely conferred on us according to our own Merits and self Sufficiency? what need Saints pray to have their Sins forgiven if they live without them, or not to be led into Temptation, if they stand not in need of God's Assistance, but have Power enough in themselves, and their Wills be sufficient to weather it out against all hardships and opposition? As for the Grace of God, it appears from the fourth Canon of the Council of Milenus (which as we said before must have been holden not till the discovery made of this Heresie) that Pelagius and his most thorough paced Disciples, understood no more by it than the Revelation of the Divine Will, whereby a Man might know what was agreeable or dissonant to it; but as for the Power of fulfilling God's Command, that a Man hath for his own natural strength, standing in no need therein of his Grace and Assistance. Though Pelagius by his great dissimulation imposed upon the Fathers assembled at Diopolis, yet their jealousy thereof seems not utterly wanting, in that they gave him no Letters testimonial of his Repentance and Sincerity, which happened well both for themselves and other Orthodox Christians, he in a short space recanting what he had before then renounced, and licking up his Vomit, which he had in appearance spued out in their presence.

79. Whilst Pelagius a false Brother raised such riots and Contentions amongst Christians themselves a notable Tumult happened at Alexandria, betwixt such as bore that Name there, and the Jews and Pagans of that City upon this occasion. A certain Dancer shewed his feats of activity upon a Saturday, which being the Sabbath of the Jews, they thereat took great offence, and burning ever with hatred against Christians raised a Tumult, which for this time was appeased, by the Care and Endeavours of Orestes the Prefect of the City. But it happening that Orestes fixing upon the Theatre, some Decree or Law to be for the future observed by the People, some of Cyril the Bishop's Friends were curious to peruse it, and amongst the rest one Hierax a Grammarian in great grace with him, whom as soon as the Jews beheld they cried out upon him, that he came thither for no other end than to move Contention betwixt Christians, and those of their perivasion, and laying hands on him, haled him to Orestes. He being a Pagan and a great Enemy of Cyril, whom he hated as well upon account of his Faith as Profession, because that the Power of the Bishops in Alexandria had much abridged the Authority of the Governours, caused him to be severely beaten. Cyril upon notice hereof, sends for the most eminent amongst the Jews, and threatens them with condign Punishment, in case they gave not over their mutinous Courses, wherewith they were grievously offended, and set themselves more carefully than ever, to work some natable feat, and shew their utmost rage and spleen against the Professours of Christianity. One certain Night having prepared themselves for this purpose, they set some to crie Fire in the Streets, and to give out it was in the Church of Alexander, which alsoon as the Christians heard,

Another upon which the Jews are dis-driven and driven thence.

Socrat. l. 7.
cap. 13. &c.
Niceph. l. 14.
cap. 14.

they issue out of their Houses, and from all Coasts making toward that place, fall amongst the Jews, lying in Ambush for them, by whom they are miserably slain without respect to any Condition. Hereupon Cyril the Bishop gets him to the Synagogue of the Jews, of whom some he causeth to be put to death, the Deacons of others to be seized, and banisheth the rest, whereby they who had inhabited the City from Alexander's time, were now dispersed into all Countries.

80. Orestes the Governour taking the thing it self in ill part, as depriving the City of those People, which by their egregious cunning in trade and practice in brokerage, make their Company desirable to several Places, and worse as done by him, makes a great complaint hereof to the Emperour. Cyril was not wanting to himself on the other hand, in laying open the Infolence and Cruelty of the Jews, yet desired to be friends with Orestes, which offer the other would not clove with, either merely by reason of his Ethnick, and inveterate prejudice, or for that he intended to act the second part of what the Jews had formerly performed. But their Enmity daily increasing, the Monks that inhabited the Mount Nitria took notice thereof, and being at leisure, also as hotly disposed, as lately when Theophilus armed them against the Party of Dioscorus, resolved to maintain the Quarrel of Cyril his Successour, and fifty of them coming to Alexandria assaulted the Governour as he rode in his Chariot, calling him Sacrificer, a Heathen, and giving him much other opprobrious Language. He to appease them, told them he was a Christian, having been baptized by Atticus Bishop of Constantinople, but they would give no credit to his words, and prosecuting what they had begun, one amongst them, Ammonius by Name, gave him so fore a blow on his Head with a stone, that the blood gushed out about his Ears, and the Officers and Sergeants attending him out of fear shied for themselves, the Governour continuing in this danger, till the Citizens came in to his rescue, and seized on Ammonius, whose Fellows had made a shift to get away. Him the Governour caused to be tortured to death, and both he and Cyril again by writing, make their case as good as they can possibly to the Emperour. But the Bishop buries the Corpse of the Monk in a peculiar Church, changeth his Name from Ammonius to Thannasius, and in a kind of Funeral Sermon extolls the noble Courage of the Man, the great Combat he endured for Godlines, and gives Command he should be called a Martyr, which gave offence to the more moderate and sober sort of Christians, that knew how to distinguish betwixt the Cause, and the Punishment, and were satisfied that the Monk died not for Christ; but suffered what was due to his seditious and unwarrantable Enterprize.

81. These just and sober Sentiments of the judicious sort of Christians, caused Cyril to suffer the thing to dye, and be forgotten with the Monk, but still the grudge continued betwixt him and Orestes, which produced another piece of imprudence, and scandal on the Christian Part, after this manner. There was a Woman at Alexandria, by Name Hypatia, the Daughter of Theon the Philosopher, who trained up in her Father's way excelled all the Philosophers of that time, continued in Plato's School the exercise formerly practised by Plutinus, publicly read the Doctrine of all Philosophers to such as from all Countries flocked to hear her, and was had in extraordinary Honour and Esteem, not only for her Learning, but exceeding Modesty, Gravity and Courage, which she had sucked in from her Philosophical Principles. Many Letters of Synesius to her are yet extant, who calls her Lady and Mistress, and Snidas takes notice of her, as a most chaste Virgin. This Person it seems being in great favour with the Governour, the People grew jealous, that she did ill Offices betwixt him and the Bishop, and in conclusion certain frantick and rash Fellows headed by one Peter a Reader of the Church, watching her as she came home to her House, pulled her out of her Chariot, and dragging her into the Church called Caesarium, stripped her stark naked, with sharp shells rent the Skin from her Body till she died, then quatering her brought the Quarters to a place called Cinaron, where they burnt them to Ashes. This devilish Act brought great scandal to Christianity in general, as well as the Church of Alexandria, and the Person of Cyril. Socrates is so precise in the Account thereof, that he notes it was committed in the fourth year after Cyril's Consecration, the tenth Consulship of Honorius, and the seventh of Theodosius (which was the 416 of the ordinary Ara of Christ) in the Month of March and the Ember-days. Yet Baronius admonisheth his Reader not to give credit to the Relater of those Stories, whom being a Novatian he concludeth prejudiced against the Bishop, for what at his first coming to his Office he had done done against those of that persuasion. However we commend the Cardinal for his Clarity to a Person of so eminent Dignity in the Church, or rather, if one might dare to judge, to his Champions the Monks, of whose bald Skulls (if they shaved themselves at this time) he is as tender as of the Bishop's Mitre, yet out of a principle of indifference we must also tell the Reader, that others conversant in Antiquity do observe, that as this Age was generally very corrupt, so no greater Plague happened to the Church and Common-wealth, than that of the Monachal Life, which for about an Hundred years had filled the World with so many drones, that scarcely did any hope he could be saved except quitting his Station, in which God's Providence had placed him, he exposed the Church and State to the Lust and Tyranny of Robbers and Thieves, who at this time broke into all Places. And because Faithfulness is the most requisite Quality in an Historian, we cannot but farther alledge in Socrates his behalf, that those times whereof he now wrote, were as the Morning to his own Day, and therefore however, he or any other might Counterfeit what there was no clear Light to discern, and tell Stories which none could contradict, being beyond the Memory of any alive, yet at such time as the Knowledge of matters must needs be fresh, it were extreme Folly to assert such Fables as both their fresh Date, and Eminence of Persons by whom, and of Places where, they should be acted must necessarily lay open to the Contradiction and Derision of Eye-witnesses and By-standers.

Upon which a Quarrel twist the Governour and the Bishop arise.

Which is scandalously carried on.

82. But as for the Jews, their sufferings were so far from humbling them, that instead of making amends for what they formerly committed, they perpetrate other outrageous acts, which draw down more severe punishments upon them. For shortly after in a place betwixt Chalcis and Antioch in Syria, called Imnestar at the time of their Plays and Interludes, in derision of Christ and Professors of Christianity they nail a Child of that Profession to a Cross, lift him up into the Air, and having derided and other ways abused him, scourge him to death; which being known procured great disorders betwixt the Christians and them. And the Emperours acquainted with the horrible Fact, gave orders to the Magistrates of the Countrey to make diligent inquisition, and severely punish it; whereby it came to pass (as the Historian phraseth it) that the Jews inhabiting those Parts, for what they had shamefully committed in jest were punished in earnest. The Rescript it self is not extant in either of the Codes, but this year Theodosius by an Edict still remaining in his own Book, commands the Honorary Prefectship to be taken from Gamaliel (whom Baronius rationally conjectureth to have been their Patriarch mentioned by St. Hierome) and other punishments to be inflicted on that vagabond People, which example Honorius following in the West, a little after publisheth such another Law against Jews having any Civil or Military employment.

The Jews grown more insolent, are punished by Edicts from the Emperours.

John Bishop of Jerusalem dies, Ergilus succeeds.

Innocent Bishop of Rome departs this life. Ordained the Sabbath or Saturday for a Fast.

83. In the twenty fourth year of the Reign of Honorius, the four hundred and sixteenth of Christ, died John Bishop of Jerusalem, after he had governed that See thirty years, into whose room Praxius was elected. And the year following was the last of Innocent Bishop of Rome, who died on the twentieth of July, after he had sat in that See fifteen years, one month and ten days. Platina telleth us in his Life, that busying himself much with things appertaining to Christian Religion, amongst other things he ordained that the Sabbath or Saturday should be a Fast, both because our Lord lay that day in the Grave, and for that his Disciples thereon fasted. This we find in a Decretal Epistle to Decentius Bishop of Eugubium going under his Name, wherein the reason for Fasting on Saturday is given, because that day and the day before were spent in sorrow and heaviness by the Apostles, who also hid themselves for fear of the Jews. As for these Decretal Epistles of his, Learned Men do very much suspect them forged, because they contain many Traditions utterly unknown to the Divines and Writers of that Age; and intire Paragraphs are found in them, which are also to be seen in the Writings both of the preceding and following Popes. The third Epistle to Exuperius makes mention of five Books of Solomon; the twenty second talks of the Episcopal Insula, which then were not in use amongst Christians. The Epistle to the Council of Carthage is silly and ridiculous; the ninety first and the ninety third amongst those of St. Augustine are esteemed no better than spurious by Erasmus. However we must own this Fasting on Saturday to have been a Custom in the Roman Church before this Decretal of Innocent, if such there were. Indeed in the Eastern Church the Sabbath or Saturday was kept as a Festival, as appears by one of the Canons going under the Name of the Apostles, and it of Apiarius and what he had confessed, they earnestly desire him, that for the time to come he would not easily admit any flying from them, nor receive any Person to Communion whom they had excommunicated. Forasmuch as he might easily perceive, that this was so defined by the Nicene Synod. They might easily reject all Priests and other Clerks which should flee from them, seeing that by Decree of no Council, there was any thing derogated from the Church of Africk, and the Decrees of Nice most manifestly leave as well inferior Clerks as Bishops to their Metropolitans, most prudently and justly providing, that all business whatsoever should be determined in the Places where they rise, the Grace of the Holy Ghost not being wanting to any Province, which thing as equitable ought to be observed by the Priests of Christ with all Constancy imaginable, especially considering that any one may freely if he find himself aggrieved, appeal either to the Synods of his own Province, or to a General Council.

agitur à Christo sacerdotibus & prudentior videatur & constantissime teneatur: maxime quia unicuique concessum est, si iudicio offensus fuerit cognoscere, ad Concilia sua Provinciae, vel etiam universale provocare.

88. They * think this they write to be Reason, except there be some who believe, that God can inspire every particular Man with a Spirit of discerning, and deny the same to an innumerable Company of Priests gathered together in Council. They demand how a transmarine Judgment can be good, whether sufficient Witnesses, either by their Age or Infirmary, or many other intervenient Accidents cannot come? And || as for him that should send any Legates, they did not find it was so ordained by any Synod. They tell him plainly, that the Canon he had sent them by Faustinus the Bishop, they could not find in the Authentick Copies of the Nicene Synod received from Cyril of Alexandria and Atticus of Constantinople, which they had heretofore transmitted to Boniface his Predecessour. They bid him send no more his Clerks called Executores, lest the smoky pride of this World should be brought into the Church of Christ, which shews all that desire to see God, the light of Simplicity and Humility. And expecting that he would not send Faustinus any more into Africk, they take their leave of him with a Prayer for his long Life, and the kind appellation of Domine Frater. Thus do the African Fathers, reason and plead with Caelestinus, with such fairness and Christian Lenity, that Baronius makes this, and that mild Course which St. Augustine takes to disswade the Bishop of Rome, an Argument of their obnoxiousness to their Jurisdiction. By this Letter it self, let the indifferent Reader judge whether the Cardinal have any Reason to affirm, that they do not deny his Authority to receive Appeals, and that their words manifestly declare they only are grieved with the manner of prosecution. Doth the Testimony they cite from the Council of Nice, I pray, respect the manner of the prosecution, or the business of Appeals themselves, and the concluding of Controversies? Doth their exception concerning the Holy Ghost's inspiration, concern the Method of Appeals, or the referring of Causes to Synods? We may without offence suppose that the Decrees of Nice, which they quote were not made concerning the manner of Appeals, but the very being of them; but it's in vain to contend with a Person resolved to say any thing.

89. If the African Bishops intended not to derogate from the Roman Right to Appeals, as he would have them, why did they make such a Canon as we find to be the twenty second of the Synod of Milenis, and the ninety second of the Council of Africk, which Gratian also has taken into his Decree, ordaining that Priests, Deacons, or others of the inferior Clerks if they find themselves aggrieved by the Judgements of their own Bishops in their Causes, might be heard by the neighbouring Bishops, who by consent of their own Prelates, being allotted them as Judges, might decide their Controversies. But if they thought fit to appeal, they should appeal to none except the African Councils, or the Primates of their Provinces. And if any thought fit to appeal to any beyond the Seas, he should be received to Communion by none in Africk. The Glo's presently puts you in mind of Gratian his Restriction of this Canon, who indeed comes in afterward with his Nisi forte. Except they appeal to the Roman See, for proof of which he then produces reason of their Sex,

* Nisi forte quisquam est qui credat, unicuique posse Deum nostrum examinis inspirare iustitiam & innumerabilibus congregatis in concilio sacerdotibus denegare.

|| Non ut aliqui tanquam à tua sanctitatis latere mittantur, nulla invenimus Patrum Synodo constitutum. Vide Can. 101. Concilii Africani.

Prudentissime enim iustitiamque, providamque, negotia, in suis locis ubi oritur, finienda: nec unicuique Provincie gratiam sancti Spiritus desiderant que seventh Canon of the Sardican Council, which giving leave to the Bishop of Rome to interpose his Authority, we have formerly mentioned. But let any Person read the Letter of the Fathers to Caelestinus, and withal consider, that about this very time this Council of Milenis was held, as Baronius himself proves, and if he judge whether all circumstances considered, Gratian's Nisi forte be of any value, and whether the Bishops intended that the See of Rome, against whose Jurisdiction they had so struggled, should be excepted. As for the Canon of the Synod of Sardica, the Cardinal to vindicate his Popes from forgery (of which some Innovators, as he calls the Centuriators, do accuse them) thinks it mistaken by them for some other of Nice, or some one of Nice put amongst those of Sardica, or because the Synod of Sardica was held to confirm the Council of Nice, it was accounted, as it were, the same with it, nay in some respects prefers it before that of Nice; for as it was equal with it in being Oecumenical, so there was in it thirty five Bishops, together with Gratus Bishop of Carthage, whereas in the Nice Council no more African Fathers are found than only one Cecilianus, whereupon he concludes that the African Bishops could not without breach of the Catholick Peace reject the Canon of the Synod of Sardica.

90. But if this be not plain shuffling, let any indifferent Person tell what is. Perhaps and perhaps the Cardinal may say now; but surely he could not think that in all these Debates and Pleadings pro and con, if they had meant this or that, found the thing here or there, upon denial that there was any such matter as the Nicene Canon, it would not have been mentioned, influenced, and thereupon Issue have been joyned. But, to see how Baronius takes and refutes, accepts and rejects, imbraces and scorns every thing, any thing, the same thing, as they make for or against his great Design, let but the Reader consider what he writes of that Council of Sardica, how he confesseth that by reason of the contrary manner of proceeding in that Council, the Resolutions and Acts thereof have been variously reported and accepted of in later times, that many things are cited as decreed by the Sardican Council contrary to the testimonies of Arhanasius; and that St. Augustine and others granting several Decrees to have been made by this Synod, yet excepting against it as Heretical and Ariian in conclusion, so great was the uncertainty and confusion, in those times themselves, amongst such as had best reason to know, in relation to this Synod, that the Cardinal writing of it is thereupon seized with admiration. Now it's not only an Oecumenical Synod, but such an one as though all Orthodox Christians in the best times were like of receiving its Decrees, yet the Africans must under pain of Schism submit themselves to its Canons and Decrees. But what if there were no such Canons made by this Synod; what if neither that of Sardica nor any other Council ever ordained any such matter about the Roman Jurisdiction, and Appeals to that See, from the time of Christ, to that of this Controversy? By the decision of that Question before an impartial unprejudiced Judge we are content to abide, and our Witnesses are those African Fathers, who if any such thing had been, they had certainly better reason to know than any of these last Ages, hear therefore their Testimony. The seventh pretended Canon of the Council of Sardica ordains, that in case of Appeal the Bishop of Rome may send a Latere his Legate or Legates to hear; and by his authority to determine with other Bishops the matter in Controversy; but the Bishops of Africk in their Letter to Caelestinus say in so many words, Ut aliqui tanquam à tua sanctitatis latere mittantur nulla invenimus Patrum Synodo constitutum: viz. that any may be sent as a Latere from your Holiness we do not find ordained in any Synod of the Fathers. They were in the words immediately preceding speaking of the inconvenience of Transmarine Judgments. But one might object though it be so inconvenient for Persons to go over Sea, yet the Bishop of Rome may send his Legates to them, to Answer which Question or rather prevent it, they come in with a Nam ut aliqui, &c. as in the foregoing words, and then protest in particular against that pretended Nicene Canon. This is sufficient to discover all the truth it self as the Cardinal's shuffling, without this reserve, that had there been any such Decree of Nice or of Sardica, it speaks not as owning any such Authority in the Roman See as formerly invested in it upon any account whatsoever; but for convenience of Tryals de novo this forged Canon erects a Tribunal for the Roman Prelate.

Who declare that the Pope hath no power given by any Synod of the Fathers to receive Appeals from or send his Legates into any part of Africk.

91. But Zozimus, that we may return and take the rest along with us, died after he had sat in the Roman See a year, four months and seven days; and was buried in the via Tiburtina, by the Body of St. Laurence. Of this Bishop two Decretal cretal Epistles are extant, one to Isychius Bishop of Salona, and another to the Clergy of Ravenna. He forbade slaves to be made Clerks, and amongst some other trifles made this Decree. Against the Ordinances of the Fathers, the Authority of this very See cannot make or change any thing. For with us Antiquity flourisheth quid, nec bus, firmly rooted, to which the Decrees of the Fathers have procured reverence. At this time quite spoil the Pope of the Council of Nice quite spoil the Pope of the so large pretended Jurisdiction. Two or three days after his Death two were chosen in his room, Eulalius the Archdeacon, and Boniface a Priest. Symmachus being at this time Prefect of the City, gave notice of the Schism to Honorius the Emperour, to whom he also signified that Eulalius was most legally chosen, and was the true and rightful Bishop of Rome. But Boniface his Friends pleaded for him on the other side, and Letters were so multiplied, that Honorius thought fit to summon them both to Ravenna on the fifteenth of January, whereas Zozimus died on the twenty sixth of December. The Emperour caused also many Bishops to meet together for decision of the Controversie, but such factions, heats and contests appeared, that it was impossible to reconcile the difference, whereupon Honorius commanded them both to forgo the City. Yet notwithstanding Eulalius attempted to celebrate the Feast of Easter (which this year fell upon the thirtieth of March) and raised such a Sedition that scarcely could be expelled by Symmachus the Prefect, whose Person had been brought into extreme danger. Symmachus sending a Relation of these things to the Emperour, he writes back to him to bring Boniface into the City, and there establish him in the Chair as the true and undoubted Roman Bishop, Eulalius being sentenced incapable of the Office by the Emperour and a Synod on the seventh of April.

Upon the death of Zozimus a dispute arose between Eulalius and Boniface for the See.

Which is decided on behalf of Boniface by the Emperours order.

92. This same year being the four hundred and nineteenth of our Saviour, many Cities and Towns of Palestine are said to have been overthrown by Earthquakes, and he himself to have appeared over Mount Olivet near to Jerusalem in a Cloud, upon sight and hearing whereof, many Pagan Nations were converted to the Truth. This year also Crispianus the Novatian Bishop died at Constantinople, after he had governed such Congregations as were subject to his discipline seven years, to whom Paul succeeded, of whom Socrates relates such an Act as he thinks worthy to be Ingraved in Marble, and to remain to all Posterity; the thing was this: A certain Jew feigning a desire to become a Christian, was often Baptized, and by that means got much Money. After he had couzened several Sects as the Arians and Macedonians, he comes to Paul, from whose Hands he beseeches him he may receive the Holy Sacrament of Baptism, who granteth his request on these conditions, that he learned the Articles of Faith, and gave himself to Fasting for many days. The Jew being constrained to Fast, called every day for Baptism, and Paul moved by his importunity, made all things ready for it, providing him a white Vestment, and causing the Font to be filled with Water. But when the Jew approached, all the Water by a secret operation was suddenly dried up; at which amazed, they yet thought it might possibly run through the hole at the bottom of the Font through which they were wont to let it goe, and therefore stopped all the holes and chinks, and poured in fresh Water; yet when the Jew was brought the second time, and hanged his Head over the Font, the Water again vanished every drop, which Paul the Bishop beholding, told the Man that he horribly dissembled, or had been unwittingly Baptized; but when upon the noise of the Miracle many flocked unto the place, one among the rest happened to know the Jew, and so the truth came to light.

A Persecution against the Christians in Persia.

93. At this time a great Persecution raged in Persia against the Christians of that Country: the occasion this. Arcadius the Emperour before his Death made Isdegerdes the Persian King, Tutor or Guardian to his Son Theodosius, which business caused many Embassies to be made to and fro, wherein on the Roman part amongst others was Maruthas a Bishop of Mesopotamia employed, by whose Piety and Industry the Villanies and Impostures of the Magi being discovered, Christian Religion was much propagated, and the King almost persuaded to become a Christian. But after his death the Friendship betwixt the Romans and that Crown was broken, and a great Persecution ensued under his Son, as Socrates writes, others say it began under Isdegerdes himself, and Vararanes, Bararanes or Gararanes his Son continued it; under whomsoever it began, the imprudent Zeal of Andas a Bishop in Persia first kindled the flame which devoured so many Martyrs. He caused to be demolished the Pyraum or Temple dedicated to Fire, which as their God was held in great reverence by that Nation, and refused to repair it though commanded by the King, who putting him to Death, gave order that Socr. l. 7. c. 8.

Is. c. 20.
Theod. l. 5. c. 28.
Diaconus Nicoph. l. 14. c. 48.

that the Churches of Christians should be demolished, and then most cruelly raged for several years against the Professours of the true Religion. Many are the kinds of Torments which the Faithfull underwent in this fiery trial. Of some they flay'd the Hands, others the Backs; from others they pulled the skin over their Ears down to their Shoulders. Some thus develt of their natural Covering they tormented by sharp Reeds stuck into their flesh. Many they shut up in pits, and put therein Rats and Mice to devour them alive, having bound them so as they could neither with their Hands or Feet defend themselves. Notwithstanding all that Devils and the Magi their Instruments could invent, yet were the Faithfull so far from being terrified, that as in the most Primitive times, they rather offered themselves and ran to meet the Crown of Martyrdom. Of these Hormisda and Saene were eminent Courtiers, together with James, who by the King's perswasion first renounced his Religion, but was again reduced by his Wife and Mother, and stoutly confessing his Faith in his Saviour, had by the angry King's order all his Limbs cut from his Body, of which the Trunk and Head only remaining; when by these Torments he could not be forced to renounce his Religion, this was at last smitten off with a Sword.

94. Marcellinus in his Chronicon fixeth the beginning of this Persecution in the ninth Consulship of Theodosius Augustus, and the third of Constantius Caesar, which Socrates will have continued for two years till the thirteenth of Honorius and the tenth of Theodosius, but Theodoret prolongeth to no less than thirty. At length certain Christians escaping out of Persia, related to the Romans the miserable and afflicted estate of the Churches, and imploring their aid and assistance, Theodosius very readily clothed with their Request, and when the Persian demanded his Fugitives, answer was made, that he was resolved to try the utmost rather than suffer his Christian Brethren to be so cruelly intreated. The Persians taking this in evil part seize as many Romans as they can, whom they condemn to the Mines, and on the Goods of Merchants contrary to all former Treaties. Theodosius therefore sends his Forces to invade them, who hired a vast number of Saracens to assist them; but the Saracens seized with a Pannick fear slew one another and fled, and the Persians being overthrown in several Engagements, those Select Troops, called Immortals, miserably perished. Theodosius though he had good advantage, and might have prosecuted the Victory, yet for the sake of the Churches made Peace, and the Persecution ceased. To the Story of this War belongs a President of Christian Charity related by Socrates, which must not be passed over in silence. The Romans having taken Prisoners above seven thousand Persians, refused to release them, and had so little care of their subsistence, that they were ready to starve with Hunger; which Acacius Bishop of Amida considering, called together his Clergy and told them, that God stood not in need of either Cups or Dishes, that therefore soasmuch as their Church had many Utensils of Gold and Silver bestowed on her by Religious and Pious Benefactors, he thought it requisite the Captive Souldiers should therewith be redeemed, and rescued from the misery of Captivity and Hunger. Having said thus much, he caused the Plate to be stamped into Money, whereof one part he sent as a Ransome, a second to relieve the Necessities of the Prisoners, and a third to bear their Charges into their own Country. The Persian King was exceedingly struck with admiration at so Noble an act, perceiving that the Christians knew how to overcome him with Engines of mercy and goodness, as well as those of Hostility, and desired to see so excellent a Person, which by the Interposition of Theodosius he obtained. And it is not to be doubted but by this Christian Office many Persians were persuaded to imbrace the Christian Religion, as also by the Journey of Acacius, who having fed them with the Bread which perisheth, no doubt would use all means to make them Partakers of that which endureth to Eternal Life; and as a Reward of his Piety and the Gift of true Wisdom, obtained long Life, (for he survived to a great Age) and also (true) Riches and Honour.

Which is stopped by the Interposition of Theodosius.

And the Charity of Acacius Bishop of Amida.

95. At the same time that this Persecution began to rage in Persia, viz. the CCCXXX year of our Lord, that great and famous Light of the Church St. Hierome departed this Life at Berlehem on the last day of September, and was there buried. Concerning his Age, which certainly was great, there is no small difference amongst Writers; some will have him to live ninety eight years, Prosper ninety one, but Baronius more probably no more than seventy eight. For Learning he rather excelled than equalled any one Father. The Books he wrote were very numerous yet not all extant as appears in several mentioned

St. Hierome dies.

Marcell.

by (a) Cassiodorus, (b) St. Augustine and (c) himself. To those that are extant (a) Iust. diu. many Supposititious have been added, which have been detected by Marianus esc. Vitorius, Erasmus, Sixtus Senensis and others. And as many have been feigned (b) De hareg. as written by him, so others as to him, amongst which are notorious those ad Quodvult- from him to Chromatius and Heliodorus, and from them to him. His Epistle to (c) Conr. Jo- branded the two Bishops concerning the Nativity of our Saviour, hath been often vin. 1.2.

His Works,

who affirmeth it a Fiction of the Valentinian and Gnostick Hereticks; yet Chri- stophorus à Castro a Spanish Jesuite in his Deipara Hystoria, undertakes the protection and defence of that impious Imposture. And both from this and the Protoevangelium Jacobi (which as Bellarmino confesseth, was never received and acknowledged in the Church, and is rejected and condemned by à Castro himself) both Lying Fabulous Legends, wherein is much stuff to be found concerning the Blessed Virgin and her Parents, Damasene, Germanns, Nicephorus, Ser- gens of Heliopolis, Andreas Hierosolymitanus, Hippolytus with other Homilians and Rhapsodists, have borrowed Materials with very poor judgment and discretion, and therewith imbellished their Legends, Histories, Homilies and Panegyrical Harangues. And after them (saith our Bishop Montague) Baronius comes in the Rere, who more than once lays his Judgment at Stake upon the Relation of such forged Fopperies, which he takes up by Retail upon their Word and Credit, without examining what authority they had to relate them.

96. But, amongst all the Works of St. Hierome, he deserved more of the Church by none than his Translations of the Holy Scriptures. For though they

In particular his Translation of the Holy Scriptures.

were translated into the Languages of (a) many Nations, yet the Fountains of these Translations had not been too pure, and so various, aswell as corrupt, were those in the Latine Tongue especially, that they could hardly be
(b) numbered, all being taken from the Greek Interpreters, not the Hebrew Text. The first Translation of this Text, as is known almost to every Man, was that of the LXXII through procurement of Ptolemy Philadelphus, called in the round Number the Septuagint, being in such esteem in the Christian Church, that (c) Epiphanius holds them for no less than Prophets, and (d) Justinian the Emperour enjoyning the Jews his Subjects to use especially the Translation of the Seventy, gives this reason, that this number of Interpreters was as it were enlightened with Divine Grace. Yet as men they sometimes stumbled, in some places adding, and in others taking away, which made the Apostles leave them often when they left the Hebrew, and to deliver the sense thereof according to the truth as the Spirit directed them. In conclusion, this Translation not containing, no not those of the Jews, Aquila a Profelyte fell in hand with a new Translation in the time of Adrian the Emperour. After him Symmachus a Sama-Vide Epiphan.
ritan an Ebionite made a third attempt. Theodotion an Ephesian and a Marcionite a fourth under Commodus. A fifth Edition was made by an uncertain Translator found in the seventh year of Antoninus Caracalla in Jericho, hidden in a Tub together with other Hebrew and Greek Books. A sixth was also made by an uncertain hand, and found as the former in Barrels at Nicopolis in the East, or the Adriatican Shoar in the Reign of Alexander Severus. These Translations coming into the hands of Origen, he took care that the Bible should be written out in this manner. To the Hebrew Text placed in one Column he adjoined another Column of Hebrew but written in Greek Letters and Characters, that it might be read by Grecians; to these two Columns he added four other, viz. those of Aquila, the Septuagint, Symmachus and Theodotion, placing that of the Septuagint in the middle, as Epiphanius thinks for its excellency, and called this Edition the Hexapla; to which afterwards adding the fifth and sixth anonymous Translations formerly mentioned, he called the second Edition the Octapla. Now from all these bad Greek, many Translations had also been made in Latine, as we said before, and so bad that it provoked Hierome to make a new one. For as the Septuagint it self was imperfect, the rest could not be exceedingly good, Aquila, Symmachus and Theodotion being Judaizing Hereticks, as he * termeth them, in particular Aquila, whose Translation was the best, and is only allowed by Iusti- nian to the Jews next after the Septuagint, of a Greek first became a Christian, then giving himself more than was meet to curious Questions of Astronomy, being

(a) Multarum gentium linguâ Scriptura ante translationem doctæ falsæ esse quæ addita sunt, &c. Hieronym. pref. in 4. Evang.

(b) Latini Interpretes nullo modo nu-merari possunt. Aug.

(c) Vide eund. de ponderibus & mensuris.

(d) Sacrorum librorum traditionem fecerunt tanquam prophetia gratia circumfulgentes, ex Novell. 46. cap. 1. ad quam vide quæ notantur per Interpr.

being cast out by the Church he betook himself to the Jews, and that he might endamage the cause of Christians endeavoured to corrupt the Translation of the Seventy, and such places of Scripture as bear manifest Testimony unto Christ.
Therefore St. Hierome set upon the Work and made a Translation out of the Fountains. For as he himself * affirmeth to Lucinius Baticus and Gratian from * Ut veterum him in his Decree, as the credit of the old Books (of the Old Testament) is to de Hebræis co- be tried by the Hebrew Volumes; so those of the New by the Greek Tongue, luminibus ex-
Of the Vulgar and other Latine Translations we shall speak in due time and aminanda est, place. ira nosorum Græci sermonormam

disiderat. Dist. 9. c. 6. Ut veterum & Hieron. ad Lucinium Baticum. Ep. 23.

97. The following year which was the 421 of our Lord, in the Consulship of Eustathius and Agricola, an Edict was published by Theodosius the Emperour directed to Philip the Præfectus Prætorio of Illyricum, for removing of Innovations, observance and vigorous Execution of the Ancient Ecclesiastical Canons through all the Provinces of that Countrey; that if any doubtful matter arose it should be determined in a Synod not without the Cognisance of the most Reverend Bishop of Constantinople, which City enjoyed the Prerogative of old Rome.

An Edict of the Emperour Theodosius, declaring the Prerogative of Constantinople.

Baronius the Champion of old Rome mightily quarrels with this Law, as publishing false Doctrine through the suggestion of Atticus the Bishop of the New, who for the advancement of his See feigned Canons so Ancient that indeed they never had any beginning. He not onely questions the being of such Canons, but denies also that by any other Authority than that of the Secular Prince, by Decrees of any Council, the City of Constantinople enjoyed the prerogative of old Rome in matters Ecclesiastical.
As to the business of Illyricum, he both affirms this See never to have had any Jurisdiction over it before this time, nor for many years after enjoyed any. But if Atticus his concern for his own See so far Transported him as to impose upon the credulity of the Emperour, the Cardinal's zeal for that of Rome, sometimes also bribes his Understanding to cast Mirrs before the Eyes of his Incautelous Readers, which he may doo at a cheaper rate than Atticus surely could in Matters of such Consequence abuse his Prince. Had any such Canons been made for the Interest of the Roman Church, he would have told us that such they were, but they are lost, for the Council of Nice doubtless made more than those twenty which are commonly ascribed to it; that the Canon of Sardica cannot be found, which, doubtless, once had a being, because several Popes did not fear to cite it to the African Fathers in behalf of their Right to receive Appeals; that an Edict of the Emperours was a thing more solemn than to be founded upon light Surmises, Lyes, and Falshood; that many things were which do not at this distance appear to us; that if no credit be to be given to Authentick Laws, there is no heed to be taken of any publick Monuments; in conclusion, that Atticus never would have dared to broach such a thing which he knew could not be concealed, but coming to the Ears must needs open the Mouths of his Amulators, especially those in Italy.

98. Whether the Cardinal tell true, when he writes, that the City of Constanti- nople at this time did not enjoy any Prerogative of Old Rome by virtue of the Canons of any Synod, let the Reader judge by what we have said at the beginning of this Chapter concerning the Constantinopolitan Council. As great heed is to be taken of what Reflexions he makes upon a business which happened the year following. Patroclus a certain Bishop by the favour and assilence of Con- stantinus the Magister Militum, with whom he was very familiar, having displaced Prosper. in Herotes a good man and Disciple of St. Martin, had thrust himself into the See Chron. Bonif. of Arles, and not therewith content had invaded the Rights of another Metropolitan, ordaining a Bishop in the Province of Narbonne. Boniface the Bishop of Rome not onely repressed this Insolency, but by Letters dated on the 28 of Janu- ary to Hilary Bishop of Narbonne, commands him to use the Right of Metropolitan, to consider what was to be done, and make Report thereof to the Apo-stlick See, ordaining that every Metropolitan should content himself with the Exercise of Jurisdiction within his own Precincts, and not thrust his Sickle into the Corn of another man. Thus the good Mother desires that her Daughter may be more wife and vertuous than her self, and the Dissolute Preacher cries, Doe as I say,

Patroclus thrusts himself into the See of Arles.
And ordains a Bishop in the Province of Narbonne.

Which is taken notice of by Boniface who preaches contrary to his own Practice.

Prosper. in Chron. Bonif.
Ep. 2.

say, but doe not as I doe. He writes this at the same time as he endeavoured by all means to intrude into the Affairs of Africk, and challenged the Privilege of Appeals upon pretence of a Nicene Canon, which the Bishops rejecting as forged, had sent to Alexandria for authentick Copies, which this same year were sent by the Patriarch of that See. As for what he ordains about the Metropolitan he tells him, he acts according to the Prescript of the Nicene Canons, the sixth indeed of that Council taking care of the Jurisdiction of the Metropolitans. Whence Baronius will persuade his Reader, that he most manifestly sees that the Nicene Council so took order for having the several Provinces subject to Metropolitans, that yet the Apostolical See as he calls it, should ius dicere or exercise Jurisdiction over all. Certainly his Reader cannot but see most manifestly that this is a mighty Consequence, let him shew where any yet soe, any such provisio or salvo is made by any true Canon of that Council. He will find it perhaps written on the back side of that other Canon concerning his Popes Jurisdiction over the African Churches. It is certainly a course so weak as any one may most manifestly discern it, to argue from pretence to true Title, from intrusion to rightful and just possession; which would have notably served the design of Patroclus. It seems because Boniface and his Fellows thrust their Suckles into the Corn of the Africans and Galls, therefore they had a Right to reap their Harvest, and in truth the one as well as the other by permission (may Ordination of the Nicene Canons.

99. The ensuing year Theodosius the Emperour set forth several Edicts against Hereticks, Jews and Pagans, yet to be seen in his own Code. As to the latter Theodoret tells us, that he commanded all footsteps of their Superstition to be removed, that nothing might remain to the observation of future times, and indeed two years after by a Rescript he forbade all Pagan Worship upon pain of Death, commanding all their Temples, Chapels and Oratories, if any remained, to be demolished and expiated, by placing there the sign of Christian Religion; which Edicts had not the wished effects, as appears from others published long after by Martianus and Valentinian, Leo and Anthemius, to be mentioned in their proper places. This same year which was the last of Honorius the Emperour, died Boniface Bishop of Rome on the 25th of October, after he had governed five years all but two Months and three Days, and was buried in the Via Salaria near the Body of St. Felicity the Martyr. Platina tells us of great matters ordained by him: viz. That a Woman or Nun should not touch the Sacred Palla or Surplice, nor the Frankincense: That no Slave or Indebted Person should be received into the Clergy. He built an Oratory in the Cemetery of St. Felicity, and adorned her Sepulchre with Marble, gave a Silver Platter of twenty Pounds, a great Cup to the value of ten, three Silver Crowns, and of the lesser sort of Chalice two. Under his Name are extant three Epistles, One to the Emperour Honorius, wherein having mightily applauded the Vertues of that Prince, he prays him to preserve the Peace of the Church of Rome against ambitious and factious Persons; to which the Emperour answered, that his pleasure was, and hereby declared it to be, that if in a Schism two chanced to be elected, neither of them should hold, but a third Person freely and Legitimately chosen. His second is directed against one Maximus a Bishop and a Manichee, accused of Impiety, Murder and Contumacy, against whom he orders the Bishops of Gall to proceed, whether he appeared or not; concluding, that whatsoever they resolved was necessarily to be confirmed by his Authority, so cunningly ambitious were the Roman Prelates at this time, that if any Church out of respect to the Dignity of their See or Ability of their Persons asked them any advice, they would presently pretend to Jurisdiction, this being their flight wherewith at first they began to lay the Yoke upon the Provinces. His third Epistle he wrote to Hilary Bishop of Narbonne, about the business whereof we have already spoken. Besides these in his Letters, the first Tome of the Councils mentions five other Constitutions. "1. That none should be ordained Priest before "he had completed thirty years of Age, how worthy soever, because Christ began not to Preach until that time. 2. Differences arising amongst Bishops should be decided by the Metropolitan, and if they would not submit to his Award, the Primate should determine the Controversie without Appeal. 3. Whatever had been Consecrated to God be it Man or Beast or any other thing, should remain in the power of Priests, the Offender against this Decree to be Excommunicated as Sacrilegious. 4. Bishops, Priests, and the like Persons, disagreeing amongst themselves, should be Excommunicated till Repen-

L. 5. c. 26.
Theod. Episc.
C. Cleric.
Judei de Pa-
ganis. l. ult.

In vita Boni-facii primi.

Tom. 1. Concil.

Boniface Bishop of Rome
dies.

His Works.

"tance, and not restored till they had spent as much more time in Penance as they had done in Quarrelling. The 5th requires, That a Bishop removed from his Bishoprick daring either to return or depart from the place to which he had been confined, should be thrust into a Monastery in some other Province.

100. In the time of this Boniface begun the Seventh Council of Carthage, as it is called, or the African Council, which it seems continued a long time, the Prelates going and coming as there was occasion. But these Carthaginian Councils are strangely confounded one with another, and probably the sixth and seventh were the same. After the death of Boniface the Roman See was vacant nine days exclusively, and then was chosen and ordained Calestinus a Campanian by Birth on the fourth of November the first Feria, being the forty fifth Bishop of Rome according to Platina, the forty first after the account of Proper, and the forty third in the Opinion of Martianus, so great certainty is there of this Succession so much talked of. Two years after on the tenth of October in the eleventh Consullship of Theodosius, and the first of Valentinian the third, Anno Dom. CCCXXXV. died succeeds him

Calestinus

Atticus Bishop of Constantinople
dies.

Atticus Bishop of Constantinople, after he had held that Chair nineteen years and seven months wanting three days. He is commended as a Wife and Religious Governour, extolled for his Bounty to the Poor, wherein he had only respect to want not to any Party, but chiefly regarded such as were ashamed to beg. Understanding that certain Novatians who differed from the rest in the keeping of Easter, had translated the Corpse of Sabbatius out of the life of Rhodes, buried it solemnly, and prayed upon his Tomb, he procured in the Night the Body to be removed to another place, which being done they ceased to pay any more honour to his Sepulchre. He was lucky in assigning Names to several things. The Rode in the Mouth of the Euxine Sea, formerly called Peyson, he named Medicine. Chrysostyle, being a Rode at the head of the Bosphorus mentioned by Strabo, Nicolaus, Damascenus and Xenophon, and assigned for payment of Tribute, in imitation of it he gave to a part of the Suburbs of Constantinople the Name of Argyropyle. Socrates magnifies the good opinion he had of Novatus, and his kindness to that Sect. He reduced into Communion the Johannites or Followers of Chrysostome, by receiving his Name into the Dyptica, and commanding his Memory to be celebrated at the time of Divine Service, as the manner was of other Holy Bishops deceased. Notwithstanding what Socrates writes of his favouring the Novatians, he is commended by St. Augustine and Proper for his Orthodox Doctrine.

Vide ejus Epist. ad Const. imperat. Episc. Nicene apud Socr. l. 7. c. 23.

Aug. contra Julian. l. 1. Prop. de Ingratis. Socr. l. 7. c. 25, 27, 28.

101. After his death there was much stir made about the Election of another Bishop, some being inclined towards Philipp, others towards Proclus, both Priests of that Church, but the generality much desiring the promotion of Sisinnius a Priest of Elaea a Church in the Suburbs over against the City, where the Citizens were wont to celebrate the Feast of our Saviour's Ascension. At length the consideration of his Piety and Charity towards the Poor prevailed, and the Laity getting the upper hand he was consecrated on the twenty eighth of February in the twelfth Consullship of Theodosius, and the second of Valentinian, which Philipp his Competitour stomaching exceedingly inveighed bitterly against it in an impetinent and confused Work he wrote against Julian the Emperour, called The Christian History. Proclus the other Competitour upon the death of the Bishop of Cyzicum, was appointed by Sisinnius to succeed him, but the People hearing of his coming elected one Dalmatius a Religious man to govern the Bishoprick, neglecting (saith Socrates) the Law and Canon which commandeth that no Bishop be appointed and ordained without the consent and authority of the Bishop of Constantinople. They made no account of that Canon, because it commanded, as they thought, that the said Authority should be given to Atticus alone. That such a Canon there was the Historian confesseth, who lived about this time; but the People the Laity it seems, which as appears in the story of Sisinnius, was most prevalent in those Elections, having little skill in the Canons of the Church applied it ignorantly to Atticus alone. Now whether any thing here concludeth, that the Bishops of Constantinople pretended not to their Jurisdiction from any Canon of an Oecumenical Council, let the Reader judge, for Baronius would gladly have him so reason. Because the People surmized that such a Canon only belonged to Atticus, he is ready to swear it, though had the Honour of Rome been concerned, the People and Laity must have been scorned and derided, as no Competent Judges in such a case. If it was made for Atticus alone he it seems was not ambitious of such a Privilege, old Canons being by the Emperour Sisinnius succeeds him, who appoints Proclus to the See of Cyzicum, but is opposed by the Laity who elect Dalmatius.

alleged,

alleged, and as the Cardinal firmizeth at his Suggestion, for his Authority over Illyricum. And if we have more reason to believe solemn Laws, than hearken unto the Prejudicate Opinions, as certainly we have, and consider what Jurisdiction was exercised by Chrysostome over the Bishops of Asia, we shall not doubt to extend it to Cyzicum and the other Cities of the Hellepont.

102. This same year St. Anguline being in the seventy second year of his Age, on the twenty sixth of September the first Feria, in the presence of his Clergy and People thereto consenting, chose Eradius one of his Priests, his Coadjutor in the Episcopal Function, and designed him his Successour. And now, turning over the Books he had written, this year and the next he wrote his Retractions, besides these, at the request of divers, he undertook pieces of several Subjections, as about the Predetermination of the Saints, the Good of Perseverance, and others, neither had he yet fully completed his Books de Civitate Dei, which the year following were brought to a period after sixteen years, being begun in the year 410. On the twenty fourth of December of the said following year A. D. 427. died Sisinnius Bishop of Constantinople, a man of simple Sanctity and holy Simplicity, as Marcellinus calls him, after he had scarcely been Bishop two years, after whose decease it seemed good to the Emperour, because of the ambition of certain Persons to chuse none of that Church (though many put in for Philipp, and not a few for Proculus) but determined with himself to send for a Stranger from Antioch. And who should this prove but Nestorius, a Man too well known Sisinnius of Constantinople dies.

Nestorius succeeds him.

afterward, born at or near Germanicia a Town of Syria, whence coming to Antioch he applied himself to study, but never had any bottom nor laid any solid foundation, contenting himself with superficial endeavours, and never applying himself to the ancient Fathers. But for his voluble Tongue and grave Demeanour he came in credit with the People, and his Name being up at Court, had the hap to be promoted to this high Dignity. Immediately after his Instalment, the Solemnity whereof was performed on the tenth day of April, and the Consulship of Felix and Taurus, A. D. CCCXXVIII. In the hearing of all the People he used such words as these to the Emperour: Give me the Earth purged of Hereticks, and I will repay thee with Heaven in lieu thereof: Assist me in foiling the Hereticks, and I will aid thee in subduing thine Enemies. Though this pleased some Orthodox Persons, yet others soon made a judgment of what he would speedily prove. The Arians he persecuted with too great violence, and the Novatians evil intreated, if we credit Socrates, for no other reason than because Paul their Bishop was in great repute for his Zeal and Piety. He much vexed and disquieted such as celebrated the Feast of Easter on the fourteenth Moon throughout Asia, Lydia and Caria. The great Zeal he pretended for the Orthodox Faith and suppressing of Hereticks was but to colour and sweeten those pernicious Doctrines which he himself intended shortly to broach.

103. About this time Germanus Bishop of Auxerre in Gall (Episcopus Autisiodorensis, or Altiadorenensis in Latin) a Diocese of Lugdunenensis IV. and subject to the Archbishop of Sens at the solicitation of the Inhabitants, as is very probable, was sent hither into Britain by the French Bishops, to withstand and eradicate (if possible) the Heresie of Pelagius, which had taken here as well as in other places too much root. This Germanus was born in the said Town of Auxerre, of Noble Parentage, and from the Schools of Gall was sent to Rome to study, where after he had furnished himself with competent skill in the Laws, he returned and practised them in his own Countrey, where he was honoured with the Magistracy of his Native place, and afterward chosen for his Successour by Amator the Bishop. Being sent on this errand into Britain, he had for Companion Lupus Bishop of Troyes sur Seine (a Bishop of the same Province) the Brother of Vincentius Liricensis, and Husband to Pimeniola the Sister of Hilary Bishop of Aries, one of such learning and sanctity, that Sidonius Apollinaris calls him a Father of Priests, a Bishop of Bishops, and another Janus of that Age; the most cried up Primipilaris of the Spiritual Camp, the Rule of Manners, a Pillar of Verne, and Prince of the Gallican Bishops. Arrived in Britain, they foiled the Pelagian Doctrines in Disputation at the Town now called St. Albans, where at this day is standing a small Chapel dedicated to the Honour of St. German. Hereby having settled the doubting, and reclaimed many whom the Pelagian Heresie had drawn aside, they converted also many Pagans to the Christian Faith, whom they baptized at the Solemnity of Easter Festival in the River Alen. Then did they turn from fighting against Satan to combat with such as were yet enslaved by him him in behalf of those they had set at liberty, their aid having been implored against the Heathenish Picts and Saxons, towards whom they led their New Converts. German chose, as a place of advantage, an hollow Dale, encompassed with Hills, near a Village called at this day Mold, by the British Guiderne in Flinshire, where (as a very Learned person tells us) the Field at this present time retains the Name of Maes Garmon, or German's Field. Germanus having placed his Men in Ambush, commanded them upon a signal given to shout Hallelujah three times, which being echoed on all sides from the hills made their Enemies believe them twice as many as they really were, with apprehension whereof their Courages fell, and without striking one stroke they betook themselves to their Heels. Of this Victory Gregory the Great makes mention in his Comment upon Job, upon these words, Can any understand the noise of his Tabernacle? Having performed all this, he is said to have deposited in the Grave of St. Alban several Reliques he had brought over with him, and taking along with him some of that Martyr's Dust, returned into Gall. Some have reported that he carried over St. Alban's Shrine Body to Rome, whence some hundred years after Otho the Second's Emperour brought it to Colen, where yet they say it lies uncorrupted. Yet the Monks of Ely have pretended to it, as also those of Ortonium or Osell in Danemark.

Germanus comes over into Britain and confounds the Pelagians.

Nynianus Venetianus a famous Churchman of Britain.

104. About this time lived Faghtinus surnamed Priscus, born in this Island of Britain, who being very learned in the Christian Doctrine was made Bishop of the Metropolitane Church of London, and preached the Gospel throughout the Island. For the clearness of his wit, the excellency of his memory, and integrity of his life he is said to have excelled all the Clergy of this Countrey, and to have written certain Pieces, of which voracious time has deprived us. And about this same time or not long after lived Nynias or Nynna, by some called Nynianus Venetianus, born of the British Blood Royal, who when young went to Rome to study, and there being instructed by the Clergy of that Church in the Christian Religion, returned into his own Countrey, and spent all his life in painful Preaching to the Britains and Picts. Beda writes, that the Southern Picts were by this most Reverend Bishop and Holy Man converted to the Faith, whose Episcopal Seat famous for the Name and Church of St. Martin the Bishop (where he with other Saints resteth) the English Nation now obtaineth in the Place, which belonging to the Province of the Bernicii, is commonly called, At White House, or Ad Candidam Casam, because he there built a Church of Stone, contrary to the British Custom. He wrote Meditations on the Psalms, a Book of Sentences of Holy Men, yet extant; the rest of his Works being lost. He is commended for his assiduity in reading the Scriptures, for his singular Charity to the Poor Fatherless and Widows. Some say he was famous for Miracles; he died in a good Old Age. That we may joyn these matters of Britain together, we shall here tell the Reader that Germanus had not been long in his own Countrey when the Pelagian root of Heresie again beginning to repullulate, the Pious and Orthodox Clergy again desired his return to them, who would not be wanting to so good a work, but crossed the Seas again in company of Severus the Scholar of Lupus, who Preached to the Inhabitants of Germania Prima, and was ordained Bishop of Triers. Having repressed the Insolence of the Hereticks, and wrought a Miracle (as Beda tells us) upon the Lame Son of Elysius, he returned into Gall and died not long after.

Palladius Preaches the Gospel to the Scots.

Servanus to the Orchades.

105. After the first Journey of Germanus into Britain, the Year of our Lord CCCXXIX. was Palladius a Deacon of the Roman Church sent by Celestine Bishop of Rome to Preach the Gospel to the Scots, who prospering so much in his work that this Nation began to shake off that Pagan and Idolatrous Superstition where-with it had formerly been blinded; he had the Honour to be called the Apostle of the Scots. He strenuously also opposed Pelagianism in the Island, against which he wrote a Book, besides other Works. Assistant to him in this Pious Work was Servanus, born in Scotland of Scottish Parents, who was afterward sent to Preach the Gospel to the Orchades, of whom he was also called the Apostle. Now he being born of Scottish Parents, the Reader must know that many of that Nation had long before this embraced the Christian Faith, the Gospel having been preached and received there in the time of Victor Bishop of Rome. Whilst the Gospel thus flourished in the Northern Parts, and the errors of Pelagius met with such as discovered their rottenness and danger, the Devil was ready to begin another assault upon the Church, and had already furnished himself with a fresh Champion, for Nestorius by this time, warm in his Patriarchal See, began now to vent those Doctrines which for want of fit advantages he had hitherto concealed.

Being

mon Tenent of the Roman Schools. Amongst the Books which he wrote himself, there is one which is not to be read without caution; and that is his Book de ordine, from the Authority of which some Romanists will prove Stews to be tolerated in a Christian State. But when Augustine wrote that Book as our Jewel observes, he was not St. Augustine. He was yet a very young Man, and but a Novice in the Faith, not yet well instructed, not yet baptized in the Name of Christ, himself as yet keeping a Concubine, and living in Whoredom. What matter then if he say in it, take Harlots away from among Men, and ye fill all the Countrey with Ribaldry and Villany. Afterwards fully instructed, Christened and grown older and wiser, he was of another mind as appears from a place in his Book De Civitate Dei, * which Work he finished but four years before his Death. As all his Works are large Testimonies of his Learning, Ingenuity and Piety, so that of his Retractions of his Candour and Humility in an especial manner, wherein of his own accord he confesseth and revoketh his former slips, faults and errors. Long before him Hippocrates had done the same. After him Cardan and many other great Persons, yet few in comparison of those, who rather against their Consciences plead for, than own and retract their Errors. The Example of those Worthies, every one knows, every one commends rather than Opiniastrity; but when it comes to the effect not many practise. The day of the Death of St. Augustine, and the Anniversary appointed to be observed to his Memory, was the 28th. of August.

* L. 14. c. 18.
Ipsam in ipso Socratorum terrena civitate licitam facit turpitudinem.

CHAP. VI.

From the third Oecumenical Council summoned by Theodosius the Second to the City of Ephesus, to the fourth Oecumenical Council summoned by the Emperor Martianus to the City of Chalcedon.

The Space of Twenty Years and about Four Months.

THE third Oecumenical Council summoned by Theodosius the Second to the City of Ephesus, assembled at Whitfontide or Pentecost, in the 24 year of the Reign of that Emperor, the 7 of Valentinian the Third, his Colleague, of Old Rome the 1184, of the New 101, the third year of the 302 Olympiad, the 14 Indiction, 107 years after the first Nicene Synod, 50 after the second Oecumenical Council summoned to Constantinople, A.D. 431 Anicetus Bassus and Flavius Antiochus being Consuls.

2. In obedience to the Imperial-Edict, the Bishops assembled from their several Churches. Nestorius with a great Multitude of People, took his Journey presently after the Easter Holy-days. Cyril the Patriarch of Alexandria came to Ephesus about Whitfontide; and the fifth Day after Pentecost, Juvenalis Bishop of Jerusalem. These with others coming in good time, staid for John the Patriarch of Antioch, who with his suffragan Bishops loitered out of design, lest he should be compelled either to condemn Nestorius, or with him to undergo the same censure; after fifteen Days expectation, the Metropolitans that were with him came to Ephesus, and signified to the Fathers, that his presence was not to be expected. Above two hundred Bishops are said to have convened, and all as well Occidentals as Orientals, either themselves or by their Legates, to have been present at this Assembly. Yet the Prelates of Africa, hindered by the dreadful devastation made at this time by the Wandals, could not be there; neither were in any Socrates lib. 7.

cap. 32.
Acta Concilii.

any Capacity to send any considerable Legation: onely Capreolus Primate of Carthage, doing asmuch as in him lay, sent Bassulus a Deacon of his Church with Letters of excuse to the Synod. Very many Bishops indeed were personally absent, and present onely by their Legates or Agents, as almost all the Western Bishops, and by Name Caelestinus Patriarch of Rome, whose Legates came not till the 10th. of July, and the Council had done most of their Work. Some its probable upon other occasions neglected this business, as the Bishops of Gangra and Heraclius in Macedonia, who were not at this Synod. Divers others wilfully and obstinately refused to be present at this Holy Synod, as Nestorius himself the Patriarch of Constantinople, John Patriarch of Antioch and some forty Bishops, who at the same time while the Holy Council was held in the Church of the Blessed Virgin at Ephesus, held a Conventicle by themselves in an Inn in the same City, as we shall see hereafter. Yet, notwithstanding the personal absence of the first, the negligent of the second, and willful absence of the last, and although no Prefbyters at all were therein, not in their own right, this Holy General Council faith of its Synodical Judgment given by those that were present, that it was nothing else but * the common and consenting Judgment of the whole World. For the Council was lawfully called, all were summoned universally, it was free for all to be present, and therefore all the Bishops in the World did either personally, by their Agents express, or else in a tacit and implicit manner, wrap up their Judgment in the synodical Decree made by the Bishops present in the Council, of which Cyril was Patron or chief, as well after as before the coming of Caelestinus his Legates to the Synod.

Wherein Cyril Bishop of Alexandria
presides.

* Nihil aliud quam communis et consensu universarum orbis episcoporum Epist. Concil.
Epist. ad Imp.
Tom. 2. Act.
Conc. Episcop.
Ep. 17.
Tom. 1. Act.
Conc. Episcop.
cap. 22.
Ut diligenter prospiciat.

3. For prevention of Tumults the Emperor sent thither Candidianus a Count, and to keep disorderly Persons from the Council, to see that no dissention and private Quarrels might hinder their grave Consultations, with the free and exact discussion of the Causes propoed, and to provide, that every one might freely and with leisure propound what was needfull, and to have scope to refute all doubts propoed by others. At the first opening of the Synod Nestorius was present, whom Cyril when they came to fall upon the business in hand, did vehemently tax, and with other Bishops contended earnestly for Christ's Divinity, affirming him one and the same Son of God, begotten of his Father before all Ages, and in the last times made Man of a Virgin, that he was not one and another, and that the Blessed Virgin ought properly and truly to be called Ourthe, or the Mother of God. Hereat Nestorius rose up, told them plainly he would not own a God, that grew to Man's Estate by two and three Months and so forth, and that therefore he wailed his Hands of their Bloud, and thenceforth would come no more into their Company. With six other Bishops he streight departed out of the Assembly, and kept himself afterward private with those Men and others, he thought fit for his purpose. And when the Day after, three Bishops were sent by the Council to cite him to appear, and he was called once and again afterward, yet he flatly refused to come to them, using the Messengers contumeliously, and frightening them by the armed Guards he had got about him by his great Interest in Irenaeus a Count he had brought with him, and Candidianus, both whom he had infected with his Heresie. The Synod perceiving how contumaciously he bore himself, resolved to proceed to the Merits of the Cause. They caused to be read the Nicene Faith, the Epistles of Cyril and Nestorius, written upon the Controversie, with another sent from Caelestinus the Roman Patriarch. Theodorus Bishop of Ancyra and Acacius of Melita, deposed on the blasphemous words they had heard him utter publicly at Ephesus. Other Speeches were alledged, the Testimonies of Scriptures and Fathers for Incarnation of the word, and the Divinity of Christ were cited, all which being done after advised and mature deliberation, the Fathers thereto compelled by the Canons, and an Epistle received from the most Holy Father, and their Colleague the Bishop of the Roman Church, with many Tears they came to this Resolution and sentence. He who by him therefore hath been blasphemed, our Lord Jesus Christ hath decreed by the present Holy Synod, that Nestorius be deposed from his Episcopal Dignity, and banished from all Society of Priests.

And Nestorius Bishop of Constantinople is deposed and banished from the Society of Priests.

He with other Heresical Bishops joins in a Conventicle at Ephesus.

4. After the Condemnation of Nestorius, about four or five Days, on the 27 of June, came John the Patriarch of Antioch to Ephesus, with a Company of Bishops and Priests, and railing against Cyril for making such haste in censuring Nestorius, immediately associated himself with him and his Partisans. Now at the self same time in one and the same City of Ephesus, as one observes were held two several Councils, and Altar erected against Altar, Council against Council,

Dr. Cracken's ibid.
Patri.

Patriarch against Patriarch, Bishops against Bishops, and Synodal sentence against Synodal sentence. The one consisted of Holy, Orthodox, and Catholic Bishops, whose President was Cyril: the other of Heretical, Faction, and several

(a) deposed Bishops whose President was John. The former was held in the Church of the Blessed Virgin, the latter in an (b) Inn or Tavern, a fit place for such a denied Christ to be God. The former proceeded in all respects orderly and synodically, the latter did all things tumultuously, presumptuously, and against the Canons, supporting themselves by Lies, Calumnies and Slanders. In sum the one was truly an holy, a general, an Oecumenical Council, wherein was the Consent of the whole Catholic Church, the other was nothing else but an heretical, schismatical Conventicle, a Faction or Conspiracy of some thirty or forty Persons unworthy the Name of Bishops, insolently opposing the Holy Council, and the whole Catholic Church, in which Number and Faction besides others, were John Bishop of Antioch, the Ring-leader of the Rout, Paul Bishop of Emesa, Theodoret the Bishop of Cyrrus, and Ibas some three or four years after Bishop of Edessa.

Opposing the Canonical Syn-
nod.

And anathematizing them.

Sending their Calumnies to the Emperours.

Who being misinformed order that whatever was done against Nestorius should be utterly void.

5. This notwithstanding, as the Holy Council deposed Nestorius for an Heretic, the Conventicle deposed Cyril for an Archheretic also, condemning his twelve Chapters as Heretical, which the Council had approved as Orthodox. As the Council excommunicated and anathematized John, Paul, Theodoret, Ibas, and all the rest of their Faction, the Conventicle anathematized Cyril and all his Adherents, arrogating to themselves the glorious Name of the Holy Ephesine Council, and slandering them that held with Cyril as a Conventicle, an unawful and disorderly Assembly, terming them Arians, Apollinarians and Cyrrillians, as well as those with Cyril called themselves, as indeed they were the Holy and Oecumenical Council, and termed John, with his Adherents a Faction and heretical Conventicle of Nestorians. In fine, as the Council constantly refused to communicate with them, till they consented to the deposing of Nestorius, and anathematizing his Heresie, the Conventicle not onely refused Communion with Cyril and other Catholics, but bound themselves by many solemn Oaths, and that afterward in the presence of the Emperour, that they would never communicate with the Cyrrillians, except they would condemn the twelve Chapters of Cyril, adding that they would rather die than consent to any one of the twelve Chapters. But though the Fathers of the true and genuine Council, wrote their Encyclical Epistle to all Christians, and continually upon urgent occasion humbly informed the Emperours of their proceedings, sending Letters after Letters, yet either were the Messengers stoppt or their Letters intercepted, so that not the least notice of them came to their Majesties, whereas on the other side the frequent Letters of the Conventicle fraught with Lies and Slanders, had every day access and great applause at Court; for Count Candidianus, whom the Emperours made their Deputy and President of the Council, to see all good and Canonical Orders therein observed, so far was faulty to his trust, as being most partial to Nestorius and his Heresie, he not onely was Privy and assistant to the stopping of the Councils Letters, but by his own dispatches, seconded and confirmed all the Lies which the Conventicle had writ unto the Emperours. Hence it came to pass that the Emperours misinformed, commanded all things done against Nestorius and others, as done against Reason and their Command to be revoked, and a new Course taken, telling them that their Majesty could not hold or esteem those things done so disorderly for firm and synodical, nay decreeing, that all thitherto done should be accounted of no force, but utterly void and frustrate.

6. By this means also it came to pass, that the Emperours knowing nothing of the Divisions amongst the Bishops, and how beside the Holy Council there was a factious and schismatical Conventicle of Nestorians held in the City, thought whatever was done against Cyril and Mennon in deposing them, as against Nestorius, had been the Act, Judgment and Sentence of one and the same Council, upon which misinformation they confirmed at first the condemnation of all three. This put the Fathers upon such a shift as this, to send a Letter to Constantinople by a faithful Messenger, who to avoid suspicion put on the Habit of a Beggar, and carried the Letter in the hollow of a Cane, which as a staff he had provided for his Journey. As soon as, by this means the Report of the late disorders came to Constantinople, the City was much moved, and Theodosius at the solicitation of his Sister and other Catholics, commanded certain Bishops of either

(a) *Ex quibus alii erant extorres va-gi propriis sedibus destituiti, Sc. Synod.
Epist. ad Calesium. Tom. 4. Act. Epist.
Cap. 17.*

(b) John in diversis manente, se-crarie illius Synodo presente.

Acta Concilii.

*Majestas nos-
tra ea que actationis privatis & legiti-mis habere non posset, pro ir-ritis & nullis
habenda esse.
Imp. ad Synod.
cap. 17.
Et Nestorii & Cyrilli & Mennonis ex-communicationem & Synodice scripta nobis instructam calculo nostro approbavimus.*

But after a full understanding how matters
went the Emperours null the Acts of the Conventicle,
and add Banishment to the deposing of Nestorius.

Several other Canons.

ther side to appear before him at Constantinople, fully to inform him of the truth of all the proceedings; and the truth being accordingly found out after diligent Examination, the Emperours by their Imperial Authority nullled all the Acts of the Conventicle, restored Cyril (who at this time wrote a full answer to all that had been objected against him) and Mennon, approved the judgment of the Council against Nestorius, adding to his deposition banishment from Constantinople. But the synodal Sentence of deposition against John, and the rest of his Associates they suspended for a while, partly to prevent a greater Schism, which John by his great interest might procure, but especially in hope that as well he as the Eastern Bishops might in time be brought off, and reduced to Unity with Cyril and the Catholic Church, which in the height of their present heat and stomach could not be expected. And thus was the Council at Ephesus dissolved, a far greater Rent being by this means left at the end, than had been at the beginning thereof, and so that Malady for which it was called not presently cured but increased. Nestorius was permitted to stay as yet in the Monastery of St. Euprepus at Antioch, to see if he would recant his opinions, but growing more obstinate, was at length after some three or four years banished into the Wilderness of Oasis. The Emperour also animadverted upon his Courtiers who had been false to their trust, and done so ill Offices for the Ephesine Fa-thers.

Evagri. l. i. c. 7.

7. But besides what these Fathers did directly against Nestorianism we must not omit certain Canons of this Synod of Ephesus, mentioned after a Preface, wherein they signify, that being called together by the Emperour's Edict, above thirty of their Number had separated themselves in behalf of Nestorius, and therefore remained excommunicated and deposed. Then follow seven Canons of which this is the Summ, that if any Metropolitan Bishop or Clerk embraced the Heresie of Nestorius or Calestius, he should be excommunicated and degraded; if a Lay-person he should be excommunicated; And the same to extend against such as produced, wrote or composed any form of Faith, besides that of the Nicene Council; As also such Persons as should appear of Charisius his opinion who thought not aright of the Humanity of Christ. The eighth Canon was made upon occasion, that the Patriarch of Antioch, took upon him to ordain in the Churches of Cyrrus, which thing being an innovation contrary to Ecclesiastical Constitutions, and the Canons of Holy Fathers, and for that Epidemical Diseases require a greater Remedy, because they are more dangerous than others, therefore the Fathers decree that it be taken for a Rule in all Dioceses and Provinces whatsoever, that no Bishop invade or occupy any Province, which and from the beginning hath not been under his Jurisdiction or that of his Predecessors. If any hath already invaded any such Province and by force made it his own, the Holy Synod commands he do restore it, lest the Canons of the Holy Fathers be neglected, and lest under pretence of Administration of Holy things, the Arrogance of secular Power creep in, and by degrees we imprudently lose that Liberty which our Lord Jesus Christ the Saviour of all Men, by the price of his own Blood hath bestowed upon us. Therefore it pleaseth the Holy Synod, that the Rights of every Province, which according to the Ancient Customs it hath had from the beginning, be preserved to it pure and inviolable, every Metropolitan having liberty to take Copies of those Acts for his Security. And if any Person shall produce any Sanction contrary to what is here defined, it is the pleasure of all the holy and universal Synod, that it be void and of none effect. That this Canon was made tacitely against the Incroachments of the Roman Patriarch, some do gather not obscurely from the Acts of this Synod. Council, it evidently from them appearing, that this Canon prevailed and was of force, notwithstanding the Epistle of Innocent the First to Alexander, whereby he declared that the Cyrrians did not carry themselves like faithful Men, except they subjected themselves to the Patriarch of Antioch. Yet we see this Canon of this Oecumenical Council, is quite contrary to the Sentence of the Roman Bishop, for it decrees that attempt to have been made upon Cyrrus by him of Antioch, against Ecclesiastical Constitutions and Decrees of the Fathers, and therefore all Sanctions or Epistles in this Case to be utterly null. But besides those Canons (that we may conclude with this Synod) the Fathers made another Constitution against the Massalian Heretics, Euchyta and Enthusiasts (having in the ninth Session condemned the Pelagians) and anathematized a Book of those Heretics, going under the Name of Ascticon, which some think near a-kine to the Alcetica, reckoned amongst the Works of Basil.

Tom. 2. Epist. of this Synod. append.
1. c. 4. Ep. 18.

Patriarch against Patriarch, Bishops against Bishops, and Synodal sentence against Synodal sentence. The one consisted of Holy, Orthodox, and Catholic Bishops, whose President was Cyril: the other of Heretical, Factious, and several

(a) deposed Bishops whose President was John. The former was held in the Church of the Blessed Virgin, the latter in an (b) Inn or Tavern, a fit place for such as denied Christ to be God. The former proceeded in all respects orderly and synodically, the latter did all things tumultuously, presumptuously, and against the Canons, supporting themselves by Lies, Calumnies and Slanders. In sum the one was truly an holy, a general, an Oecumenical Council, wherein was the Consent of the whole Catholic Church, the other was nothing else but an heretical, schismatical Conventicle, a Faction or Conspiracy of some thirty or forty Persons unworthy the Name of Bishops, infolently opposing the Holy Council, and the whole Catholic Church, in which Number and Faction besides others, were John Bishop of Antioch, the Ring-leader of the Rout, Paul Bishop of Emesa, Theodoret the Bishop of Cyrrus, and Ibas some three or four years after Bishop of Edeffa.

Opposing the Canonical Syn-
nod.

And anathema-
tizing them.

5. This notwithstanding, as the Holy Council deposed Nestorius for an Heretic, the Conventicle deposed Cyril for an Archheretic also, condemning his twelve Chapters as Heretical, which the Council had approved as Orthodox. As the Council excommunicated and anathematized John, Paul, Theodoret, Ibas, and all the rest of their Factious Adherents, the Conventicle anathematized Cyril and all his Adherents, arrogating to themselves the glorious Name of the Holy Ephesine Council, and slandering them that held with Cyril as a Conventicle, an unlawfull and disorderly Assembly, terming them Arians, Apollinarians and Cyrrillians, as well as those with Cyril called themselves, as indeed they were the Holy and Oecumenical Council, and termed John, with his Adherents a Faction and heretical Conventicle of Nestorians. In fine, as the Council constantly refused to communicate with them, till they consented to the deposing of Nestorius, and anathematizing his Heresie, the Conventicle not onely refused Communion with Cyril and other Catholics, but bound themselves by many solemn Oaths, and that afterward in the presence of the Emperour, that they would never communicate with the Cyrrillians, except they would condemn the twelve Chapters of Cyril, adding that they would rather die than consent to any one of the twelve Chapters. But though the Fathers of the true and genuine Council, wrote their Encyclical Epistle to all Christians, and continually upon urgent occasion humbly informed the Emperours of their proceedings, sending Letters after Letters, yet either were the Messengers stoppt or their Letters intercepted, so that not the least notice of them came to their Majesties, whereas on the other side the frequent Letters of the Conventicle fraught with Lies and Slanders, had every day access and great applause at Court; for Count Candidianus, whom the Emperours made their Deputy and President of the Council, to see all good and Canonical Orders therein observed, so far was faulty to his trust, as being most partial to Nestorius and his Heresie, he not onely was Privy and assistant to the stopping of the Councils Letters, but by his own dispatches, seconded and confirmed all the Lies which the Conventicle had writ unto the Emperours. Hence it came to pass that the Emperours misinformed, commanded all things done against Nestorius and others, as done against Reason and their Command to be revoked, and a new Course taken, telling them that their Majesty could not hold or esteem those things done so disorderly for firm and synodical, nay decreeing, that all thitherto done should be accounted of no force, but utterly void and frustrate.

Sending their
misinformed
order to the Emperours.

Who being misinformed order that whatever was done against Nestorius
should be utterly void.

6. By this means also it came to pass, that the Emperours knowing nothing of the Divisions amongst the Bishops, and how beside the Holy Council there was a factious and schismatical Conventicle of Nestorians held in the City, thought whatever was done as well against Cyril and Memnon in deposing them, as against Nestorius, had been the Act, Judgment and Sentence of one and the same Council, upon which misinformation they confirmed at first the condemnation of all three. This put the Fathers upon such a shift as this, to send a Letter to Constantinople by a faithful Messenger, who to avoid suspicion put on the Habit of a Beggar, and carried the Letter in the hollow of a Cane, which as a staff he had provided for his Journey. As soon as, by this means the Report of the late disorders came to Constantinople, the City was much moved, and Theodosius at the solicitation of his Sister and other Catholics, commanded certain Bishops of ei-

(a) Ex quibus alii erant extores va-gi propriis sedibus destituiti, Sc. Smo.
Epist. ad Calistum. Tom. 4. Act. Epist.
Cap. 17.
(b) Johanne in diversis manente, se-cræque illius Synodo presente.

Acta Concilii.

Majestas nos-
tra ea que ac-tasunt pro va-riis & legiti-mis laboribus non pesset, pro ir-ritis & nullis
habenda esse.
Imp. ad Synod.
cap. 17.
Et Nestorius & Cyrilli & Memnoni ex-communicationem & Sententiam vestra nobis transmissam calculis vestris approbavimus.

Several other Canons.

But after a full understanding how matters
went the Emperours null the Acts of this Conventicle,
and add Banishment to the deposing
of Nestorius.

ther side to appear before him at Constantinople, fully to inform him of the truth of all the proceedings; and the truth being accordingly found out after diligent Examination, the Emperours by their Imperial Authority nullled all the Acts of the Conventicle, restored Cyril (who at this time wrote a full answer to all that had been objected against him) and Memnon, approved the Judgment of the Council against Nestorius, adding to his deposition banishment from Constantinople. But the synodal Sentence of deposition against John, and the rest of his Associates they suspended for a while, partly to prevent a greater Schism, which John by his great interest might procure, but especially in hope that as well he as the Eastern Bishops might in time be brought off, and reduced to Unity with Cyril and the Catholic Church, which in the height of their present heat and stomach could not be expected. And thus was the Council at Ephesus dissolved, a far greater Rent being by this means left at the end, than had been at the beginning thereof, and so that Malady for which it was called not presently cured but increased. Nestorius was permitted to stay as yet in the Monastery of St. Euprepus at Antioch, to see if he would recant his opinions, but growing more obstinate, was at length after some three or four years banished into the Wilderness of Oasis. The Emperour also animadverted upon his Courtiers who had been false to their trust, and done so ill Offices for the Ephesine Fathers.

Evagri. l. i. c. 7.

7. But besides what these Fathers did directly against Nestorianism we must not omit certain Canons of this Synod of Ephesus, mentioned after a Preface, wherein they signify, that being called together by the Emperour's Edict, above thirty of their Number had separated themselves in behalf of Nestorius, and therefore remained excommunicated and deposed. Then follow seven Canons of which this is the Summ, that if any Metropolitan Bishop or Clerk embraced the Heresie of Nestorius or Caelestius, he should be excommunicated and degraded; if a Lay-person he should be excommunicated; And the same to extend against such as produced, wrote or composed any form of Faith, besides that of the Nicene Council; As also such Persons as should appear of Charisius his opinion who thought not right of the Humanity of Christ. The eighth Canon was made upon occasion, that the Patriarch of Antioch, took upon him to ordain in the Churches of Cyprus, which thing being an innovation contrary to Ecclesiastical Constitutions, and the Canons of Holy Fathers, and for that Epidemical Diseases require a greater Remedy, because they are more dangerous than others, therefore the Fathers decree that it be taken for a Rule in all Dioceses and Provinces whatsoever, that no Bishop invade or occupy any Province, which and from the beginning hath not been under his Jurisdiction or that of his Predecessors. If any hath already invaded any such Province and by force made it his own, the Holy Synod commands he do restore it, lest the Canons of the Holy Fathers be neglected, and left under pretence of Administration of Holy things, the Arrogance of secular Power creep in, and by degrees we imprudently lose that Liberty which our Lord Jesus Christ the Saviour of all Men, by the price of his own Blood hath bestowed upon us. Therefore it pleaseth the Holy Synod, that the Rights of every Province, which according to the Ancient Custome it hath had from the beginning, be preferred to it pure and inviolable, every Metropolitan having liberty to take Copies of those Acts for his Security. And if any Person shall produce any Sanction contrary to what is here defined, it is the pleasure of all the holy and universal Synod, that it be void and of none effect. That this Canon was made tacitely against the Incroachments of the Roman Patriarch, some do gather not obscurely from the Acts of this Synod. Council, it evidently from them appearing, that this Canon prevailed and was of force, notwithstanding the Epistle of Immacent the First to Alexander, whereby he declared that the Cyprians did not carry themselves like faithful Men, except they subjected themselves to the Patriarch of Antioch. Yet we see this Canon of this Oecumenical Council, is quite contrary to the Sentence of the Roman Bishop, for it decrees that attempt to have been made upon Cyprus by him of Antioch, against Ecclesiastical Constitutions and Decrees of the Fathers, and therefore all Sanctions or Epistles in this Case to be utterly null. But besides those Canons (that we may conclude with this Synod) the Fathers made another Constitution against the Masalian Heretics, Euchytes and Enthusiasts (having in the ninth Session condemned the Pelagians) and anathematized a Book of those Heretics, going under the Name of Ascticon, which some think near a-kin to the Asctica, reckoned amongst the Works of Basil.

Tom. 2. Epist. of the Synod. append.
l. c. 4. Ep. 18.

8. Nestorius being deposed by the Council, that Decree was ratified (a) and established by the Emperour, as well as other matters according (b) to his Promise and their Petition, whereby they (c) earnestly desired his Piety, that he would command that all which was done by this Holy and Oecumenical Council against that Heretick, might stand in force being confirmed by his Royal Assent. For in their proceedings, the Emperour's (d) Letters were their Direction, and as they themselves profess, a Torch to all their Actions, and in all the Affronts and Contumelies they endured from the Conventicle, they betook themselves to him, beseeching him to be Judge betwixt them, and examine their doings. The See of Constantinople being therefore void, there (e) arose a difference about the Election of a new Bishop. Proclus had in all probability been the Man, but that some in power were his back friends, and pretended that the Canons of the Church forbade any Bishop to be translated from one See to another, which though either ignorantly or maliciously spoken (the Canons for the better Edification of the Church allowing it, and many Examples of these ancient times approving it) yet was of such force, that the People was therewith satisfied and appeased. Maximianus then, three Months after the Deposition of Nestorius was chosen Patriarch, by function a Priest, who led a Monastical Life, one that of late had purchased a good Name by building at his own Charge Sepulchres, where Godly Men should be interred, but altogether unlearned, and who had determined to lead a quiet Life, free from all Care and Molestation. Thus was the Place of Nestorius filled, but the rent and division he had made in the Eastern parts of the World, not yet made up and conjoined. This disturbance of the Church, much disquieted the mind of the Religious Emperour Theodosius, who the very next year after the shutting up of the Council, when he thought time and better consideration, to have allayed the heat of the Eastern Bishops, began to sollicite that Union which before he had purposed to effect, professing his resolution to be not to desist from this so good a Work, till God should vouchsafe to restore Unity and Peace to his People. To this end he wrote a very religious and pathetic Letter to John Patriarch of Antioch, by many reasons perswading, and by his Imperial Authority requiring him, and with him the rest of the faction to subscribe to the deposition of Nestorius, the anathematizing of his Heresie, and so to imbrace Holy Communion with Cyril, and the Catholick Church.

Maximianus chosen Patriarch of Constantinople, in the room of Nestorius.

Union in the Church promoted by the Emperour Theodosius.

9. John and the other Eastern Bishops, upon the Emperour's motion sought to make an Union with Cyril, but laboured to effect it by drawing him over to them, and their Heresies, not by passing over to him, and closing with him according to the Decrees of the late Council. They caused Acatius, Bishop of Berwa, to write to him in all their Names, offering Unity and Concord, but on this condition that he should abolish and condemn whatever he had written against Nestorianism, and consequently both his twelve Chapters, the Ephefine Decree, and all of that nature. Cyril answered with Resolution and Courage, that what he had written was in defence of the Catholick Faith, and therefore he should never recant it, so that this Art failing they attempted to effect the Union by Paul Bishop of Emisa, whom they sent to Alexandria to agitate by word of Mouth, and another Letter, wherein though they were not so violent as in the former, yet they found fault with the Ephefine Council. Cyril seeing they added as he said Contumelies, who should have asked pardon and recanted, would neither admit of their second Epistle, but when Paul earnestly endeavoured to excuse them, affirming upon his Oath, that their purpose was not to exasperate, but close with him in Charity, he was content to admit this excuse, Paul having in Commission to work him off as much as could be, but however to make an Agreement with him consented to anathematize Nestorius and his Heresies, to the deposing of him and the Election of Maximianus into his place, which when he had subscribed with his own hand, Cyril received him into Communion. Now he would have perswaded Cyril, that seeing he came in the name of the rest, and had subscribed for them all, and as in the common Person of all the Orientals, that this his subscription might serve for those that were absent, and that requiring no more of them, he would be content with their Letters he brought with him. Cyril would by no means hear of this, telling Paul his subscription could satisfy only for himself, as for the rest,

(a) Imperator sententia Synodi publice approbata, Nestorius exilium indicit. Act. Conc. Tom. 5. cap. 11. & C. Th. de Hæret. lib. ult.

(b) Actum demum à nostra Pietate confirmationem expectate. Tom. 3. c. 17.

(c) Urjubat ea omnia per vestre pietatis nutum & confirmationem confirmata. Act. Conc. Epist. Tom. 4. c. 8.

(d) Erimo unumquemque Alarum monumentis reverendis pietatis vestre literas quasi faciem quandam præsumimus. Ep. Synod. ad Imp. Tom. 2. Act. Conc. Epist. c. 22.

(e) Socrat. l. 7. c. 34. lat. vel 35. gr.

Ep. Imp. ad Acatium Episcopum Berwæ. Johanni patriarchæ Antiochæ, &c.

Ep. Cyrilli ad Acatium & Dignatium. Tom. 5. cap. 16.

rest they must personally and for themselves subscribe before they could be received into Communion. Hereupon he wrote an orthodox Confession of Faith to the same effect as Paul had subscribed, and sent it to John, requiring his personal subscription to it.

10. Paul returning to Antioch, brought this resolute Answer of Cyril to John and his Bishops there assembled in Synod, who perceiving there was no other way to make an Union, and that Paul had both subscribed himself, and promised for them that they should do the like, at length yielded to all Cyril's Demands, and for an assurance of their sincerity herein, wrote a Synodal and Encyclical Epistle to Cyril, which they likewise sent to Sixtus Bishop of Rome (for Cælestine was at this time dead) to Maximianus and other Principal Bishops, wherein having first made a sound and orthodox confession of their Faith, they give their willing assent and subscription to the deposing of Nestorius, and anathematizing of his Heresies. This Letter they prevailed with Paul to carry and make a second Journey to Alexandria, to conclude a final Peace and Union. At whose coming thither this second time, and bringing with him the undoubted testimony of the orthodox belief of John, and the chief of the Eastern Bishops, and that they had now done all which the Emperour and Cyril had required, they were welcomly received, and the union being perfectly concluded, Peace was restored to the Church. In token whereof Paul preached at Alexandria in December, and made before Cyril and all the People to orthodox a Profession of his Faith, that his Auditours for joy interrupting him four or five times, cried out Orthodox Paul thou art welcome to us; Cyril is Orthodox, Paul is Orthodox. And in Congratulation with John the Antiochian Patriarch and the rest, Cyril wrote a notable Epistle, which begins, Let the Heavens rejoice, and let the Earth be glad: and publishing this as an Hymn of Joy and Thanksgiving for the Union so happily effected, sung, Glory to God, and peace amongst Men. This is the sum of the whole proceedings betwixt Cyril and the Eastern Bishops, touching the matter of the union, as to any one who consults the Epistles of Cyril to Acatius Bishop of Melitene, to Dynatus and John, and compares them with the Epistle of John, and that of the Synod of Antioch sent to Cyril and Xistus, will clearly perceive. Yet so impudent were the Nestorians as to slander Cyril to have at the time of the union consented in all points to them and their Heresie, and to have condemned his former Doctrine with the Ephefine Council. For knowing that John and the Eastern Bishops had written to Cyril so resolutely, that unless he condemned his own Chapters they would not consent to any Peace or Union; and seeing that Cyril afterwards and in the same year consented with John, and made an union with him; thereupon they took occasion to boast that Cyril did it upon the condition required by John at the first, which was the condemning of his former Doctrine, wilfully and maliciously concealing both how Cyril utterly denied to yield unto them, or to that condition required by them, and how at length John and so many of them as were received to Communion consented wholly unto him, and subscribed to the Catholick Faith. All this they not only suppressed, but to colour the matter, forged also a Letter under Cyril's name, whom therein they made to consent to the condemnation of his own Doctrine; which Letter Ibas in his Epistle inclosed and sent unto Maris the Heretick. All these things our Learned Doctour Crakanthorp had detected, evinced and confuted, and hath moreover discovered how Baronius hath perverted the narration of this union, and strengthened the calumny of the Nestorians by his misreporting of the same, and all to serve the great designs of his Pope Vigilius his infallibility, and to make him appear orthodox and in the Faith, but to how little purpose in due time will be discovered.

Which is effected, John complying with Cyril and the true Orthodox.

11. About the time of the celebration of this Ephefine Synod, was Patricius Bal. Sigebert, sent by Cælestine Bishop of Rome into Ireland, to convert that Island to the Christian Faith. This Patricius, it's said, was a Brittain by Birth, some say a Scot, the Son of Calphurnius a Noble Deacon, and of Couche the Sister of famous St. Martin. Of the Religion he was called Suchar, or (as Bale will have it) Succet. Germanus the Gallick Bishop changed it into Mangonius; and Cælestine Bishop of Rome altered this into Patricius. Being instructed by his Uncle St. Martin and St. German, he went to Rome, where for his eminent worth he came to be known to the Bishop, by whom he was sent with some other Assistants to convert the Nation of the Irish, Being a Man of great Zeal, Piety and Industry, famous also for Miracles, as those who write his Life too lavishly talk, he brought the whole Island to embrace the Christian Faith, and overflowed the Flock which he had converted, some say, about sixty years. This is the famous St. Patrick the Apostle, and Tutelary Saint of

Who compare him with St.
Peter.

of the Irish, who had him in so great esteem whilst yet living, that they compared him with St. Peter himself, as appears by what Secundinus, or (as they call him in that Country) St. Scablin, about the year CCCCXLVIII. wrote of him in a certain Hymn: He is constant in the fear of God, and unmoveable in the Faith, upon whom the Church is builded, as upon Peter; whose Apostleship also he hath obtained from God, and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against him. Christ is there said to have chosen him for his Vicar. And his See of Armagh is by one Calvus Perennis, in the days of Brian King of Ireland, who was slain in the year of Our Lord MXIV. termed the See Apostolick; as Desiderius Bishop of Cabors in France is by their Countryman Gallus saluted; both Papa and Apostolicus; and the Bishop of Kildare in Ireland honoured by Cogitosus, with the style of Summus Ecclesie. And style him Summus Pontifex, the Highest Priest, and Highest Bishop; these Titles Sacerdos, and Summus Pontifex, the Highest Priest, and Highest Bishop; these Titles and Prerogatives which the Pope now peculiarly challengeth as Ensigns of his Monarchy, being heretofore usually communicated to other Bishops, when the universal Church was governed in an Aristocratical way.

Ireland not under the Jurisdiction of the See of Rome.

12. Now a Countryman of our own would make us believe, that When Ireland first received Christendom, they gave themselves into the Jurisdiction both Spiritual and Temporal of the See of Rome. But in this respect is told that he speaks without Book, by as Learned a Person in these matters as ever that Country bred, of the Spiritual Jurisdiction untruly, of the Temporal absurdly. For from this first Legation of Palladius and Patricius (some say Palladius first Preached in Ireland) who were first sent to plant the Faith in this Country, it cannot be shewed (saith he) out of any monument of Antiquity, that the Bishop of Rome did ever send any Legates to exercise Spiritual Jurisdiction here (much less any of his Deputies to exercise Temporal Power) before Gillebertus, Who first (they say) exercised the Legantine Function of the Apostolick See, as a Contemporary of his words it, even Bernard himself in the Life of Malachias. We read, moreover (saith he) of sundry Archbishops that have been in this Land betwixt the days of St. Patrick and of Malachias. What one of them can be named that ever fought for a Pall from Rome? Joceline indeed, a late Monk of the Abbey of Furnes writes of St. Patrick, that the Bishop of Rome conferred the Pall upon him, together with the exercise of Legantine Power. But he is well known to be a most fabulous Author, and for this particular, Bernard who was more Ancient, informeth us far better otherwise, that from the very Beginning till his time the Metropolitan See of Armagh wanted the use of the Pall, with whom the Authours of the Annals of Mail-Bernard, who doth fully accord, noting that in the year M.CLI. Pope Eugenius (to whom Malachias Bernard wrote his Books de Consideratione) did by his Legate John Papiron transmit four Palls into Ireland; whither a Pall had never been brought. Hereupon Giraldus Cambrensis, though he acknowledgeth that St. Patrick did chuse Armagh for his Seat, and appointed it to be, as it were, a Metropolitan See, and the proper place of the Primacy of Ireland; yet withall affirms, that indeed there were no Archbishops in Ireland, but that Bishops consecrated one another till the bringing of four Palls by the said Papiro, or Paparo, the Pope's Legate. And some of the Chroniclers after him note concerning Galafius, then Archbishop of Armagh, that He is said to have been the first Archbishop, because he used the first Pall, and that others before him were Archbishops in Name only, for reverence of St. Patrick as Apostle of that Nation.

13. The complaint made by Anselm in his Letters to Muriadach King of Ireland, that Bishops there were consecrated by Bishops alone, might seem somewhat to justify Giraldus his Relation; if we did not find a farther complaint there also, that they were often ordained by one Bishop only. But as this later argueth not the want of a competent number of Bishops in the Land (for they had more than a sufficient number of such) but a neglect of the observance of the Nicene Canon, so can it not rightly be inferred out of the former that they had no Archbishops there at that time, but that rather the Bishops failed much in the respect they ought to their Metropolitan. For that the Irish had their Archbishops, beside many other pregnant testimonies that might be produced, Pope Hildebrand's own Brief sufficiently manifests, directed to Terdanachus (or Tirlagh) the illustrious King of Ireland, the Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, Nobles, and all Christians inhabiting Ireland. And for the Archbishops of Armagh, it appears most evidently from Bernard in the Life of Malachias, that they were so far from being Metropolitans and Primates in Name only, that they exercised much greater Authority before they were put to the charge of fetching Palls from Rome, than ever they did afterward, and that they not only consecrated Bishops, but erected also

Having Archbishops and Bishops ordering all things at home.

also new Bishops and Archbishops too sometimes, according as they law convenient. Nennius writes, that St. Patrick founded in Ireland three hundred sixty five Churches, consecrated three hundred sixty five Bishops, and ordained three thousand Presbyters. In process of time, the number of Bishops was daily multiplied, at the pleasure of the Metropolitan (whereof Bernard complains) and that not only so far that almost every Church had a several Bishop, but that also in some Towns or Cities were ordained more than one, nay sometimes made without any certain place assigned to them. As for the erecting of New Archbishops, if the Legends may be credited, King Eugus and St. Patrick, with all the People did ordain, that in the City and See of Albens (now Emelye, annexed to Calbell) should be the Archbishoprick of the whole Province of Munster. In like manner Brandubh King of the Lagenians, with the consent of all the Laity as of the Clergy, appointed that in the City of Fernes (the See of Moedy, otherwise called Edanus) should be the Archbishoprick of all the Province of Leinster. But Bernard's testimony we have no reason not to believe, relating what was known to be done in his own time: that Celsus the Archbishop of Armagh had of new constituted another Metropolitan See, but subject to the first See, and the Archbishop thereof. Whereby we may see, saith Archbishop Usher, that in the erection of New Archbishops and Bishops all things were here done at home; without consulting with the See of Rome in the matter.

14. Our said Countryman confesseth, that To the Monarch was granted a Negative in the nomination of Bishops at every Vacation: the Clergy and Laity of the Diocese recommending him to the King, the King to the Monarch, the Monarch to the Archbishop of Canterbury; which last clause is erroneously by him extended to the Bishops of the whole Nation, which properly belonged to the Ostman Strangers that possessed the three Cities of Dublin, Waterford and Limrick. But as the Kings and People of this Land (our Authour proceeds) in those Elder times kept the nomination of their Archbishops and Bishops in their own Hands, not depending on the Pope's provision that way, so do we not find by any approved Record of Antiquity, that any visitations of the Clergy were held here in the Pope's name, much less that any Indulgences were sought for by our People at his Hands. For as for the Charter of St. Patrick (by some intitled, de Antiquitate Avalonica) wherein Phaganus and Deruvianus are said to have purchased ten or thirty years of Indulgence from Pope Eleutherius, and St. Patrick himself to have procured twelve years in his time, from Celestine it might justly be demonstrated were this a fit place, a mere figment devised by the Monks of Glastenbury. Neither do I well know what credit is to be given to that stragling sentence which I find ascribed to the same Authour: If any Questions arise in this Island, let them be referred to the See Apostolick; or to that other Decree attributed to Auxilius, Patricius, Secundinus and Benignus. When any difficult Cause, and unknown to all the Judges of the Scottish Nation shall arise, it is rightly to be referred to the See of the Archbishop of the Irish (viz. to Patrick) and to the examination of the Prelate thereof. But if by him and his Wife Men a Cause of this nature cannot easily be made up: we have decreed, it shall be sent to the See Apostolick; that is to say, to the Chair of the Apostle Peter, which hath the authority of the City of Rome. Only this I will say, that as it is most likely that St. Patrick had a special regard unto the Church of Rome, from whence he was sent for conversion of this Island; so if I my self had lived in his days, for the resolution of a doubtful Question, I should as willingly have listened to the Judgment of the Church of Rome as to the determination of any Church in the whole World, so reverend an estimation have I of the Integrity of that Church as it stood in those good days. But that St. Patrick was of opinion that the Church of Rome was sure ever afterward to continue in that good estate, and that there was a perpetual privilege annexed unto that See, that it should never err in Judgment, or that the Pope's Sentences were always to be held as infallible Oracles; that will I never believe; sure I am that my Countrymen after him were of another Belief, who were so far from submitting themselves in this sort to whatsoever should proceed from the See of Rome, that they oftentimes stood out against it, when they had little cause so to do. For proof whereof I need to seek no farther than to those very allegations which have been lately urged for maintenance of the supremacy of the Pope and Church of Rome in this Country. Thus much of St. Patrick.

15. About the time of this Ephesine Synod, died Paulinus the famous Bishop of Nola. And the year following, April the 6th. Celestine the Patriarch of Rome, after he had born that Office eight years, five months, and three days, and Celestine Patriarch of Rome dies.

Who does many good things.

And is succeeded by Sixtus.

Several Jews deceived by an Impostour.

A Synod held at Rome.

Polychronius Bishop of Jerusalem suspended.

Maximianus Bishop of Constantinople dies.

buried in the Cemetery of Priscilla, in the Via Salaria. He ordained, that the Psalms of David should be sung by way of Antiphony before the Communion, Platina. which formerly had not been done, the Epistle of St. Paul and the Gospel being only read; as also that the Priest at the beginning of the administration of that Sacrament should recite the forty second Psalm, Judica me Deus, in which Psalm Ussersgenfi. you must know David prays against his Enemies that persecuted him. The Gradual also, as it's called, which they sing in the Mass, is attributed to him. Some add, that he caused also to be chanted in the Liturgy or Mass, Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus. He dedicated the beautiful Church of Julius, and to it gave several pieces of Plate, the Catalogue of which, if the Reader think it worth his while, he may find in Platina. This Bishop is very much to be commended for his zeal against Pelagianism, and Nestorianism, for suppressing of which he took great pains and care, for sending Palladius and Patricius to convert the Northern Nations, as also for the suppressing the Novatians at Rome, from whom he took their Churches, and constrained Rufinula their Bishop to hold private Conventions. For unto that time (saith Socrates) the Novatians flourished at Rome, enjoyed there many Churches, and had under them great Congregations. To this he adds this note: But then they began to be hated out of measure, whereas the Bishop of Rome (no otherwise than the Bishop of Alexandria) passing the Bounds of his Priestly Order, presumed now to challenge to himself Secular Power and Authority. Besides his Epistles and the Decrees therein contained, Gratian hath four which are hardly worth relating, onely one of them inflicts punishment upon the Bishop or Priest that should lye with the Woman whose Confession they heard, which Custom, to prevent the like villany, had been formerly abrogated by Nellarius of Constantinople. There are extant of his two Epistles to the Bishops of Gall; one to them of Apulia and Calabria, and the fragment of another to the Ephefine Council. To him succeeded Xylus or Sixtus of that Name, the third Son of Sixtus a Roman, April the twenty sixth, the See having been vacant twenty days.

16. About this time many Jews in Crete being deceived by an Impostour, who told them he was Moses, and was come the second time to conduct them through the Sea to the Land of Promise, cast themselves into the Water. Some perished, others were saved by Fishermen, and the rest convinced of their credulity by the sad example of their Fellows, kept themselves on dry land, and all that remained alive, convinced by such a calamity, renounced Judaism, and embraced the Christian Faith. The year following, a Synod of fifty six Bishops was held in Rome; the occasion was, Sixtus the Bishop his being accused by Bassus and Marinians of having defiled Chrysoyenes a Nun: but he was absolved in the presence of Valentinian the Emperour, and Placidia his Mother. The cause of his absolution some make the speech of an Exconsul, who said, that Sentence ought not to be passed against the Bishop of Rome; which words Sixtus catching at, said, It was indeed in his Power whether or no he would be Judged, yet would he not but that the truth should be brought to light. By this seeming Piety and Humility the Emperour was so moved, that he referred the business wholly to Sixtus, who now become both Judge and Party, condemned both his Accusers, neither upon their repentance to receive them to favour, when one of them pleaded that Christ teacheth us thus to pray, Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us; he replying, that it was also written that the sin against the Holy Ghost should neither be forgiven in this World, nor that which is to come. Bassus, as Principal in the slander was Banished, and his estate seized to the use of the Church, three months after which he died, and then the Bishop, as it seems, relenting, caused him to be Imbalm'd, and (as Platina tells us) with his own hands Buried him near to St. Peter in the Sepulchre of his Ancestours. At this same time Sixtus accused Polychronius the Bishop of Jerusalem, as having for a Reward in Money obtained several Bishops and Ministers, and caused him for some time to be suspended from his Function, being condemned by this Roman Synod. It's reported he was angry with him for having once said that it was more fitting the City of Jerusalem should obtain the preeminence than Rome, being the place where Christ taught and suffered, and where the Holy Ghost was sent down first upon the Disciples. But in a time when Jerusalem was Besieged, this Bishop selling his Lands, and distributing the price amongst the Poor, Sixtus procured the Emperour to restore him to his Bishoprick.

17. The year following being the Four Hundred Thirty Fourth of Our Lord, the twenty seventh of Theodosius II. and the tenth of Valentinian III. Maximianus the

the Proclus is translated thither.

the Patriarch of Constantinople deceased, after he had peaceably governed the Church the space of two years and five months, in the Consulship of Archindus and Aspares on Good-Friday, being the twelfth of April. At that time they are the words of Socrates Theodosius the Emperour plaid a very wise part. For lest tumult and dissension should again be raised in the Church, without any delay, whilst the Corpse of Maximianus was above ground, he procured the Bishops then present to entreat Proclus in the Bishop's See. To this end the Letters of Coelestinus Bishop of Rome were brought unto Cyril Bishop of Alexandria, unto John Bishop of Antioch, and Rufius Bishop of Thessalonica, certifying them that there was no cause to the contrary: but that one either already nominated Bishop of some certain City, or installed in some proper See, might be translated to another Bishoprick. These be the words of Socrates, who spends a whole Chapter upon occasion of the repulse formerly given to Proclus, on purpose to prove that it was neither against the Canons, nor example of ancient times, for a Bishop to be translated from one See to another, and reciting the pretended Canon, plainly shews it meant no such thing as to inhibit such a removal. Let the Reader then consider how truly Baronius affirms that Socrates saith this Translation of Proclus was made by dispensation of the Bishop of Rome, because the Canons forbade such Translations, and concludes from Sixtus his interposing his Judgment and Advice to a Right and Jurisdiction. This same year Vincentius a Gall by birth, who having past over the prime of his Youth in Secular warfare and business relating to the World, afterwards had betaken himself to a Monastical kind of life in Leria, an Island of the Icarian Sea, whence he had the Surname of Lerinenus, wrote a notable Commentary against all Hereticks, for the antiquity and universality of the Catholick Faith, which Baronius saith was very accommodate to these times whereof we write, and will be profitable against Innovators in all Ages. This we most readily must admit, out of respect to his great renown of Catholick Doctrine, that famous saying of his, that We ought to hold fast that which by all, always and in all places hath been believed, this being truly and properly Catholick, as the force of the word and reason it self doth declare, all which it truly and universally comprehendeth. Observable also is his Opinion, that The Canon of the Scriptures is over and above sufficient in all respects. By these Rules let all Innovators be Tried, Absolved or Condemned.

Vincentius Lerinenus in Pref. Anno 30. ab Episcopa Synodo.

In ipsa Catholica Ecclesia magis oportet custodiri, ut si verum quod ubique, quod semper, quod ab omnibus creditur: hoc est animi verum.

propterque Catholicum, quod ipsa vis nominis, ratioque declarat, quae annis verè universaliter comprehendit. cap. 3. * Scripserunt Canon. sicut sufficit ad omnia facti superque. c. 41.

The Books of Nestorius burnt.

His miserable death.

A Persecution in Africk.

The Corpse of Chrysostome translated to Constantinople.

18. The next year, or the Four Hundred Thirty Fifth of Our Lord, were the Books of Nestorius, which he had written in exile, condemned to be burnt by an Edict of Theodosius. And when he himself was so far from amendment, that by his tenacious principles he infused venome, and raised commotions wherever he came; the year following he was removed from the Monastery of Euprepius, two Furlongs distant from Antioch, to Petra, a place in the Wilderness of Oasis. Being afterward (as Euagrius tells us) set at liberty by the People called Blemmyes in Libya, and Theodosius having by his Edicts ordained he should return, as he wandered from place to place about the farthest Part of Thebais, bruising and beating himself to the ground, he had such an end as was agreeable to the life he had formerly led, and thereby shewed himself a second Arius. For, as this Author relates, (after a recitation of his complaining Letters to the Governour of Thebais) from his Amantissimus, when he could not be brought to any reason or humility by all his miseries, but rather spurned against the Authority of the Emperour and his Magistrates, his Tongue was eaten off by Worms, and so by the just Judgment of God he passed, faith he, from bodily to spiritual, from those temporal to eternal punishments. The ensuing year was a great Persecution raised against Orthodox Christians in Africk by Genferick the Arian King of the Wandals, where, in Aradius, Probus, Paschelus and Eutychus, Noble Spaniards, received the Crown of Martyrdom. The next after this being the Four Hundred Thirty Eighth of Our Lord, and the sixteenth Consulship of Theodosius, January the twenty eighth, the Corpse of St. John Chrysostome was translated from Comanum to Constantinople five and thirty years after his deposition. The occasion, as Socrates tells the story, was a great desire that Proclus the Patriarch had to reconcile to the Church such as upon the scandal of his sufferings had separated themselves, whom to oblige he perswaded the Emperour to translate his Body, and with great Pomp and Reverence to place it in the Apostles Church; by which means those that formerly Cod. Th. de Haeret. l. ult. et Acta Conc. Episc.

Lib. 1. c. 7.

Profer. in Circa.

formerly had separated themselves were reduced to order, and became conformable. This is the naked story told by him, to whom do assent *Theodoret, †Mar-

Lib. 5. p. 56.
† In Chron.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

Die 27. Jan.

The miraculous manner of its Translation.

19. But his Body being (a) translated from Constantinople to Rome, to make his Reliques of more value, they have made the manner of his Translation very miraculous. Nicephorus relates the Summ of it, borrowing it, as Baronius relates the Summ of it, from the Luculent Oration of one Cosmas Vestiarinus. Whether a Patrician or Baronian Author, so ignoble and unworthy, that (b) doth not obscurely hint, from the Luculent Oration of one Cosmas Vestiarinus, Possessive judged him not worthy to be named in his Bibliotheca, or reckoned amongst his Testes Veritatis. Yet out of this Tailor's Oration (faith our Great Crackanthorp) hath the Cardinal stitched a very pretty Anile, whereof the Summ is this: Proclus making a Panegyric Oration in praise of Chrysostome, the People were so inflamed with a longing desire after him, that they interrupted the Bishop, and not suffering him to make an end of his Sermon, cried out with many Vociferations, that they would have Chrysostome and his Reliques. Proclus herewith fore moved, prevailed with the Emperour to send divers Senators, nay some say an Army with Clerks and Monks to fetch his Body from Comana, where it was kept in a silver Coffin. Once and again, nay very often they labour and strive with their whole might and skill to lift up the Coffin, but all in vain, the sacred Body being no more moveable than a Rock. Of this therefore they certify the Emperour, who calling Proclus and other holy Men seriously to advise about the matter, they counsel him to write a Letter to Chrysostome, in way of a Petition, asking him forgiveness for the Sins which Arcadius his Father had committed against him, and most humbly to beseech him that he would return to Constantinople, and re-assume his See, praying him that he would no longer to afflict them by his absence, being not only desirous of withal no longer to afflict them by his absence, but of his Affes, yea of his shadow. This the Emperour religiously performed, writing a Letter or Petition expressed both by Nicephorus and Baronius, though both the Cardinal and the Tailour Cosmas be unwilling to give to Chrysostome the Title of Patriarch and Pater Patrium, which Nicephorus as his due ascribes unto him. The Emperour's Letters were brought to the dead Corpse, and with great Reverence laid upon the Breast of Chrysostome, which done the next day with ease the Priests took up the Body, and bringing it to Constantinople, placed it in the Church of the Holy Apostles.

20. Here first, as the Cardinal relateth from Nicephorus, the Emperour with the People made an humble Prayer for his Parents, and more especially intreated for his Mother, that her Grave which had shaken and been sick of a Palfie, and made a noise and rattling for thirty five years, might now at length cease; and the Holy man heard the request and granted it; the Graves Palfie was cured, so that it shaked no more. After this did Proclus place dead Chrysostome in the same See and Episcopate with himself, all the People applauding and crying, O Father Chrysostome receive thy See; then by a Miracle beyond the Degree of Admiration, the Lips of Chrysostome (five and thirty years after he was laid in his Grave) opened and blessed all the People; saying Peace be unto you; and thus both the Patriarch Proclus, and the People standing by testified that they heard. Such is the Relation of Baronius from Nicephorus and Cosmas Vestiarinus, a story which puts down Heliodorus, Orlando, and all the Fictions of the Poets. Not to stand to refute such a lying legend, the Cardinal's Friends may consult Tilmanus their Carthusian Monk, and see the Censure he gives of it, and of Nicephorus the only Author he knew, till Baronius pull'd this blind Tailor out of a Corner. Though I believe, faith he, God to be omnipotent, yet I believe not all which is here written of Chrysostome. Let the Reader chuse whether he will believe it or not, for the Writers of Mens Lives who lived before Nicephorus (and he writ not till about the year 1328) would not have concealed or smothered in silence a matter of so great moment. This his Judgment is the more weighty because there is no Ancient Father (I speak it confidently faith our Dr. Crackanthorp) that hath had more fabulous Writers than are Palladius (as he is called) Leo and George the Writers, or rather Devils of Chrysostom's Acts, his Life and Death. Any one of them doting after such miraculous Reports, would have painted out this Miracle of Miracles with all the wit and words they had. That which I only observe is, the strange, and if you please, miraculous lewd dealing of Baronius. This Epistle of Theodosius, though it was written to Chrysostome more than thirty years after his Death, the Cardinal approves, applauds, and for a rare Monument commends it, and all that append-hps Chrysostomus labris aperitis ad Populum dixisse: Pax vobis, Cosmas apud Bar. ubi supra. Paranefti Carthusiani post vitam Chrysostomi.

dant fable to all Posterity. Why? It is an excellent story, indeed to persuade the Adoration of Reliques, Innovation of Saints, Prayers for the Dead and such like. Had the Epistle of Theodoret (hereafter to be mentioned) contained such stuff, it should have had every way the like applause from his Cardinalship, because it wants such matters, and crosseth in very many things the Cardinal's Annals; oh! it is nothing but a Fiction, and a very forgery of some naughty Varlet. Thus Dr. Crackanthorp, upon occasion of Translation of St. Chrysostome's Bones.

On the fifth Council.

21. We have not for many years heard any thing of the Pagans, and their Superstition, which it might be expected before this time should have dwindled into nothing, Christianity having so long been the owned and legal Religion. But notwithstanding all former Laws, and the Example as well as encouragement of the Emperours, yet did Satan find some holes wherein to creep, and upon occasion shew himself more publicly, as the Comportment of Affairs would permit. At this time when the distresses of the Western Empire must necessarily afford greater Liberty to Souldiers, we find that Cyrus the Commander of the Roman Army, now when Carthage was besieged, was of that superstitious persuasion, being afterward honoured with the Prefectship of the Prætorium and the Consulship. Littorius also who commanded the Hunns, was addicted to the predictions of the Aruspices, and more than this the Pagans were so bold, as publicly to offer Sacrifice. As this practice grieved the Fathers of the Church, and drew forth several Pieces declaiming against such impious practices from Cyril, Salvian, Chrysologus and others, so Theodosius in the year 439 on the last Day of January, published an Edict against Pagans, Samaritans, Jews and Hereticks, which subjects them to divers pains and forfeitures. And not only did Paganism recover in some measure its dying strength at this time, but the Arian Heresie again became rampant in Asric, where a very great Persecution was raised against the Orthodox Christians, after the taking of Carthage by the Wandals, who were infected with that Venome. Quod vult Deus, the Bishop of that City presently after it was taken, and a great Company of his Clerks were put into leaking Ships and committed to the Mercy of the Sea, which yet by God's mercy transmitted them to Naples in Campania. The ordinary Rule was, either to quit the Country or remain in perpetual slavery; yet this good came of so great an evil, that Paganism which had endured the shocks of so many Edicts was quite cast down, and pulled up by the roots at Carthage, where they utterly defaced the Temple of Memory, and the Via Caestris.

An Edict against Pagans, &c.

The Temple of Memory, and the Via Caestris at Carthage demolished.

Folinnus Bishop of Caesarea dies.

Thalassius succeeds him.

22. About this time died Folinnus Bishop of Caesarea in Cappadocia, into whose room the Citizens desiring Proclus the Patriarch of Constantinople, that another might be elected, when he mused with himself, whom he should assign them for their Bishop, and on Saturday was in the Church for that purpose, all the Senators came thither to see whom he would elect, and amongst the rest Thalassius the Præfatus Prætoris of Illyricum, on whom he pitched, and ordained him Bishop of that See, whereat though the Emperour at first fretted, yet afterward as Nicephorus writes, he confirmed the Election. Here Socrates tells us he will cut off and make an end of his History, consisting of seven Books, of which the last contains the Ecclesiastical Affairs of two and thirty years, the whole work comprising those of an hundred and forty, beginning at the first year of the 271. Olympiad, when Constantine was proclaimed Emperour, and ending the second of the three hundred and fifth (more rightly the third of the three hundred and fourth) and the 17 Consulship of Theodosius Augustus. In his Collections he was not Indigent, though Euagrius accuseth him of Osecancy, very partial toward the Novatians, a Greek by Birth, and born at Constantinople. To this same year also being the 439 year of our Lord, Hermias Sozomenus of Salamina continued his History, as himself affirmeth in his Preface, which plainly shews much of the latter end of that work to be lost. Gregory Lib. 6. Ep. 31. the Great Bishop of Rome tells us, that his See received not his History, because in many things he lies, and he too much commends Theodosius the Bishop of Mopsuestia. Melchior Canus tells him his Memory failed him, for they are Theodoret's words which he cites for Sozomen's, and Baronius answers in his behalf, that though in such matters as Gregory excepts against, he be not to be received, yet neither to be rejected in other matters, the Cardinal being the rather of this opinion, because Pope Gelafius receiveth him, and accounts him more worthy of credit than Eusebius, as Photius values him above Socrates. To this may be added from Canus, that his Testimony was both cited and approved Theod. Nov. Tit. 3.

Vitæ de p. s. Vand.

L. 14. c. 4. 2

els, and that what is there related must stand for the words and Doctrine of St. Peter. Diff. 80. c. 2. § 6. qu. 1. c. 5.
 ter, yea the Authority of it as of other Decretal Epistles is affirmed every way equal to the Canons of Nice, of Chalcedon, and other holy Councils; nay farther what St. Austin saith of the very sacred and Canonical Scriptures indired certainly by the Spirit of God himself, that doth Gratian (wretchedly abusing his words), apply to this and the rest of the Popes Decretal Epistles saying that They are 11. Qu. 3. c. 12. c. qu. 1. c. 5. Diff. 20. c. 8. Can. Decretal to be reckoned amongst the Canonical Scriptures, which Bellarmine not only defends in general, but by the Authority of Rufinus defends this to be the true Epistle of Clement to St. James. More particularly the Jesuite Turrian to whom Baronius, Binius, Gretzor and others refer us for the credit of these Epistles, has writ a whole Book in defence of them all, wherein he calls them most holy, most true Epistles, most worthy of their Authours (in particular mentioning and defending this of Clement to James) that is Men Apostolick, consecrated by the Reverence of the whole World, full of all Gravity, Learning and Sanctity, confirmed by the Testimony and use of all Ages: and which is most pertinent to our present purpose, the Jesuite words it thus: What if in these Epistles sometimes we meet with such matters as are not easie to all? must we therefore doubt of their Authority? By no means.

27. If any Man therefore understand not how the Epistle of Clement could be written to St. James who was dead so long before, such an one according to his Doctrine, if a learned, modest and temperate Man must ask of others, and in the mean time contain himself within his own bounds, that is, he must as the Jesuit explaineth it, so firmly believe it to be written by Clement that he esteems it a great sin to doubt thereof. But besides this Turrian hath writ a large Chapter on purpose to defend this Epistle to be truly Clement's though written to James long after his death, whereas some there were followed by Baronius, Possennine and Binius) who thought it to be written indeed by Clement not unto James but to Simeon his Succellour. Against those, he held that it was writ to none but James, and whereas some would think it madness to write to one that was dead (for who should be carrier of the Letter) especially to write to him as a Governour in the Church militant and to advise him what he should doe. Turrian tells you of divers great and weighty reasons why St. Peter commanded Clement, and why Clement wrote to a dead Man, and having given very wife and worthy reasons thereof, one taken from Transfiguration, another from imitation, a third from voiding hatred which he would have incurred had he writ to any alive, a fourth to be a Testimony of the Resurrection; and such like; at length he concludes that no Catholics must doubt of the truth of this Epistle though they see no reason why it should be written to a dead Man; and withall that with Men who have reason and Judgment, such must assure themselves both that St. Peter and Clement knew reasons for writing to a dead Man. Both the Cardinal therefore and Binius, had they been Men of reason and Judgment, and considered this tract of Turrian to which they refer us, might therein have seen divers reasons why Theodoret might write to John though he was dead, they being as forcible to defend this Epistle of Theodoret as to excuse Clement for writing to St. James. But the cause is now altered, the Cardinals Demonstration holding in those things alone which distaste him, or make for us and against their cause. But if any such writing bring, as all the Decretals do, either honour to the Roman See, or gain to that Court, though they were writ to one that was dead, not even only but seven times seven years before, they shall be honoured as the true and undoubted threatnings of the Authours. If any one scruple to yield his assent to this truth let him but add to this the other Example about Chrysostome's bones, the writing of a Letter to that Patriarch thirty five years after his death by the Emperour Theodosius, and he will find it such an one as cuts all the Sinews, yea the heart-strings of the Cardinals Demonstration. He must confess it either to be fallacious or proclaim the Epistle of Pope Clement and the other of Theodosius with that whole narration to be fictitious, and the Cardinals Annals a Fabulous Legend.

28. The Doctors second answer is that though John was dead to whom the Epistle was directed, yet that onely proves the Title or inscription to be amiss, or that Theodoret wrote not this Epistle to John; it cannot prove (which the Cardinal undertook to doe) that the Epistle is forged and not written by Theodoret. For that it was truly Theodoret's own Sermon publicly preached at Antioch before Domnus after the death of Cyril, doth clearly manifest the very scope and purpose of that Sermon being the same which is expressed in the Epistle. As in the

Cal. 5. p. 539.
 Epistle

Epistle Theodoret declareth his eagerness for defending the Doctrine of Nestorius, and insulteth over dead Cyril as the chief Oppugner of that Heresie, the very same eagerness for Nestorianism, and love to his Heresies, as also the like joy for Cyril's death, doth his Sermon express, and that more fully with such Expressions as these: None doth now compell a y man to blaspheme, seeing Cyril is dead, Where are those who teach that God was Crucified. It was the man Christ and not God who was crucified. It was the man Jesus that died, and it was God the Word who raised him from the dead. Now there is no contention (seeing Cyril is dead) the East and Egypt (that is, aswell those who are under the Patriarch of Alexandria, as such as are subject to the Patriarch of Antioch) are all under one Yoke, or all submit themselves to one Faith, viz. Nestorianism. Envy is now dead and all Contention dead and buried with him. Let now the Theopaschites (that is the Catholics who taught God to have suffered and died) let them now be quiet. Now who can imagine but that the Epistle which maintains the same Heresie, and insults in the same triumphing manner at the death of Cyril was written by Theodoret when he publicly in a Sermon before a Patriarch uttered the same Matter? Would he forbear to write that in a Letter which he neither did fear nor forbear to profess openly in a Sermon, and that in so solemn a place and Assembly? Or was Theodoret Orthodox, and a lover of Cyril in his Writings before his death (as Baronius allegeth) who was Heretical and so big with Nestorianism after his death, that he must vent them, and with them disgorge his malice and spite in an open Pulpit, and such an Audience? It is not the Inscription or Title of the Epistle, but the Epistle it self, which the Fifth Council and we after it stand upon. But that they knew the Epistle to be Theodoret's, they needed not by it to have proved that he after the Union, yea, after the death of Cyril, was eager, violent, yea, virulent in defence of the Heresies of Nestorius, his Sermon had been a sufficient demonstration of that: But because they were sure this was the true Epistle of Theodoret, they thought good to testify that he was the self same man in writing that he was in preaching, and in both a malicious Nestorian; that long after the Union made betwixt John and Cyril, yea after Cyril's death he continued both to write and speak the same.

29. Next the Doctour observeth the fraudulent dealing of Baronius and Binius in this Cause, who though they carp not at the Sermon, yet deny the Epistle, whereas though the Epistle had never been extant, yet the Cardinal's Position for Theodoret's Orthodoxy and Catholick Faith ever after the Union betwixt John and Cyril is clearly and certainly refuted by his Sermon made twelve years after the Union. Then whereas the Cardinal strongly urgeth the Epistles, which in their Vatican or Minibouse, are stamped with the Name of Theodoret, to prove his Orthodoxy for six and twenty years, this Sermon alone convicts them of falsehood, wherein he Vomits out in a most Solemn Assembly, together with the Blasphemies of Nestorius, most slanderous Revilings, not onely against Cyril, at whose death he insulteth, but against all Catholics, whom after the Nestorian Language he stiles Theopaschites and Hereticks: With such false, feigned and lying Writings doth the Cardinal fight against the Fifth Synod and the Acts thereof. After this to meet with the Objection which Baronius might make against the Epistle from the falseness of its Supercription, by many Instances our Authour proveth an Epistle may be true, when yet the Title is false and erroneous. As 1st. in the Epistle of Clement to James, the Inscription whereof, though both he and Binius confess to be false, yet held the Letter it self to be Clement's. Excusing it they say it was onely an error in writing James instead of Simeon, and had they not been too malicious against the Fifth Synod, they would as easily have said the Epistle is truly his but in the Inscription, in the Acts, the Name of John is by the Writers mistaken for that of Domnus. 2. In Theodoret's History and the Venice Edition of the Councils by Nicholas Pope Damasus is said to have writ an Epistle to Paulinus Bishop of Thessalonica, whereas it ought to be read, as Baronius and Binius confess, Bishop of Antioch. 3. The sixteenth Novel of Justinian is directed to Anthimus Bishop of Constantinople, whereas Menas at that time governed that See. 4. The Epistle of Felix the fourth to Sabina, was dated on the twelfth of the Calends of November, at which time Felix was dead, whose Name as the Cardinal saith might easily creep in for that of Boniface his Succellour. By several other instances not necessary here to be expressed, doth he make the Cardinal's Exception against this Epistle of Theodoret very ridiculous.

Ad An. D. 318.
Ad Council. sub Damasus.

Ad An. 539.

30. And no less ridiculous doth he shew the Cardinal's reasons to be why John died died before Cyril. He confesseth it true that John did die before him, because of many undoubted testimonies of the Council of Chalcedon, not one of which the Cardinal had the grace to alledge, but his reasons are so weak, and withall so full of fraud and untruth, that the Doctour counts it worthy of consideration to see his blindness and perverseness, even in proving that which is true. He first tells us: I have shewed this most manifestly that John died seven years before Cyril, by the Epistle which Theodoret wrote to Domnus four years since (that is four before this year 444) in the behalf of one Felicianus, whose estate Theodoret recommends to Domnus. The Doctour observes how egregious a trifier the Cardinal hath shewed himself hereby. For neither in the four hundred and fortieth, nor in any four years either before or after that doth he set down any Epistle of Theodoret's to Domnus in behalf of Felicianus. The Epistle which the Cardinal dreameth of, is in behalf of Caelestinus, and that is indeed expressed Ann. 440. where note, I pray, that the Cardinal by a slip either of his own Pen or Memory (as I verily suppose) or of his Scribe, names Felicianus instead of Caelestinus. God even by this demonstrating how unjustly he carps at the Synodal Acts, for that very error or slip of a Pen, which the Cardinal himself falls into, even while he is for the like slip declaimeth against these Holy Synodical Acts. And yet there's a worse fault in this Reason. For it is no more shewed that John died before Cyril by that Epistle than by Tully's ad Atticum. That Epistle having neither date nor any Circumstance to induce that, and may aswell be written Ann. 448. as 440. His second Reason is: There are Letters extant of Theodoret to Domnus the year following (Ann. 437.) and that Epistle I will set down in its due place, the next year. Now in the next year, viz. Ann. 437. there is no Epistle of Theodoret set down by the Cardinal, nor is either Domnus or Theodoret so much as named in all his discourse of that year. Is not this now shewed most manifestly; you may be sure he would not have feared to perform his promise, but that there was somewhat in that Epistle which would have bewrayed his lewd dealing in this Cause. His third Reason is drawn from the Testimony of Nicephorus, from whom he saith it is certain. No it is sure and certain by Nicephorus that Baronius is erroneous in this matter, for he accounteth John to have been Bishop of Antioch 18 years, and the Cardinal will allow him no more than 13, now the first year of John cannot possibly be before the year 427, for in that year Theodosius his next Predecessour died, as Baronius himself proveth. Add now unto these 17 more, and then the death of John will be Ann. 444. which is the self same year wherein Cyril died.

A a 2

31. But fee farther, how the Cardinal is inflated in this Cause. John (saith he) died Ann. 436. having been Bishop 13 years. John succeeded to Theodosius who died Ann. 427. Say now in truth is not the Cardinal a worthy Arithmetician, who of 427 and 13 can make no more than 436? And is not this a worthy reason to refuse Nicephorus? But this is not all, for Baronius glossing upon Theodoret's Letter to Dioscorus, which, as he saith, was written Ann. 444, there observes with a Memorandum, that by this Passage of Theodoret, you may see how long Theodosius, John and Domnus, had sitten in the See of Antioch, viz. 26 years in all, from that time that Theodosius was made Bishop unto that year 444, viz. Theodosius 6, John 13, and Domnus 7, untill that year. Theodosius, as Baronius will assure you was made Bishop Ann. 423. Add now unto these 6 of Theodosius, 13 of John, and 7 of Domnus, and tell me, whither you think the Cardinal had sent his Wits when he could sum those to be just 444. Or will you see the very quintessence of the Cardinal's Wisdom? I will (saith he) set down the next year (viz. Ann. 437.) the very Epistle of Theodoret to Domnus, which was then written unto him, and I will set down in his due place (viz. Ann. 444.) that Epistle of Theodoret to Dioscorus, whereby is shewed, that John was Bishop of Antioch just 13 years. Thus the Cardinal, who by these two Epistles of Theodoret will prove both these. As much in effect as if he had said, I have already proved that John began to be Bishop of Antioch Ann. 427. and this being set down for a certainty, I will now prove by Theodoret's Epistle to Domnus, that John died Ann. 436, that is, in his ninth year; and then I will prove again by Theodoret's Epistle to Dioscorus, that he died in his thirteenth year, and so died not till the year 440. Or, as if he had thus said, I will first prove that mine own Annals are untrue, wherein it is said, that John died in the year 436, which is but the ninth year of John, because he died not, as Theodoret in one Epistle witnesseth, untill his thirteenth year, which is Ann. 440. And then I will prove unto you, that mine own Annals are again untrue, wherein it is said that John was Bishop 13 years, and so died not till Ann. 440. (beginning the first Ann. 427.) because Theodoret in another Epistle witnesseth, that John died died Ann. 436. Or thus, I will first prove that John was dead Ann. 436, though he was alive Ann. 440, and then I will prove unto you that John was alive Ann. 440, though he was dead Ann. 436. Is not this brave dealing in the Cardinal? Is he not worthy of a Cap and Feather too, that can prove all these, and prove them by Theodoret's Epistles? Or do you not think these to be worthy Epistles of Theodoret, by which such Absurdities, such Impossibilities may be proved?

32. Doth not this alone if there were no other evidence, demonstrate these Epistles of Theodoret to be Counterfeits? If that to Domnus be truly his as Baronius assures you, whereby John is said to have died Ann. 436, then certainly the other to Dioscorus must needs be a forgery, whereby John is shewed to live Ann. 440. Again if that to Dioscorus be truly his as Baronius assures you, wherein John is said to live 440, then certainly the other to Domnus must of necessity be a forgery, wherein John is said to be dead Ann. 436. And as either of these two Epistles demonstrates the untruth and forgery of the other, so they both demonstrate the great Vanity of Baronius, who applauds them both, and who will make good what they both affirm; that is the same Man to be both dead and alive, a Bishop and no Bishop at the self same time; and by these worthy Reasons doth the Cardinal refuse his own witness, Nicephorus, who by giving eighteen years to John, shews plainly that John and Cyril died within one year, which account perhaps gave occasion to the Excriber of the Synodal Acts to thrust in the Name of John, whom upon Nicephorus his account he thought to live after Cyril, whereas in very deed he died something before Cyril. His fourth and last Reason is drawn from a Canonical Epistle of Cyril to Domnus, set down in the additions to Theodoret Balsamon, where he concludes it out of doubt that John died, seeing one Cyril writ to his Successour Domnus, yet are there two great doubts in it. The first whether that Epistle be truly Cyril's, what the Cardinal brings being much against it, the Epistle ascribing to great Authority to Domnus, as to put out Bishops and restore them at his pleasure, quite contrary to the Canon of the Council of Antioch, which requires that the Metropolitan do nothing in such Causes without the advice and consent of the other Bishops of that Province. The other doubt is whether Domnus, to whom this Epistle is written be Domnus Bishop of Antioch, and Successour to John. In removing hereof the Cardinal is much troubled, winding himself divers ways, and concluding that He who had such Authority must needs be some eminent Bishop, and not one of an inferior See, although he might be a Metropolitan, though no Patriarch, and so have inferior Bishops under him.

33. But he adds that, There is no Domnus else, but this Domnus Bishop of Antioch, mentioned either in the Council of Ephesus or Chalcedon, who had such Authority as to depose and restore Bishops at libitum. But in such lawful manner as Domnus of Antioch might do it, there were others called by the Name of Domnus mentioned in those very Councils, who might upon just cause, and by due and Canonical proceeding, depose and restore their inferior Bishops. Look but into these Councils, and you will admire both the supine Negligence of the Cardinal in this point, and his most audacious down-facing of the truth; for, to omit others both in the Conventicle of Ephesus, and the Council of Chalcedon, there is often mention of Domnus Bishop of Apamea, a Metropolitan Bishop. And that you may see how fraudulently the Cardinal dealt in this very point, he neither would set down that Epistle, nor acquaint you with that which in Balsamon is expressly noted; that Peter the Bishop, whom that Domnus, to whom Cyril writeth, had deposed, was Alexandrinus Sacerdos, a Bishop of the Patriarchate of Alexandria. Now what had Domnus of Antioch to do with the Alexandrian Bishops? So clear it is by Balsamon, that this Domnus, to whom Cyril wrote, was not Domnus of Antioch, as the Cardinal I fear against his Knowledge avoucheth. But thus you see all the Reasons the Cardinal bringeth to prove John to be dead seven years before Cyril, not only to be weak and unable to enforce that Conclusion, but also to be full fraught with frauds and untruths. So that if I had not found more found and certain Reasons to persuade this, I could never by the Cardinal's proofs have been induced to think that an Error in the Inscription of Theodoret's Epistle. But seeing upon the undoubted Testimonies in the Council of Chalcedon, it is certain that John died before Cyril, I willingly acknowledge a slip of some Writer in that Inscription, but yet the Epistle itself must be acknowledged to be truly Theodoret's, which is all that the Synod avoucheth, and that which the Cardinal undertook to disprove, but by no one Reason doth offer to prove the same. And even for that Error also in the Inscription, died before Cyril. He confesseth it true that John did die before him, because of many undoubted testimonies of the Council of Chalcedon, not one of which the Cardinal had the grace to alledge, but his reasons are so weak, and withall so full of fraud and untruth, that the Doctour counts it worthy of consideration to see his blindness and perverseness, even in proving that which is true. He first tells us: I have shewed this most manifestly that John died seven years before Cyril, by the Epistle which Theodoret wrote to Domnus four years since (that is four before this year 444) in the behalf of one Felicianus, whose estate Theodoret recommends to Domnus. The Doctour observes how egregious a trifter the Cardinal hath shewed himself hereby. For neither in the four hundred and fortieth, nor in any four years either before or after that doth he set down any Epistle of Theodoret's to Domnus in behalf of Felicianus. The Epistle which the Cardinal dreameth of, is in behalf of Caelestinus, and that is indeed expressed Ann. 440. where note, I pray, that the Cardinal by a slip either of his own Pen or Memory (as I verily suppose) or of his Scribe, names Felicianus instead of Caelestinus. God even by this demonstrating how unjustly he carps at the Synodal Acts, for that very error or slip of a Pen, which the Cardinal himself falls into, even while he for the like slip declaimeth against these Holy Synodical Acts. And yet there's a worse fault in this Reason. For it is no more shewed that John died before Cyril by that Epistle than by Tully's ad Atticum. That Epistle having neither date nor any Circumstance to induce that, and may aswell be written Ann. 448. as 440. His second Reason is: There are Letters extant of Theodoret to Domnus the year following (Ann. 437.) and that Epistle I will set down in its due place, the next year. Now in the next year, viz. Ann. 437. there is no Epistle of Theodoret set down by the Cardinal, nor is either Domnus or Theodoret so much as named in all his discourse of that year. Is not this now shewed most manifestly; you may be sure he would not have feared to perform his promise, but that there was somewhat in that Epistle which would have bewrayed his lewd dealing in this Cause. His third Reason is drawn from the Testimony of Nicephorus, from whom he saith it is certain. No it is sure and certain by Nicephorus that Baronius is erroneous in this matter, for he accounteth John to have been Bishop of Antioch 18 years, and the Cardinal will allow him no more than 13, now the first year of John cannot possibly be before the year 427, for in that year Theodosius his next Predecessor died, as Baronius himself proveth. Add now unto these 17 more, and then the death of John will be Ann. 444. which is the self same year wherein Cyril died.

31. But see farther, how the Cardinal is infatuated in this Cause. John (saith he) died Ann. 436. having been Bishop 13 years. John succeeded to Theodosius who died Ann. 427. Say now in truth is not the Cardinal a worthy Arithmetician, who of 427 and 13 can make no more than 436? And is not this a worthy reason to refuse Nicephorus? But this is not all, for Baronius glossing upon Theodoret's Letter to Dioscorus, which, as he saith, was written Ann. 444. there observes with a Memorandum, that by this Passage of Theodoret, you may see how long Theodosius, John and Domnus, had sitten in the See of Antioch, viz. 26 years in all, from that time that Theodosius was made Bishop unto that year 444, viz. Theodosius 6, John 13, and Domnus 7, untill that year. Theodosius, as Baronius will assure you was made Bishop Ann. 423. Add now unto these 6 of Theodosius, 13 of John, and 7 of Domnus, and tell me, whether you think the Cardinal had sent his Wits when he could sum those to be just 444. Or will you see the very quittance of the Cardinal's Wisdom? I will (saith he) set down the next year (viz. Ann. 437.) the very Epistle of Theodoret to Domnus, which was then written unto him, and I will set down in his due place (viz. Ann. 444.) that Epistle of Theodoret to Dioscorus, whereby is shewed, that John was Bishop of Antioch just 13 years. Thus the Cardinal, who by these two Epistles of Theodoret will prove both these. As much in effect as if he had said, I have already proved that John began to be Bishop of Antioch Ann. 427. and this being set down for a certainty; I will now prove by Theodoret's Epistle to Domnus, that John died Ann. 436. that is, in his ninth year; and then I will prove again by Theodoret's Epistle to Dioscorus, that he died in his thirteenth year, and so died not till the year 440. Or, as if he had thus said, I will first prove that mine own Annals are untrue, wherein it is said, that John died in the year 436, which is but the ninth year of John, because he died not, as Theodoret in one Epistle witnesseth, untill his thirteenth year, which is Ann. 440. And then I will prove unto you, that mine own Annals are again untrue, wherein it is said that John was Bishop 13 years, and so died not till Ann. 440. (beginning the first Ann. 427.) because Theodoret in another Epistle witnesseth, that John died died Ann. 436. Or thus, I will first prove that John was dead Ann. 436. though he was alive Ann. 440. and then I will prove unto you that John was alive Ann. 440. though he was dead Ann. 436. Is not this brave dealing in the Cardinal? Is he not worthy of a Cap and Feather too, that can prove all these, and prove them by Theodoret's Epistles? Or do you not think these to be worthy Epistles of Theodoret, by which such Absurdities, such Impossibilities may be proved?

32. Doth not this alone if there were no other evidence, demonstrate these Epistles of Theodoret to be Counterfeits? If that to Domnus be truly his as Baronius assures you, whereby John is said to have died Ann. 436. then certainly the other to Dioscorus must needs be a forgery, whereby John is shewed to live Ann. 440. Again if that to Dioscorus be truly his as Baronius assures you, wherein John is said to live 440, then certainly the other to Domnus must of necessity be a forgery, wherein John is said to be dead Ann. 436. And as either of these two Epistles demonstrates the untruth and forgery of the other, so they both demonstrate the great Vanity of Baronius, who applauds them both, and who will make good what they both affirm; that is the same Man to be both dead and alive, a Bishop and no Bishop at the self same time; and by these worthy Reasons doth the Cardinal refute his own witness, Nicephorus, who by giving eighteen years to John, shews plainly that John and Cyril died within one year, which account perhaps gave occasion to the Excriber of the Synodal Acts to thrust in the Name of John, whom upon Nicephorus his account he thought to live after Cyril, whereas in very deed he died something before Cyril. His fourth and last Reason is drawn from a Canonical Epistle of Cyril to Domnus, set down in the additions to Theodore Balsamon, where he concludes it out of doubt that John died, seeing one Cyril writ to his Successor Domnus, yet are there two great doubts in it. The first whether that Epistle be truly Cyril's, what the Cardinal brings being much against it, the Epistle ascribing to great Authority to Domnus, as to put our Bishops and restore them at his pleasure, quite contrary to the Canon of the Council of Antioch, which requires that the Metropolitan do nothing in such Causes without the advice and consent of the other Bishops of that Province. The other doubt is whether Domnus, to whom this Epistle is written be Domnus Bishop of Antioch, and Successor to John. In removing hereof the Cardinal is much troubled, winding himself divers ways, and concluding that He who had such Authority must needs be some eminent Bishop, and not one of an inferior See, although he might be a Metropolitan, though no Patriarch, and so have inferior Bishops under him.

33. But he adds that, There is no Domnus else, but this Domnus Bishop of Antioch, mentioned either in the Council of Ephesus or Chalcedon, who had such Authority as to depose and restore Bishops ad libitum. But in such lawfull manner as Domnus of Antioch might doe it, there were others called by the Name of Domnus mentioned in those very Councils, who might upon just cause, and by due and Canonical proceeding, depose and restore their inferior Bishops. Look but into these Councils, and you will admire both the supine Negligence of the Cardinal in this point, and his most audacious down-facing of the truth; for, to omit others both in the Conventicle of Ephesus, and the Council of Chalcedon, there is often mention of Domnus Bishop of Apamea, a Metropolitan Bishop. And that you may see how fraudulently the Cardinal dealt in this very point, he neither would set down that Epistle, nor acquaint you with that which in Balsamon is expressly noted; that Peter, the Bishop, whom that Domnus, to whom Cyril writeth, had deposed, was Alexandrinus Sacerdos, a Bishop of the Patriarchate of Alexandria. Now what had Domnus of Antioch to doe with the Alexandrian Bishops? So clear it is by Balsamon, that this Domnus, to whom Cyril wrote, was not Domnus of Antioch, as the Cardinal I fear against his Knowledge avoucheth. But thus you see all the Reasons the Cardinal bringeth to prove John to be dead seven years before Cyril, not only to be weak and unable to enforce that Conclusion, but also to be full fraught with frauds and untruths. So that if I had not found more sound and certain Reasons to perswade this, I could never by the Cardinal's proofs have been induced to think that an Error in the Inscription of Theodoret's Epistle. But seeing upon the undoubted Testimonies in the Council of Chalcedon, it is certain that John died before Cyril, I willingly acknowledge a slip of some Writer in that Inscription, but yet the Epistle it self must be acknowledged to be truly Theodoret's, which is all that the Synod avoucheth, and that which the Cardinal undertook to disprove, but by no one Reason doth offer to prove the same. And even for that Error also in the Inscription, of sch. sub. Julius 1.

Council. Aug. 1.
Can. 9.

Art. 3. Conc.
Chalc. p. 75. 6.

scription, I doubt not but those who can have a sight of the Greek and Original, may perhaps find some ancient Copies of the Acts of the fifth Council, shall find either no Name at all, or which I rather suppose, that of Domnus expressed therein; instead of which, though some ignorant audacious Excriber hath thrust in the Name of John; it is not nor ought not to be any Impeachment at all to the Synodal Acts, unless the Cardinal will acknowledge his own Annals to be of no credit, because in them Paschalis is written by some such error for Pelagius, John for Vigilius, Justinus for Justinianus, Theodorus for Theodosius, Sextus for Quinta, Felicianus for Celestianus, and a Number the like in other Causes, most of these slips pertaining to this very Cause of the three Chapters of which we do entreat. Thus Dr. Crakanthorp the Baronist, to whose Arguments nothing can be added, it's pity any thing should be detracted, but that we only write an Infatuation. In due place we shall again hear of him.

To Cyril of Alexandria succeeded Dioscorus.

Proclus of Constantinople
dies.
Flavianus succeeds.

Eutyches and his Heresie.

Is condemned in a Synod held at Constantinople.

34. Cyril the Patriarch of Alexandria was succeeded by Dioscorus, of whom we may hear too much hereafter. Leo Bishop of Rome, in the mean time vigorously prosecuted the Manichees, as also Valentinian the Emperour, who by an Edict commanded them to be punished as sacrilegious Persons. At this same time Leo interposing himself into the Ecclesiastick Affair of Gall, was earnestly opposed by Hilary the Bishop of Arles, a Man very famous in this Generation, who being a Monk of the Lerinenian Monastery had for his Merit been promoted to the Archbishoprick of Arles. All he could get together he distributed to the Poor, and the better to inable himself to be charitable toiled much at Husbandry and Country-work, yet without neglect of his particular Calling. A year or two following died Proclus, Bishop of Constantinople, when he had governed that Church something above twelve years, and was succeeded by Flavianus Chron. c. 8. Niceph. lib. 14. in Spain against the Priscillianists, of which one held at Toledo first added that Passage concerning the Holy Ghost to the Creed, Proceeding from the Father and the Son, which was not for a long time after received by the Church of Rome. The year following Theodosius the Emperour to appease the Wrath of God which much appeared at this time in the Desolations and Wastings of several Countries by the Invasion of the barbarous Nations as otherwise, published Laws against Heathens and Nestorians commanding the Books of Porphry, and others made against the Writings of Cyril to be sought out and burned. But the Devil being driven out of this hold betook himself straight to another Device, and made use herein of the Zeal wherewith Catholics were inflamed against Nestorianism, turning it so far into the other Extreme, as out of an extravagant desire to shun Charybdis they struck upon Scylla and made a change from one Heresie to another. The Ringleader of this Party was one Eutyches an Abbat or Archimandrita, as the Greeks called it, of Constantinople, who so far contended against two Persons in Christ, that he also denied two Natures. At first he said Christ was not Consubstantial with us according to the Flesh, but brought his Body with him from Heaven, afterward he held that the Natures which were before the Union two, and distinct each from other, after the Union became one and the same. According to the former Assertion Theodoret tells us he revived the Heresie of Valentinus, who imagined that the Son of God took nothing from the Virgin, but being made flesh passed onely through her Body, Eutyches began to publish this Opinion to the World in or about the year of our Lord 448, the Consulship of Flavins Posthumianus and Flavus Zeno.

35. Eutyches his Doctrine being early discovered at Constantinople, was condemned by a Synod assembled there by Flavianus for that purpose. This same year were two Synods held at Tyre and Berytus about Ibas Bishop of Edessa in Syria, who was accused of Nestorianism, and as Baronius tells us, was thereof acquitted, not onely at Berytus but also afterward in the General Council of Chalcedon, how truly we shall hereafter declare. In the mean time the Friends of Eutyches knowing what disreputation the late Synod at Constantinople had procured him, labouring by all means to null the Decrees thereof, especially Chrysaphius the Eunuch out of a particular Grudge to Flavianus, upon whom he studied how to devolve all the Odium and Infamy. This Chrysaphius at first was much displeased with his advancement to the See of Constantinople, and to pick some Quarrel sent him to tell him it was fitting he should present the Emperour with some gift at his promotion. He sent him accordingly some White-Loaves, wherewith the Eunuch being displeased, and pleading for Gold as most worthy of the Prince, the Bishop affirmed he had none but what belonged to the Church, and dedicated to the Nicel. Valen.

Tit. 2. de Ma-nich.

Profer. Gennadius. alii.

Niceph. in Chron. c. 8.
Niceph. Ca-liph. lib. 14.
cap. 47.
in fine.

Acta Concil.
Ephef.

Liberatus
Breviar. c. 11.
Theod. in he-reticis falsis.
Flavian. Ep-
ist. ad Leonit.
Leo variis ut
11. 19. Eua-grius lib. 1.
2. 3. 4.

Acta Conc.
Chalced. Eua-
grius lib. 1.
cap. 10.

Niceph. lib.
14. cap. 47.

Service of God; and tise of the Poor. Chrysaphius rather irritated by this his resolute Answer studies all ways how to out him of his See, and perceiving he should profit nothing in any such attempt as long as Pulcheria Augusta the Sister of Theodosius late at the Helm, by false Suggestions he brings her into discredit with Eudocia the Emperess first; and then with the Emperour himself, and contrives how to develt her of her Imperial Power, and reduce her into a condition no better than that of the Deaconesses of the Church, which being made known to her by Flavianus, the of her own accord quitted the Government and retired to a private life. Chrysaphius therefore joyns himself with Eutyches and Dioscorus Bishop of Alexandria, the great Patron of this Heretic. Eutyches encouraged by his assistance complains that he had not been fairly dealt with in the late Synod of Constantinople, that the Acts of it were changed and altered at the pleasure of his Enemies, and all things falsly and disadvantageously recorded and represented on his side. He petitions the Emperour that the Records might be diligently searched and examined.

But appealing to the Emperour.

36. His suit was very easily granted through the interest of Chrysaphius, who so far also prevailed in his behalf, that though the Fathers of this new Synod called for examination of this matter opposed it, he procured him a dispensation as to appearance, and the matter to be examined in the presence of his Proctours, which favour yet could not be granted to Eusebius Bishop of Dorylaeum his Accuser. But by this Assembly of thirty Bishops, who as Eusebius writes lifted out the doings of Flavianus, were the Records found true and confirmed. Eutyches to bring Flavianus into greater discredit with the Emperour, and all good Men, accused him as a Fautor of Nestorianism, whereupon Theodosius demanded of him a Confession of his Faith, which inveighing against and anathematizing as well the one as the other Heretic, perceiving he nothing profited by any of these shifts, being advised and governed by Dioscorus and Chrysaphius, he desires a general Council should be called, wherof Dioscorus should be President or Moderatour. Chrysaphius by the Mediation of the Emperess easily obtaineth his suit, openly pretending to clear the difficulty in the Cause of Eutyches, but in his mind designing aswell the advancement of his opinions, as the deposing and Ruine of Flavianus. By his means the Emperour appointed a Council to be held at Ephefus by the first of August (A.D. 449) over which he commanded Dioscorus to preside, and bring with him several Bishops, but Theodoret of Cyrrus and Ibas Bishop of Edessa were forbidden to be present. Leo Bishop of Rome was also summoned, but not finding it convenient to come himself sent his Legates, who brought with them an Epistle to Flavianus, wherein the Heresie of Eutyches was condemned, and which Dioscorus the President suppressed, not willing it should be read. On the tenth of August the Bishops met, to the Number of about 128, besides some that were onely present by their Legates. Besides Dioscorus the Head of the Faction appeared Juvenalis Bishop of Jerusalem, Domnus of Antioch, Stephen of Ephefus, Flavianus of Constantinople. Dioscorus brought a rout of his own Egyptian Bishops, and procured a Military Guard under Command of Elpidius and Eulogius, moreover a great Company of Eutychian Monks. Men clamorous, importune and audacious, gave their attendance at this Synod, which because all things were carried irregularly, unjustly, and by force and violence in latter Ages, hath obtained the Name of the Ephefine Larociny.

Obtains a Council to be call'd to Ephefus.

Libertus in Breviario. c. 11.

37. Dioscorus the Moderatour would permit no Clerk to take the Acts of the Synod but one of his own making, yet permitted those of his own faction to take what notes they pleased. At the opening of the Assembly was read the Emperour's Letters, wherein he permitted such as had formerly condemned Eutyches in the Synod of Constantinople to be present, but with injunction of silence, because their Acts were now to be examined, he also commanded all things to be done according to the prescript of the Nicene Faith, and that they would doe their utmost to extirpate all Heresie. They confirmed the Nicene Creed, and receiving a Paper from Eutyches, wherein he had written his opinion, after it was read, up stands Dioscorus, and cries out Eutyches his Faith is very good, agreeable to that of the 318 Fathers. Eutyches believeth aright, and we profess the same opinion. Eutyches encouraged by this Patrocinry, makes a long invective against Flavianus, and the late Synod of Constantinople, and complains he was much injured by them. The latter part moved that the Acts of that Synod might be read, but the Legates of Leo first required they would hear his Letters, which yet at the instance of Eutyches was denied, he being jealous of the Legates, because they had been entertained by Flavianus. In short, Eutyches was restored, Wherein Eutyches is reformed, but Flavianus and the Orthodox are excommunicated.

Which is confirmed by Theodosius the Emperor.

Theodosius dies.

Martianus chosen Emperor, who punishes the Sect of Eutychians.

Summons a General Council at Nice in Bithynia.

But removes it to Chalcedon.

reformed, with the Monks of his faction excommunicated justly by Flavianus. Flavianus and Eusebius of Dorylaeum were excommunicated, and the former so cruelly handled, that he died shortly after. The Bishops by Threats and Terror of Death and Tortures, were forced to subscribe to this Sentence. Dionysius Patriarch of Antioch having subscribed, afterward recanted, and for that was condemned and deposed. The same measure had Ibas Bishop of Edessa, Daniel of Carrae, Irenaeus of Tyre, and Aquilinus of Biblus, and Theodoret of Cyrrus, for they ranged as well against those that held the other Extreme, as the Orthodox Bishops. The worst was, Theodosius the Emperor was so overreached by Chrysaphius and others, that he confirmed the Acts of this Pradatorian Assembly by his Imperial Authority, and so this second Oecumenical Ephesine Council, as Baronius styles it, had an end.

38. Leo the Roman Patriarch certified how things were carried in this Assembly summoned a Provincial Synod, wherein was condemned the Heresy of Eutyches, Abba Conc. Chalced. which notwithstanding, Diofcorus the Patriarch of Alexandria, gathering together some of his own Faction and Dependants thundred out the Sentence of Excommunication against Leo himself. Not long after Theodosius the Emperor died, having as Nicephorus writes, given ample Testimony of his Repentance for what he had done in behalf of Eutyches, being convinced and persuaded to abandon that Cause by Pulcheria Augusta his Sister, who moved with Indignation to see how things were carried, returned from her retirement to the care of the publick, and after her Brother's death procured the Empire to be conferred on Martianus. The new Emperor following either his own inclination or the Dictates of his Wife, presently publisheth * an Edict against the Eutychians, on whom he commands the punishments to be inflicted which by former Laws had been decreed against other Hereticks, adding banishment out of the Roman Territories. He recalls the Bishops Confessours out of Exile, and cauleth the body of Flavianus dead in Banishment to be translated to Constantinople. Then doth he consult with Leo Bishop of Rome eminent for his Orthodox Faith as much as the dignity of his See, and at length resolves to call another General Council, at which he intended to be personally present. Leo both in the time of Theodosius and now, had a great desire to have such a Synod called in Italy as appears by several of his Letters to these two Princes, in which he also desires to be executed that he came not himself, and prays them not to take it ill that he sends his Legates. But that Request being judged unreasonable, Martianus by a publick Sanction dated June 22, commands all Bishops to meet at Nice in Bithynia by the first of September next following. Many Prelates came thither accordingly, and expecting his coming, some days petitioned him, that out of respect to their Age and Infirmities he would give order for opening the Council. He still deferred to do it, out of the great desire he had to be present himself, for the Invasion made by Attila into Illyricum gave him work at Constantinople, from which City at length perceiving that he could not be far absent because of this War, he gave order to the Fathers to remove themselves to Chalcedon.

CHAP. VII.

CHAP. VII.

From the Fourth Oecumenical Council summoned by Martianus the Emperor to the City of Chalcedon, to the Deposing of Augustulus, and the Ruine of the Western Empire.

The Space of Twenty five Years.

A General Council held at Chalcedon.

The Persons who met there.

I. THE Fourth General Council summoned by the Emperor Martianus to Chalcedon a City of Bithynia, assembled in the Month of October in the second year of the Reign of that Prince, the 27 of Valentinian the Third, of Old Rome the 1024, of New Rome the 122, the fourth Indiction, 127 years after the first Nicene Synod, 70 after the second General Council called to Constantinople, 20 after the Celebration of the third Oecumenical Synod at Ephesus, of the ordinary Era of Christ the 451, Martianus Augustus and Adelpius being Consuls.

2. From all parts the Bishops assembled to the number of 630, as generally Writers do agree. Here were present as Legates from Leo the Roman Patriarch Paschasius Bishop of Lilybaeum in Sicily, Lucentius of Asculum, with Boniface and Basilus Priests, and Julianus Bishop of Coa. Anatolius Patriarch of Constantinople, who had succeeded Flavianus, here also appeared, as also Diofcorus the Alexandrian Patriarch, Juvenalis Bishop of Jerusalem, Dionysius the late Patriarch of Antioch, and Maximus who enjoyed his place. The African Church and that of the Saracens were not wanting to send their Representatives, Zachary Rhetor reported that Nestorius was summoned to appear, but Euagrius contradicted him, telling us it was plain it could not be so, for that Nestorius was commanded under pain of being accursed, not to shew his face in the Council, which Eustathius Bishop of Berytus wrote plainly in his Letters to John the Bishop and John a Priest, touching the Canons of this Council, wherein he useth these words: There came to the Council such as diligently searched for the Relicks of Nestorius, and with open mouths they exclaimed against the Council. What Reason or Conscience is there that holy men should be accursed? So that the Emperor was greatly incensed against them, and commanded his Guard to set them packing. Wherefore I cannot see (saith Euagrius) how Nestorius being dead should be called to the Council. Sometimes Martianus the Emperor himself with Pulcheria Augusta was also present; but because he could not always be present in person, he deputed certain Secular Judges to execute the usual Imperial Presidency, to see that all things should be done lawfully without Force, Fraud or Tumult. These were Anatolius a Magister Militum, Palladius a Præfæctus Sacrorum, Tatianus the Præfæct of the City, Vincemalis the Magister Sacrorum Officiorum, Count Martialis, Genethlius the Comes Rerum Privatarum, Florentius the Præfæctus Prætorio, Senator Patricius, Patricius Mōnius, Protiogenes the Præfæct, the Præfæct Zoilus, Theodorus, Apollonius, Romanus Præfæctus Sacri Cubiculi, Theodorus Præfæct of Illyricum, Constantinus the Præfæctus Prætoriorum, Artaxerxes the Præfæctus Sacri Cubiculi, and Enlogius Præfæct of Illyricum.

3. On the eighth of October the Bishops met in the Church of St. Euphemia the Martyr, where being placed before the Camelli Altaris (which place Liberatus calls the Secretarium, and thence the several Sessions therein held Secretaria) the Emperor Martianus together with Pulcheria his Empress came into the Synod. He told them he could ingeniously protest that he no sooner came to the Government, but his mind was fully bent to establish the true Religion in the purity and sincerity thereof. That this was the cause of their meeting at this time, from which he promised sed himself all good and just things reasonably to be expected, as from those who would act to the utmost of their duty for purging and clearing the truth of Christian Religion from those Mist and Errors which either the Avarice or Ambition of some light Persons had brought upon it. That they might with more Facility obtain this end he would impose this as a Law upon them that now should dare to dispute or argue concerning the Person of our Lord Jesus Christ contrary to the Faith of the three hundred Fathers laid down in the Nicene Synod. As for himself he assured them he came not thither for the Ostentation of his Power or Authority, but to confirm the Faith, and suppress all strife and dissention that might arise. Having spoken to this purpose the Fathers set about their Synodical Work. At the beginning the Legates of Leo Patriarch of Rome began much to take upon them, willing that Dioscorus the Alexandrian Patriarch might be put out of the Assembly, and said, Either let Dioscorus depart, or we will be gone. The Judges gravely reproved this their unreasonable humour, telling them, If they would be Judges, they must not prosecute as Accusers; neither did they suffer Dioscorus to depart, but commanded him, as was fittest, to sit in the Place of the Rei, or accused Persons. Then did Eusebius of Dorylaeum step forth and accuse him of Injury done to himself as well as the Death of Flavianus, giving into the Synod the Petition he had put up to the Emperor, which being read, together with the Acts of the Ephesine Latrocinium, by all which Dioscorus appeared as well guilty of the Blasphemous opinion of Eutyches as of what Eusebius had laid to his charge. The Synod therefore condemned him, with his principal Assistants: Juvenalis Bishop of Jerusalem, Thalassius of Caesarea, his principal Assistants: Juvenalis Bishop of Jerusalem, Thalassius of Caesarea, Eusebius of Ancyra, Eustathius of Berytus, and Basilus of Seleucia. To the condemnation of Dioscorus, who had been the Ring-leader, the Eastern Bishops most willingly assented, but interceded for such as had been by threats drawn to joyn with him, that their deposition might be suspended. The Synod commands, that the several Bishops should severally and apart make Confessions of their Faith, according to the prescript of the Nicene Synod, and the writings of Basil, Gregory, Hilary, Athanasius, Ambrose, and the two Epistles of Cyril published in the Council of Ephesus. The Action was furnished with Acclamations of the Trifagion to Almighty God, Well-wishes to the Emperor, and Curses against Dioscorus.

B b

Dioscorus Bishop of Alexandria and his Adherents condemned.

Acclamations used at the end of General Councils.

What they were.

4. This Custome of Acclamations in Council at the end of the several Sessions or Conclusion of the Synod seems taken from the practice of the Senate and People, in which Assemblies after the Debate and Consultation ended, extraordinary Acclamations were wont to be made to the Honour of the Emperours. For though the word doth signifie a vocal assent given by any one to what is said by another, yet there were Acclamations extraordinary and solemn made upon certain Occasions, a Cryer or Officer dictating to the Multitude. So Trebellius Pollio tells us in the Life of the Emperor Claudius, that after the reading of his Letters in the Temple of Apollo, it being said, Claudius Augustus, The Gods keep thee, the Assembly acclaimed it sixty times. Claudius Augustus We have ever wisht for thee, or such an one as thou art to be our Prince; this was reiterated forty times. Claudius Augustus The Commonwealth sought after thee; this was repeated forty times. Claudius Augustus thou hast been a good Brother, Father, Friend and Senator, thou art truly a Prince; this was acclaimed eighty times. Claudius Augustus avenge us of Aureolus; five times. Claudius Augustus avenge us of the Palmyrenians, five times. Claudius Augustus deliver us from Zenobia and Victoria; seven times. Claudius Augustus, Tetricus did nothing; seven times. In like manner when Tacitus the Emperor by a Speech in Answer to the Senate, had excused himself by his Old Age from taking upon him the Government, the Senate made these Acclamations: Trajan also came Old to the Imperial Dignity; this Flavius Vespasianus said ten times. Adrian in like manner came Old to the Government; this Tacitus said ten times. In like manner did Antoninus; ten times. Thou also hast read (viz. Virgil Aeneid. 6) Incanque menta Regis Romani; ten times. And who Rules better than an Old Man; ten times. We make thee an Emperor, not a Souldier; twenty times. Do thou give orders, let the Souldiers fight; thirty times. Thou art prudent, and hast a good Brother; ten times. Severus said, The Head ought to Govern, and not the Feet; thirty times. And we make choice of thee for thy Mind, not thy Body; to which they acclaimed twenty times. These forms of Acclamations being Recorded, Historians copied them out of the Rolls, and some Coins have been stamped with a Memorial of them, so much did Princes think they tended to their Fame and Reputation, as in a medal of the Emperor Constantius, wherein is read, Gaudium Populi Romani, or The Joy of the Roman People; being words of Acclamations whereby the People testified the publick

Joy,

Joy, and within a laurel Crown, scilicet V. scilicet X. or sic Quinquies, sic Sexies, that so fix, or seven times the People acclaimed. Trifanus mentions a medal of Constantine the Emperor with the same notes, which he interprets, scilicet Quinquennialia, sic Decennialia, and indeed Antiquaries took no notice of these Acclamations expressed upon Coins, till Jacobus Christellus began to observe them, as appears in his Book called Anastasis Childerici.

The design of them.

5. No wonder then that in so Solemn and Holy Assemblies, wherein the Prayers of the Faithfull availed much, such Religious Acclamations should be made, expressing praise and glory to Almighty God, and prayers for the welfare of the Emperours, the nursing Fathers of his Church. It was the ancient Custome of the Eastern Churches to handle matters in Councils in a publick meeting of all, and upon occasion popular Acclamations did often happen, and sometimes tumultuous, which notwithstanding did conclude in concord, and in the end the Bishops transported with Joy, for the uniform Determinations, did pass to Acclamations, in praise of the Emperours, who had assembled and favoured the Council, in commendation of the Doctrine declared by it, in prayers to God for his continual aid and assistance afforded to his Church, for the welfare of the Emperours, and the health and prosperity of the Bishops, which were not premeditated, but as the Spirit did excite some Bishops more zealous to break out freely into some of these Expressions, so the multitude acclaimed or cried with him. This was imitated of late in Trent, yet not giving place to the extemporary Spirit of any, but meditating what should be propoed and answered, and repeating it out of a Paper, the Cardinal of Lorraine took upon him to be the Præco or Cryer, not only being chief in composing the Acclamations, but thundering them out also, which was generally accounted lightness and vanity, not becoming such a Prelate and Prince to doe an Office belonging rather to the Deacons of the Council, than to so principal an Archbishop and Cardinal. But the Cardinal roared, and the Tridentine Fathers answered such things as will not edify the Reader to know, and if he please he may find them in the excellent History of that pretended General Council. Thus much by the way concerning Acclamations, once for all, and perhaps not unprofitably.

In the second Meeting Dioscorus is Banished to Gangra.

In the third the Bishops give an account of their Faith.

In the fourth Session the Bishops are required to subscribe the Epistle of Leo.

6. At the second Meeting, Eusebius Bishop of Dorylaeum renewed his complaint as well in behalf of Flavianus as himself, and after several things petitioned, desired that Dioscorus might be summoned to answer for himself, for this second time, he had not appeared. Three several times was he summoned by three Bishops and a Notary, but as often excused himself, and in the mean time came certain Priests and Deacons of his own Church, accusing him as well of Blasphemy as Robbing them of their Goods. Upon this occasion being summoned again, and refusing to appear, he was condemned as Contumacious, and deposed; the Legates of Leo by the consent of the Synod pronouncing the Sentence, wherein they attributed enough to his Authority that sent them. With these things the Emperor was made acquainted, and under his Authority the form of Deposition was sent to Dioscorus, who was Banished to Gangra a City of Paphlagonia, and his Sentence being written to the several Churches, was confirmed by Imperial Authority. On the thirteenth of October was the third Session held, wherein most of what had formerly passed being repeated, the several Bishops were commanded to give an account of their Faith. Florentius Bishop of Sardis as wavering, desired respite, but Cecropius Bishop of Sebastopolis publicly declared his Faith to the Fathers, asserting that of the Nicene Council confirmed by the Fathers, and lately by Leo the Roman Patriarch. After this were read and approved the Nicene Creed, the Decree of the Synod of Constantinople, wherein the Heresie of Eutyches had been condemned, the Faith of the First Ephesine Council held against Nestorius, the two Epistles written by Cyril to Nestorius and John Patriarch of Antioch, with the Confession of the said John approved by Cyril, in which writings the middle and safe way betwixt the errors of Nestorius and Eutyches was pointed out. Next was read and approved the Epistle of Leo to Flavianus. Then whereas some Bishops doubted concerning some expressions in Cyril's Letters, by the advice of Anatolius certain Bishops who had already subscribed were appointed to explain and give satisfaction to such as staggered.

7. The Fourth Session was held on the seventeenth of October, wherein first it was demanded by the Secular Judges, Whether the Nicene Faith, and the Decree of the Synod of Constantinople were agreeable to the Epistle of Leo, to which an Answer being given in the affirmative, the Bishops were required to subscribe it, for therein being plainly and expressly condemned the Heresie of

B b 2

Eutyches

Eutyches this was judged a more certain expedient to try the minds of the Fathers; forasmuch as such as are content to close with the more general expressions of a Council and wrest them to their own sense cannot so easily evade the drift of a particular Paper destined to the Condemnation of an Heterodox opinion. Then were admitted into the Synod, ten Egyptian Bishops, and the Confession of Faith which they had written to the Emperor was read, wherein they professed to embrace the Doctrine of the Apostles, the Nicene Creed, with the Faith of Atanasius, Theophilus and Cyril. Condemning all Heresies, particularly those of Arius, Eunomius, the Manichees, Nestorius and such as affirmed the flesh of Christ to have come from Heaven; not to have been truly Born of the Virgin Mary, which was indeed the Doctrine of Eutyches. The Synod command them to subscribe the Epistle of Leo, but they refused it, denying that they represented all the Egyptian Bishops, wherefore they would not prescribe to them, nor could they do it legally having no Archbishop since the deposing of Dioscorus. The Synod had well nigh pronounced a rash sentence against the Bishops, crying out that they were Heretical. But the Judges knowing well that they forbore to subscribe because of a Custom they had that they might do nothing without their Patriarch not then chosen, and not as thinking Heretically in the Faith, moderated the Synod, telling the Fathers that to them it seemed reasonable and agreeable to good nature not to condemn them but stay till their Patriarch be chosen, to whose grave and sober sentence the Synod consented, making a Canon for their sake and forbidding that in case they would give security not to depart out of the City, or that as soon as they had a Patriarch chosen, they would subscribe, they should be disappointed with as to present subscription. At the end of this Session several Eutychian Monks petitioned the Synod and made great stir about Dioscorus, their Patriarch, being Headed by Barfamas the principal Archimandrita. But the Fathers after much contention found reason still to Anathematize Dioscorus and cast out their Petition, giving the Monks three days time to consider and revoke their Heretical Tenents.

8. In the fifth Session more contention happened about the Person of Dioscorus whom Anatolius if possible would have cleared as to the Crime of Heresy. The Emperor perceiving there was no end to be expected in those personal causes, and that the Bishops spent all there time therein, ordained that six Eastern Bishops, three of Pontus, three of Asia, three of Thrace, and as many of Illyricum, together with Anatolius and the Legates of Leo should consult together and lay down such a form of Faith as the rest should own and subscribe. A form of Faith they accordingly composed in writing, whereof the first part contained a censure of the Heresies of Nestorius, Eutyches and the Macedonians. To the Condemnation of their opinions was added a confession of Faith to this purpose: according to the example of the Holy Fathers, *We confess one and the same Son of God, Christ our Lord, and unanimously affirm him perfect in the Divinity, and perfect in Humanity: true God and true Man, having both a rational Soul and Body: Coessential with the Father according to Divinity, and Coessential to us according to Humanity, in all things like to us, sin excepted: begot of his Father before all Ages, as to his Divinity: in these last times for us and for our Salvation manifested, being born of the Virgin Mary the Mother of God according to Humanity, one and the same Jesus Christ the Son of God, the Lord and only begotten, in two Natures, without confusion, conversion, divulsion or separation: the difference of Natures being no wise taken away by unity, but rather the propriety of both Natures concurring to one Person, and one Subsistence being preserved, not that he is parted or divided into two Persons, but is one and the same only begotten Son, God the word, and our Lord Jesus Christ, and in old time the Prophets foretold, Christ himself hath taught us and the Fathers have delivered to us. This being read, the whole Synod acclaimed: This is the Faith of all the Fathers, let the Metropolitans subscribe it, this is the Faith of the Apostles, let us all follow this: we are all of this Judgment. Then did the Synod decree that what had so universally passed and pleased the Fathers should be reported to the Emperor Martianus. Notwithstanding this final Accord, in making the Definition of Faith, a great dissention there was in the Synod, some would have it one way, some another way set down, inasmuch that the Legates of Leo were ready to make a Schism, to depart from the Council and hold another Synod by themselves. The glorious Judges then (as they are styled) proposed this proper expedient to have the matter peaceably debated and concluded. But outcries and Tumults prevailing, the Judges complained of these disorders to the Emperor, and Martianus enjoined them to follow the direction*

The Eutychian Monks Petition for Dioscorus rejected.

In the fifth Session a Confession of Faith composed.

rection of the Judges, wherein they obeyed him, and so at length came to a full conclusion and definition of Faith.

9. At their sixth meeting came Martianus with the Empress into the Synod where he spoke to the Fathers first in Latin (according to the Custom of preferring the repute and grandeur of Old Rome, and then in Greek to the same purpose as formerly. After he had made an end, Aetius the Archdeacon of Constantinople, in the name of the Synod briefly recounted what had been hitherto done, and then read a writing which declared the Faith of the Fathers to be agreeable to that form we lately mentioned. The Emperor demanded if that was the Act and Judgment of the whole Synod, and upon answer that it was, and that they all believed accordingly, he published his Edict importing that whereas the Catholic Faith was now explained, and defined by the holy and universal Synod, according to what had been delivered by the Apostles and Fathers, he thought it necessary to cut off for the future all occasions of disputes in matters of Religion. Therefore he commanded and declared that no Person whatsoever whether Clerk, Soldier or others (called Idiotæ, Plebeians or private Persons) should move any question publicly concerning the Faith, under Pain of Banishment to a private Person, to Clerks and Military Men or of the Senatorial rank loss of their Degree and Dignity, with other penalties. This was applauded by several Acclamations of Many years to the Emperor, Many years to the pious and Christian Augustus, Many years to the Orthodox Empress, and Anathema to Dioscorus, and the like. After this he told them there were certain things which he thought fit to propound to them as for their nature being proper for their Cognizance, which respecting Clerks and Religious Persons we shall mention when we come to speak of the third, fourth and fifth Canons of this Council. Enagrius writes that the Emperor now commanded the Bishops to continue there three or four days more, and prepare more matter such as they should think to be expedient. And they staid not only three or four days but many more, new matter still arising before them.

In the sixth Meeting it is confirmed by the Edicts of the Emperor.

In the seventh Session an Agreement betwixt Maximus Bishop of Antioch and Juvenalis Bishop of Jerusalem, was propounded to the Fathers and ratified. The Reader must know the Bishop of Jerusalem had long before this time the mere Name and Title of a Patriarch as both Bellarmino and Binius acknowledge, and though his See was but a single Bishoprick, Subject, as both St. Jerome and the Nicene Council declare, to the Bishop of Antioch as Patriarch.

10. In the seventh Session an Agreement betwixt Maximus Bishop of Antioch and Juvenalis Bishop of Jerusalem, was propounded to the Fathers and ratified. The Reader must know the Bishop of Jerusalem had long before this time the mere Name and Title of a Patriarch as both Bellarmino and Binius acknowledge, and though his See was but a single Bishoprick, Subject, as both St. Jerome and the Nicene Council declare, to the Bishop of Antioch as Patriarch. and to the Bishop of Cæsarea Palestina as Metropolitan, yet out of respect to our Saviour he had the name of a Patriarch, and place in Councils above the Bishop of Cæsarea. But the Authority and power of a Patriarch he had now by Decree and Judgment of this Council of Chalcedon. Juvenalis had moved about it in the Epheſus Council; but the Patriarch of Antioch as it seemeth, faith our Dr. Crakanhorp, being unwilling to manumit him, and as it were free him from his subjection, Cyril resisted it, and wrote to Pope Leo to doe the like. But after long contention both parties being fatigued, the matter was in this Session brought to this Council before which Maximus and Juvenalis professed they were both willing that the Bishop of Antioch should hold the two Phœnicia's and Arabia, and the Bishop of Jerusalem the three Palestina's, and they both desired the Synod to decree, confirm and ratifie their Agreement. The whole Council upon their Petition ratified it, all the Bishops crying, We all say the same and consent thereunto. And after them the most glorious Judges in the Emperor's name added the imperial Authority and Royal assent to their Decree, saying, This by our Decree and Judgment of the Council shall abide firm for ever, that the Church of Antioch have under it the two Phœnicia's with Arabia, and the Church of Jerusalem have under it the three Palestina's. Enagrius witnesseth that this Agreement betwixt Juvenalis and Maximus after Consultation had both by the Judges and Bishops was confirmed. Nicephorus testifieth the same. So untrue it is that William of Tyre and from him Baronius voucheth that the Church of Jerusalem was first made a Patriarchal See or had the Provinces and Metropolitans of Cæsarea and Seythopolis annexed unto it by the fifth Council, that it is undoubtedly certain, that it had together with the Title and Dignity, true Patriarchal Authority and power over divers Provinces with their inferior Bishops conferred upon it, by a plenary consent of the whole Church in this Council of Chalcedon.

Lib. 2. c. ult.

Lib. de Pontif. Rom. l. 1. c. 24. Ad Epist. Anacleti 3. Rom. l. Cone. 3. ad Conc. Nic. c. 7. Ep. ad Pam. machium. Conc. Nic. c. 7. Of the fifth Council, ch. 31. Council Ep. 62. Art. 7. p. 105.

Lib. 3. c. ult. Hieronymus. Nic. Celsus lib. 15. c. 30.

Suggestur Imperatori Clamores isti.

Which is fully objected against by Ba-ronius and Binus.

11. That you may see the shamefull dealing both of Baronius and Binus in another place (Reader they are Crackanthorp's words) where their Choler against the fifth Council was not moved they acknowledge that truth, for intreating of the Council at Chalcedon, In this seventh Session, saith Baronius, and the like doth Binus, was the controversie composed betwixt the Bishops of Antioch and Jerusalem, and the cause being judged, the two Phœnicia's and Arabia, were given to the Bishop of Antioch, and the three Palestines were adjudged to the Bishop of Jerusalem, whence it doth evidently appear that the right of the Metropolis which before belonged to the Bishop of Cæsarea was translated to the Bishop of Jerusalem. So they, who yet in hatred against the Acts of the fifth Council (the reasons of their hatred shall be declared in due place) with Faces of Adamant deny that truth which here upon this occasion they confesse to be clear and conspicuous. But the Cardinal objecteth that this Decree of Chalcedon was made Post absentiam Legatorum, when the Popes Legates were now gone, and so they being absent, is to be held invalid. O the forehead of the Cardinal! were the Popes Legates absent? were they gone? Truly they were not onely present at this Decree and consenting to it, but after it was propoed by Maximus and Juvenalis, they were the very first that gave sentence therein, the Council following their sentence. For thus runs the Act, 7. p. 105. Pachasinus and Lucentius the most Reverend Bishops, and Boniface the Prefbyter holding the place of the Apostolic See, said by Pachasinus; Those things betwixt Maximus and Juvenalis are known to be done for their good, and peace, & nostræ humilitatis interloquutiones firmantur, and are confirmed by the Interloquution of our humilitas, ut nulla in posterum in hac causa sit contentio, that never hereafter there should be any contention about this matter betweene these Churches. Is it credible that the Cardinal should be so audacious and impudent as to utter such palpable untruths? unless he had quite put off, I say not Modesty, but Reason, Sense, and almost Humane Nature.

12. Baronius following on his charge, in the second place objecteth that Pope Leo himself withstood this Decree of this Council of Chalcedon, because it was prejudicial to the Rights of other Churches, and by reason of his Averseness, it was not put in Execution as it was after the Decree of the fifth Synod, Dr. Crackanthorp coming in here also to the relief of the Council, affirmeth that had the Cardinal and his Friends been well advised they would have been afraid and much ashamed once to mention the resistance of Pope Leo, to the Council of Chalcedon, either in these Patriarchs or the other of Constantinople: for first, the resistance of Leo which was merely ineffectual, demonstrates that the Popes contradiction, with all his might and power, can neither disannul nor infringe the Judgment of a general Council, which is no small prejudice to his principality or Princely Supremacy. Again it convinceth Leo of a very foul and inexcusable Error, judging the Nicene Canons concerning matters of Order, Polity, and Government of the Church (such are these concerning the extent of Sees or Superiority of one Bishop above another) to be unalterable and Eternal, no less than the Decrees of Faith. The condition, saith he, of the Nicene Canons (pointing in the margin to the sixth and seventh both which concern the Limits of Sees) is diversing ordained by the Spirit of God, is in no part soluble; and whatsoever is diversing from their constitution, omni penitus auctoritate vacuum est, is utterly void of all Authority by whomsoever it be Decreed. Much more in this and the following Epistle he addeth to the same purpose. Particularly concerning Juvenalis who was truly at this time made a Patriarch, for keeping the Statutes of the Holy Fathers, which in the Nicene Synod are confirmed inviolabilibus decretis by Inviolable Decrees, I admonish your Holiness saith he, that the Laws of the Churches may continue, let no Man's Ambition cover what's another Man's, let no Man seek by impairing another to advance himself, for though they seek Assistance from Councils, Infirmum atq; Irritum erit quicquid a prædictorum Patrum Canonibus discrepat; whatsoever differs from these Nicene Canons shall be void. And to Maximus Bishop of Antioch; Let it suffice that I pronounce this in general, ad omnia, as to all matters, concerning Limits of Sees and the like, that, If any thing be attempted by any Man, in any Synod against the Statutes of the Nicene Canons, nihil præjudicii potest inviolabilibus inferre decretis, It can bring no prejudice to these unalterable and inviolable Decrees. Thus Leo erroneously judging the order prescribed in the Nicene Canons for the bounds and pre-eminence of Bishops to be Eternal, and not to be altered by any Council whatsoever.

13. Be-

13. Behold the wisdom of the Cardinal in alledging Pope Leo. If the Decree of Chalcedon was not of force because Leo contradicted it, then neither can that other Decree, supposed to be made in the fifth Council, be effectual, because Leo contradicted it also, seeing that by the Judgment of Leo, at no time, by no Person, by no Council, by no Authority can the order of Nice be changed. If this at Chalcedon was not in force, to which the Pope's Legates consented, how can the Cardinal think that of the fifth Council to be of force, to which neither Pope nor Legate consented, nor was so much as present in the Council? If the Judgment of Leo stand for good, then neither is, nor ever was either Constantinople or Jerusalem Patriarchal Sees; and then the Decree of the eighth Council and the Lateran, and I know not how many more must be rejected as unlawful and Impious. If the Judgment of Leo be (as by their eighth Council and the Lateran it is adjudged) Erroneous, then was Jerusalem a Patriarchal See, notwithstanding the contradiction of Leo to that Decree. In a word, if Leo his Judgment be of force, it repeals the Decree of the fifth, eighth, and all other General Councils decreeing this; if it be not of force, it neither did nor could infringe the Decree of Chalcedon. But to satisfy the Cardinal yet a little more fully, it is an untruth which he saith, that the Decree of Chalcedon was not put in Execution, before the time of the fifth Synod and the supposed Decree thereof. For this Council of Chalcedon decreed that their sentence in advancing Jerusalem to a Patriarchal See, should stand in force in omni tempore, and therefore doubtless even then, and from that very time it was truly a Patriarchal See, the contradiction of Leo no more hindering it the very next or second year, than it did two Hundred or two Thousand years after that Decree made. Again, as it is certain that the See of Constantinople both before and after the Decree of Chalcedon (which was not introductive but confirmative in that point) exercised Patriarchal Authority, Justinian also by his Imperial Law made some twelve years before the fifth Council confirming the same; so it is not to be doubted but the Church of Jerusalem did the very like in it's own Patriarchal Diocese, especially considering that Justinian's Imperial Law is as forcible for the one as the other. So that for any one to have denied, or sought then to have infringed the Patriarchal Authority confirmed to Constantinople, conferred to Jerusalem by this Council of Chalcedon, had brought him into danger, not onely of the Ecclesiastical censure; but of civil punishment with the Emperours high indignation.

14. But if the Cardinal will not be satisfied, unless he see the practice of that Patriarchal Authority, let him look into the General Council under Mennas, and there he shall see John Bishop of Jerusalem, hold a Provincial Synod of the Bishops of the three Palestines, qui sub eo sunt, who were under him, two whereof as by their subscriptions appear, were the Metropolitan Bishops of Cæsarea and Scythopolis, with thirty more; so many were then subject to the Patriarch of Jerusalem. Again in another Provincial Synod held at Jerusalem in the tenth year of Justinian, Peter Patriarch of Jerusalem, was President over all the Bishops of the three Palestines there assembled with him, two of which were the afore said Metropolitans. So untrue it is, which Baronius to maintain the false Testimony of Gulf. Tyrius avoucheth, that this Decree of Chalcedon was not put in Execution, before the fifth Council. Another untruth is, that which he pretends in his Fragments of the Fifth Council, that it had no other means to rect this Patriarchship of Jerusalem, but by taking part from both those of Antioch and Alexandria; for there was another means as both the Decree of Chalcedon, and the Event did shew, and nothing at all was taken from that of Alexandria. That is also as false as the rest, that the Fathers took from Alexandria the Metropolitan Sees and Provinces of Ruba and Berithus, for neither of these Sees belonged to the Patriarch of Alexandria, but of Antioch. Of them both Berithus (reusing this Fragment, at which the Cardinal and Binus so gladly snatch) saith, Certainly Ruba is placed by Ptolemy in Syria, and it's manifest that Berithus is the Metropolis of Phœnicie near Libanus: Syria autem & Phœnicia orientis Provincia omnibus nota sunt: Now that Syria and Phœnicia were Provinces of the East (and consequently belonging to the See of Antioch) all do know. For Berithus the matter is certain that it is not near the Limits of Alexandria; for that it is in the Province of Phœnicia, not only Ptolemy shews, but the Subscriptions of the Bishops, both in the Nicene, the first Constantinopolitan and Chalcedon Councils, in all which the Bishop of Berithus is set in the Province of Phœnicia; whence another untruth is to be observed in that Fragment of Tyrius, which saith that Berithus was granted to the new Patriarch of Jerusalem; whereas whereas it is clear, that it was in Phœnicia, and that the two Phœnicia's, both by the Agreement of Maximus and Juvenalis, and by this Decree of this Council of Chalcedon, did belong to the See and Bishop of Antioch, and not of Jerusalem.

15. In the eighth Session Theodore, the Bishop of Cyprus came to clear himself, and to be reconciled to the Church. Hitherto he had been received and admitted by the Synod no otherwise than as Plaintiff, accusing Dioscorus, for injuriously ousting him of his See, and placing another in it. For when he first came into the Council the Bishops of Egypt, Illyricum and Palestine exclaimed against him, crying The Canons exclude this Man, out with him, thrust out the Master of Nestorius, the Orthodox Council doth not receive Theodore, call him not a Bishop, he is no Bishop, he is a Fighter against God, he is a Jew, out with him; he accused, he anathematized Cyril; If we admit him we reject Cyril. The Canons exclude him, God detesteth him. Knowing him to have formerly embraced and defended the Nestorian Heresie, they would not be satisfied otherwise than by the appointment of the Judges, he should sit only as an Accuser of Dioscorus, not as one having Judicatory Power, or a decisive Voice, till his own cause should come to be heard and thoroughly examined. Now in this eighth Session when he appeared for this purpose, no sooner was he espied but the Bishops cried out again, Let Theodore forthwith anathematize Nestorius, let him do it speedily and without delay. He offered to them a Paper containing a Confession of his Faith, but they refused to hear it. Then began he at large to clear himself, telling them he came thither out of a sense he had, that he was calumniated as if he had taught Heresie, that as he had been bred and educated amongst the Orthodox, so he had ever taught, being averse to Nestorius, Eutyches and all others who held false and heterodox Opinions. But as he was proceeding, the Synod suspecting that he used these delays as unwilling to anathematize Nestorius, cried out, He is an Heretic, He is a Nestorian, put out the Heretic, and out they had put him, but that leaving all Circution and delay, he presently cried out Anathema to Nestorius, and to them that either do not confess Mary the Virgin to be the Mother of God, or divide the one only begotten Son into two. He told them also, that he subscribed to the Definition of Faith, and the Epistle of Leo the most Holy Archbishop. With this the Synod was fully satisfied, the glorious Judges saying, Now all doubt is quite removed concerning Theodore, and receiving him into Communion as Orthodox restored him to his See, of which in the Ephefine Latrocity he had been ousted, all crying out, Theodore is worthy of his See, let the Church receive their Orthodox Pastour, To Theodore a Catholick Doctour, let the Church be restored.

16. In the Ninth Session was examined the Cause of Ibas Bishop of Edessa, who had also been deposed by Dioscorus and his Ephefine Junctio. He had formerly held the Heresie of Nestorius, and after the Union betwixt Cyril and John, had written a Letter full fraught of Heresie and Blasphemy, to Maris a Persian. About this his Heresie a Synod was held at Berithus, before Photius, Eustathius and Urbanus, where the Epistle and Contents thereof were condemned. But being commanded to embrace the first Ephefine Synod, which that impious Epistle rejected, and to condemn and accurse Nestorius with his Followers commanded by that Epistle, he conformed himself to their order, professing that he believed as the Letters of Cyril unto John did teach, and that he consented to all things done by the first Ephefine Synod, accounting their Judgment as inspired by the Holy Ghost. Moreover, at the Instance of Photius and Eustathius he published in Writing, what he now professed for full satisfaction of such as had been scandalized by his former Doctrine. And on his own accord he promised before these Judges, that he would in his own Church at Edessa, and that publicly accurse Nestorius as the Ringleader in that Impious Heresie, and those also who were of his Judgment, or who used his Books or Writings. The Acts of these matters being read in Council, Eunomius told the Fathers that seeing in posterioribus or in postremis, Ibas had made a right Confession, (though he did formerly write against Cyril and the Faith) he judged him worthy of his Bishoprick, provided he accursed Nestorius, Eutyches with their wicked Heresies, and consented to the Writings of Leo, and this General Council. Now the Orthodox Confession of Ibas made before Photius and Eustathius, the accusing of Nestorius and his Heresie, and the embracing of the Ephefine Council is that which Eunomius calleth posteriora or postrema, as following by many years, not only that which Ibas did or said before the Union made between John and Cyril, but even that impious Epistle written

In the 8th Theodore Bishop of Cyprus anathematizing Nestorianism is restored.

In the Ninth Ibas Bishop of Edessa reconciling his Heresie.

At 8. Nihil religii colamus, anathematizamus Nestorium.

At 9. Conc. Chalced. At 8. p. 108. d.

written after the Union. By this Confession being posterior, or later, than the Epistle, Ibas had refuted all for which he was formerly blamed, in effect refusing, condemning and accusing that whole Epistle with all the Heresies and Blasphemies in all parts thereof. For this Cause, and in regard of this Holy Confession, the fifth Council afterwards said, that thereby Ibas had anathematized his own Epistle, being in every part of it contrary to the Faith, both in the beginning and the end.

17. That this was the meaning of Eunomius, the Interlocution of Eusebius, Bishop of Angra, in this same Council of Chalcedon doth make apparent, who expressly mentioning these Acts before Photius and Eustathius, and the Confession of Ibas then made (called by Eunomius Posteriora) said thus in the following Session, to which the Conclusion of this matter was adjourned: The reading of that Judgment before Photius and Eustathius doth shew, that Ibas in that Judgment accursed Nestorius with his impious Doctrines, and consented to the true Faith. Wherefore I receive him for a Bishop, if he do now condemn Nestorius. This was applauded by Diogenes Bishop of Cyzicus, Thalasius of Cæsarea, John of Sebastia, to which all acclaimed, We all say the same. So clear it is, that upon this Confession of Ibas made first before Photius and Eustathius, and after that by this whole Council of Chalcedon, and not upon his Epistle nor any part first or last thereof, Ibas was acknowledged and received as a Catholick. Whereby appeareth not only the Errour, but extreme fraud of Baronius, who in excuse of Vigilius, not only affirmeth an heretical Untruth, that the latter part of the Epistle is Orthodox, but labours to uphold that untruth by malicious perverting and falsifying, both the words and meaning of Eunomius, as if he had said or meant by the Posteriora, the latter end of that Epistle. This and more in Confirmation of the Cardinal about that Epistle, and in defence of the Fifth Council, and the Acts thereof the Reader may see in the Book of Dr. Crakanthorp formerly mentioned, and we shall have too much occasion again to speak of this Subject. As for Nomus who had been put into Ibas's place, the Synod referred it to the Bishop of Antioch to take care of him. The most glorious Judges confirmed what the Synod had done, saying, that what the Holy Council had judged concerning the Reverend Bishop Ibas, should retain its own Strength. And so ended the Tenth Session.

18. At the Eleventh Meeting the Synod decreed all things, which had been done in the Ephefine Latrocity under Dioscorus, should be void and of no effect, the Ordination of Maximus Bishop of Antioch excepted, and they petitioned the Emperor, that such things as there had passed should not be taken for Authentical. At this Session also contended Stephen and Bassianus, about the Bishoprick of Antioch, both challenging it as his due, and recriminating each other. The Emperor upon the earnest Petition of Bassianus, commanded the Synod to examine the Cause. The Fathers were so much divided in their opinions, that they were forced to put it off till their next Meeting. Yet would they generally have given Sentence for Bassianus, saying that Equity and Right called for him to be Bishop of the place; but the glorious Judges considering more seriously, and seeing farther into the matter, thought that neither of them both could indeed be Bishop, and the whole Council directed by them altered their Opinion, and said, This is a just Sentence, this is the very Judgment of God. It was therefore resolved that both of them should be removed from the See of Ephefus, yet so that they still retained the Episcopal Dignity, and to each should be paid out of that Church, the Annual stipend of 200 Solidi for their maintenance. Now a Solidus after the time of Constantine, as our Learned Brierwood hath observed, was worth of our Money Eight Shillings Six-pence Halfpenny Farthing, and Six parts of a Farthing, till the time of Valentinian, who increased it to the Value of just ten Shillings. At the thirteenth Session was composed, the difference betwixt Eunomius Bishop of Nicomedia and Anastasius of Nice, by a Decree, that forasmuch as Nicomedia had ever been the Metropolis, and Nice had only obtained that Title by favour of Princes, the Metropolitan Rights should be, and continue in the See of Nicomedia, according to the Ancient Canons. The fourteenth Meeting was employed in the Cause of Athanasius Bishop of Paros, who being accused of sundry Crimes, had been summoned before a Provincial Synod called to Antioch by Domnus Bishop of that See, to whose Patriarchal Authority the Bishoprick of Paros was subject. Refusing to come though thrice cited to appear, he was deposed by that Synod, and Sabinianus put into his place. In this Session he complained of wrongfull Extruition, and petitioned the

Is restored in the tenth by the Fathers.

In the eleventh the Ephefine Latrocity under Dioscorus, should be void and of no effect.

At the twelfth the Contest between Stephen and Bassianus decided.

At the thirteenth the difference betwixt Eunomius Bishop of Nicomedia, and Anastasius of Nice composed. In the fourteenth the Cause of Athanasius Bishop of Paros decided.

Cell. 6. p. 564.

In Greek Nominis Roman. c. 15.

C c

Council,

whereas it is clear, that it was in Phœnicia, and that the two Phœnicia's, both by the Agreement of Maximus and Juvenalis, and by this Decree of this Council of Chalcedon, did belong to the See and Bishop of Antioch, and not of Jerusalem.

15. In the eighth Session Theodoret, the Bishop of Cyrrus came to clear himself, and to be reconciled to the Church. Hitherto he had been received and admitted by the Synod no otherwise than as Plaintiff, accusing Dioscorus, for injuriously ousting him of his See, and placing another in it. For when he first came into the Council the Bishops of Egypt, Illyricum and Palestine exclaimed against him, crying The Canons exclude this Man, out with him, thrust out the Master of Nestorius, the Orthodox Council doth not receive Theodoret, call him not a Bishop, he is no Bishop, he is a Fighter against God, he is a Jew, out with him; he accused, he anathematized Cyril; If we admit him we reject Cyril. The Canons exclude him, God detesteth him. Knowing him to have formerly embraced and defended the Nestorian Heresie, they would not be satisfied otherwise than by the appointment of the Judges, he should sit only as an Accuser of Dioscorus, not as one having Judicatory Power, or a decisive Voice, till his own cause should come to be heard and thoroughly examined. Now in this eighth Session when he appeared for this purpose, no sooner was he espied but the Bishops cried out again, Let Theodoret forthwith anathematize Nestorius, let him do it speedily and without delay. He offered to them a Paper containing a Confession of his Faith, but they refused to hear it. Then began he at large to clear himself, telling them he came thither out of a sense he had, that he was calumniated as if he had taught Heresie, that as he had been bred and educated amongst the Orthodox, so he had ever taught, being averse to Nestorius, Eutyches and all others who held false and heterodox Opinions. But as he was proceeding, the Synod suspecting that he used these delays as unwilling to anathematize Nestorius, cried out, He is an Heretick, He is a Nestorian, put out the Heretick, and out they had put him, but that leaving all Circution and delay, he presently cried out Anathema to Nestorius, and to them that either do not confess Mary the Virgin to be the Mother of God, or divide the one onely begotten Son into two. He told them also, that he subscribed to the Definition of Faith, and the Epistle of Leo the most Holy Archbishop. With this the Synod was fully satisfied, the glorious Judges saying, Now all doubt is quite removed concerning Theodoret, and receiving him into Communion as Orthodox restored him to his See, of which in the Ephefine Latrocinie he had been ousted, all crying out, Theodoret is worthy of his See, let the Church receive their Orthodox Pastour, To Theodoret a Catholick Doctour, let the Church be restored.

16. In the Ninth Session was examined the Cause of Ibas Bishop of Edessa, who had also been depofed by Dioscorus and his Ephefine Juncto. He had formerly held the Heresie of Nestorius, and after the Union betwixt Cyril and John, had written a Letter full fraught of Heresie and Blasphemy, to Maris a Persian. About this his Heresie a Synod was held at Berithus, before Photius, Eustathius and Oraninus, where the Epistle and Contents thereof were condemned. But being commanded to embrace the first Ephefine Synod, which that impious Epistle rejected, and to condemn and accurse Nestorius with his Followers commanded by that Epistle, he conformed himself to their order, professing that he believed as the Letters of Cyril unto John did teach, and that he consented to all things done by the first Ephefine Synod, accounting their Judgment as inspired by the Holy Ghost. Moreover, at the Instance of Photius and Eustathius he published in Writing, what he now professed for full satisfaction of such as had been scandalized by his former Doctrine. And on his own accord he promised before these Judges, that he would in his own Church at Edessa, and that publicly accurse Nestorius as the Ringleader in that Impious Heresie, and those also who were of his Judgment, or who used his Books or Writings. The Acts of these matters being read in Council, Eunomius told the Fathers that seeing in posterioribus or in postremis, Ibas had made a right Confession, (though he did formerly write against Cyril and the Faith) he judged him worthy of his Bishoprick, provided he accursed Nestorius, Eutyches with their wicked Heresies, and consented to the Writings of Leo, and this General Council. Now the Orthodox Confession of Ibas made before Photius and Eustathius, the accursing of Nestorius and his Heresie, and the embracing of the Ephefine Council is that which Eunomius calleth posteriora or postrema, as following by many years, not onely that which Ibas did or said before the Union made between John and Cyril, but even that impious Epistle written

In the 8th Theodoret Bishop of Cyrrus anathematizing Nestorius is restored.

At p. 6.

At 8. Nihil relegi volumus, anathematizet Nestorium.

In the Ninth Ibas Bishop of Edessa re-nouncing his Heresie.

Apud AB. Conc. Chalced. At p. 108. d.

written after the Union. By this Confession being posterioris, or later, than the Epistle, Ibas had refuted all for which he was formerly blamed, in effect reluting, condemning and accursing that whole Epistle with all the Heresies and Blasphemies in all parts thereof. For this Cause, and in regard of this Holy Confession, the fifth Council afterwards said, that thereby Ibas had anathematized his own Epistle, being in every part of it contrary to the Faith, both in the beginning and the end.

17. That this was the meaning of Eunomius, the Interlocution of Eusebius, Bishop of Angra, in this same Council of Chalcedon doth make apparent, who expressly mentioning these Acts before Photius and Eustathius, and the Confession of Ibas then made (called by Eunomius Posteriora) said thus in the following Session, to which the Conclusion of this matter was adjourned: The reading of that Judgment before Photius and Eustathius doth shew, that Ibas in that Judgment accursed Nestorius with his impious Doctrines, and consented to the true Faith. Wherefore I receive him for a Bishop, if he do now condemn Nestorius. This was applauded by Diogenes Bishop of Cyzicus, Thalassius of Cæsarea, John of Sebastia, to which all acclaimed, We all say the same. So clear it is, that upon this Confession of Ibas made first before Photius and Eustathius, and after that by this whole Council of Chalcedon, and not upon his Epistle nor any part first or last thereof, Ibas was acknowledged and received as a Catholick. Whereby appeareth not onely the Errour, but extreme fraud of Baronius, who in excuse of Virgilius, not onely affirmeth an heretical Untruth, that the latter part of the Epistle is Orthodox, but labours to uphold that untruth by malicious perverting and falsifying, both the words and meaning of Eunomius, as if he had said or meant by the Posteriora, the latter end of that Epistle. This and more in Confirmation of the Cardinal about that Epistle, and in defence of the Fifth Council, and the Acts thereof the Reader may see in the Book of Dr. Crakanthorp formerly mentioned, and we shall have too much occasion again to speak of this Subject. As for Nomus who had been put into Ibas's place, the Synod referred it to the Bishop of Antioch to take care of him. The most glorious Judges confirmed what the Synod had done, saying, that what the Holy Council had judged concerning the Reverend Bishop Ibas, should retain its own Strength. And so ended the Tenth Session.

18. At the Eleventh Meeting the Synod decreed all things, which had been done in the Ephefine Latrocinie under Dioscorus, should be void and of no effect, the Ordination of Maximus Bishop of Antioch excepted, and they petitioned the Emperor, that such things as there had passed should not be taken for Authentic. At this Session also contended Stephen and Bassianus, about the Bishoprick of Antioch, both challenging it as his due, and recriminating each other. The Emperor upon the earnest Petition of Bassianus, commanded the Synod to examine the Cause. The Fathers were so much divided in their opinions, that they were forced to put it off till their next Meeting. Yet would they generally have given Sentence for Bassianus, saying that Equity and Right called for him to be Bishop of the place; but the glorious Judges considering more seriously, and seeing farther into the matter, thought that neither of them both could indeed be Bishop, and the whole Council directed by them altered their Opinion, and said, This is a just sentence, this is the very Judgment of God. It was therefore resolved that both of them should be removed from the See of Ephefus, yet so that they still retained the Episcopall Dignity, and to each should be paid out of that Church, the Annual stipend of 200 Solidi for their maintenance. Now a Solidus after the time of Constantine, as our Learned Brierwood hath observed, was worth of our Money Eight Shillings Six-pence Halfpenny Farthing, and Six parts of a Farthing, till the time of Valentinian, who increased it to the Value of just ten Shillings. At the thirteenth Session was composed, the difference betwixt Eunomius Bishop of Nicomedia and Anastadius of Nice, by a Decree, that forasmuch as Nicomedia had ever been the Metropolis, and Nice had onely obtained that Title by favour of Princes, the Metropolitan Rights should be, and continue in the See of Nicomedia, according to the Ancient Canons. The fourteenth Meeting was employed in the Cause of Athanasius Bishop of Paros, who being accused of sundry Crimes, had been summoned before a Provincial Synod called to Antioch by Domnus Bishop of that See, to whose Patriarchal Authority the Bishoprick of Paros was subject. Refusing to come though thrice called to appear, he was depofed by that Synod, and Sabinianus put into his place. In this Session he complained of wrongfull Extruſion, and petitioned the

Is restored in the tenth by the Fathers.

In the eleventh the Ephefine Latrocinie Orders are made void.

At the twelfth the Council twice Stephen and Bassianus decided.

At the thirteenth the difference betwixt Eunomius Bishop of Nicomedia, and Anastasius of Nice composed. In the fourteenth the Cause of Athanasius Bishop of Paros discussed.

Cell. 6. p. 564.

In Greek Nis. iuxta. De Antiq. Nimmis Roman. c. 15.

Cc

Council,

Council, that his See might be restored to him, excusing himself that he appeared not at the Synod of Antioch according to summons, because Domnus the chief Judge therein was his Enemy, and thereupon he could not esteem him an equal and indifferent Judge, though he could not but acknowledge him his Patriarch. The Glorious Judges that the matters laid to the charge of Athanafius, should be examined in Synod by Maximus then Patriarch of Antioch; and in case he were found guilty of these Crimes, he should for ever stand debarred from his Bishoprick. But if either in that space of time they examined not the Merit of his Cause, or upon Examination found him innocent, he should then as unjustly deposed be restored to his See of Paros, and Sabinianus should remain his Substitute till Maximus could provide him of another Bishoprick. This Sentence of the secular Judges, the whole Council approved, crying out, Nothing is more just, nothing is more equal, this is a just Sentence, you judge according to the Mind of God.

At the fifteenth Meeting were made 27 Canons.

1. 19. At their fifteenth Meeting were twenty seven Canons made, of which we shall in short deliver the substance. "The First confirms such as had been by the Fathers ordained in former Synods. The Second censurcth that Bishop that should ordain for Money, deposing him and nulling the Orders to him, on whom they are conferred. In the Third the Synod taking notice at the instance of the Emperor, how several in Orders hired Lands for Lucre sake, undertook secular employments, and through laziness neglected Divine Service, betook themselves to secular Persons, and for profit became their Steward, and over-saw their business, decreed that thenceforth it should be unlawful for any Bishop, Clerk or Monk to hire any Possessions, or meddle with any secular Estates, excepted such as the Laws did not excuse from the Charge of Tutors or Curators, or the Bishop of the City should entrust with the Administration of Ecclesiastical Affairs, the oversight of Widows or Orphans, or such Persons that stood in need of the assistance of the Church in the fear of God. If any acted contrary to this Canon, he should be liable to Ecclesiastical Censures, by which the Gloss in the Decree tells us, that Excommunication and Suspension is understood. The Fourth Confesseth that such as chuse true and purely a solitary Life are worthy of convenient honour. But certain Persons in the Habit of Monks, carelessly and presumptuously passing from City to City, and Monastery to Monastery, and thereby condemning themselves, it pleaseth the Synod that no Monasteries or Oratories be builded or made without the Knowledge of the Bishop of the City, as also that such as in Cities or Villages live in Monasteries ought to be subject to the Bishop, be quiet and continuing in these places where first they devoted themselves to God, be constant in Fasting and Prayer, not meddling either with Ecclesiastical or Secular Affairs, or forsaking their Monasteries, except thereto enjoined for urgent Reasons by the Bishop of the Diocese. Also that no Slave be taken in to be a Monk, without consent of his Lord. Such as act contrary to these things they excommunicate, that the Name of the Lord be not blasphemed, and resolve that the Bishop take care, and have inspection over the Monasteries.
2. 20. "In their fifth Canon the Fathers Decree by reason of those Bishops and Clerks that passed from City to City, that the Canons made by the Holy Synods retain their ancient force and vigour; which former Synods, as we have seen before, ordained, that No Ecclesiastical Person without some lawful and weighty cause should forsake his Calling and Station in one place, to remove into another. The Sixth enjoyns, that No Presbyter or Deacon be ordained absolutely or without a Title, nor out of a publick place, as a Church or a Monastery. Such as are ordained without Title, it pleaseth the Holy Synod that the Imposition of Hands upon them be void and null, to the reprehension of those who so ordain them. The Seventh Forbids Clerks or Monks to turn Souldiers, or aspire to Secular Honours, Anathematizing such as having so done should not return to their former station. As to the latter Part concerning Honours, the Gloss tells us here is meant onely such places of Honour wherein Jurisdiction of Bloud is exercised, or filthy lucre, or personal service is required; else it appears by other Laws that a Bishop or Clerk may enjoy Secular Dominion, so he exercise what belongs to Bloud by his Deputy. The Eighth Canon declares, that "Clerks whether in Hospitals, Churches dedicated

At the 15th Meeting were made 27 Canons. 1. 19. At their fifteenth Meeting were twenty seven Canons made, of which we shall in short deliver the substance. "The First confirms such as had been by the Fathers ordained in former Synods. The Second censurcth that Bishop that should ordain for Money, deposing him and nulling the Orders to him, on whom they are conferred. In the Third the Synod taking notice at the instance of the Emperor, how several in Orders hired Lands for Lucre sake, undertook secular employments, and through laziness neglected Divine Service, betook themselves to secular Persons, and for profit became their Steward, and over-saw their business, decreed that thenceforth it should be unlawful for any Bishop, Clerk or Monk to hire any Possessions, or meddle with any secular Estates, excepted such as the Laws did not excuse from the Charge of Tutors or Curators, or the Bishop of the City should entrust with the Administration of Ecclesiastical Affairs, the oversight of Widows or Orphans, or such Persons that stood in need of the assistance of the Church in the fear of God. If any acted contrary to this Canon, he should be liable to Ecclesiastical Censures, by which the Gloss in the Decree tells us, that Excommunication and Suspension is understood. The Fourth Confesseth that such as chuse true and purely a solitary Life are worthy of convenient honour. But certain Persons in the Habit of Monks, carelessly and presumptuously passing from City to City, and Monastery to Monastery, and thereby condemning themselves, it pleaseth the Synod that no Monasteries or Oratories be builded or made without the Knowledge of the Bishop of the City, as also that such as in Cities or Villages live in Monasteries ought to be subject to the Bishop, be quiet and continuing in these places where first they devoted themselves to God, be constant in Fasting and Prayer, not meddling either with Ecclesiastical or Secular Affairs, or forsaking their Monasteries, except thereto enjoined for urgent Reasons by the Bishop of the Diocese. Also that no Slave be taken in to be a Monk, without consent of his Lord. Such as act contrary to these things they excommunicate, that the Name of the Lord be not blasphemed, and resolve that the Bishop take care, and have inspection over the Monasteries.

16. g. c. 12. Qui vendit & parit & 18. g. 2. c. 10. Qui ad Monasterium.

16. g. c. 12. Qui vendit & parit & 18. g. 2. c. 10. Qui ad Monasterium.

7. g. 1. Prop. ter cui Episcopi.

Diff. 70.

Εἰμι ἰδιώτης ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ πάλαι ἔστι καὶ ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ, ὅτι.

20. g. 3. Eos qui Semel. c. 3.

Ut 88. Diff. Episcopi gubernationem & 54. 4. quid Johannes.

9. "to Martyrs, or Monasteries, are according to the tradition of the Holy Fathers under the Power of the Bishop of the City, from which they ought not presumptuously to withdraw themselves. Therefore such as shall rescind this order, and refuse to be subject to their own Bishop; if Clerks, it subjects them to the punishments inflicted by the Canons, according to their quality; if Monks or Lay-persons, it deprives them of Communion. The Ninth decrees, that One Clerk having a quarrel against another, the matter shall be decided by their Bishop. If a Clerk have a Controversie with his own Bishop or another, it shall be judged by the Provincial Synod, or (as Theodore Balsamon expounds it) by the Metropolitan of the Province. But if any Bishop or Clerk have any Controversie with the Metropolitan, let him betake himself to the Primate of the Diocese, or to the See of the Royal City of Constantinople, and there be Judged. That this is a true and genuine Canon Nicholas the first of that Name Bishop of Rome confesseth, Ep. 1. but both he and the later Romanists miserably torment themselves in expounding it, as not knowing how to evade the stroke which it gives to their pretended Supremacy.

The ninth whereof giving appeals to Constantinople very much perplexes the Romanists and the Romanists to expound for their turn.

21. They are forced so to expound the word Diocese, as meant of the whole world it self, as if any one meanly conversant in Church Antiquities knew not there were many Dioceses of old. And by the Primate they will mean none other than him of Rome, though the Sun be not clearer than this, that there were several other Primates besides him, and they so ridiculously expound this Canon, as commanding all Appeals to be made from the Metropolitans to the Pope in all places of the World, and permitting onely the same to be done to the Patriarch of Constantinople by those who inhabited near to that City. Now can it be imagined that these Fathers should forbid Appeals from the Metropolitan to the Patriarch of the Diocese, whereas by a Decree of those of Nice Appeals lye to him? In no case but by the ambiguous titles given to Primates, these Romanists impose upon unwary Readers. For as we said formerly, there being fourteen Dioceses in the Church, over each of them one Bishop presided with Patriarchal power, under several Names and Titles, as sometimes of Patriarch, sometimes of Metropolitan, otherwhiles of Primate, Exarch or Prince, which last is given to John the Patriarch of Antioch in this very Council of Chalcedon. All these fourteen Primacy Bishops had the same equal Patriarchal power, although at first three and afterwards six of them were especially and by way of eminence called Patriarchs. So insulce and silly is that plea that the Roman Bishop is here meant, because the word Exarch is used, that (as Berterius himself observeth) in this very Council this same word is used to signify the (a) Primate of the East or him of Antioch, and for proof that the Primates had this title he alledgeth (b) this very ninth Canon upon which we insist, withall proving, that even the Bishop of (c) Tyre in the eighth Synod hath given him the Title of Exarch, who yet was not reckoned in the number of Patriarchs or Primates.

22. The meaning therefore of these Chalcedonian Fathers was this, that seeing (as appears from a constitution of Justinian de foro Clerici & Episcopi accusati) the Council of Nice or some other had prescribed the form and method of Appeals to be, that first they should lye from the Bishop to the Metropolitan, from him to the Primate, the Prince, Exarch or Metropolitan of the Diocese, and to no others, a General Council onely excepted; out of respect to the Dignity of the Imperial Seat they conferred this Honour on the Bishop of Constantinople, that it should be lawful for any Bishop in any Diocese whatsoever at his choice, if he thought he should not be indifferently heard, to appeal from the Metropolitan of the Province or the Provincial Synod, to the said Bishop instead of the Exarch or Primate of the Diocese. Another meaning of these Fathers seems to have been this: that whereas formerly it was unlawfull to appeal from the Definitive Sentence of the Primate or Patriarch to the Tribunal of any other Patriarch or Bishop, to doe Honour to this Imperial Seat, they gave leave to appeal to the Bishop thereof from any Sentence of Primates or Patriarchs, which the words themselves, Let him repair to the Exarch of the Diocese, or the Seat or Bishop of the Royal City, seem, though obscurely to hint, but practice and the Imperial Law formerly mentioned plainly declareth, wherein is enjoined that If after appeal to Patriarchs or Metropolitans, or any other Bishop sentence be pronounced which displeaseth any party, if this party appeal, the appeal must lye to the See of Constantinople, wherein, as the Custom was, the matter is to be determined. To the Patriarch of Constantinople therefore

At. 1. p. 22.

Prælat. Diatrib. 2. c. 1.

(a) Rescript ab Exarcho Orientalis Diocesis evocatus est.

(b) Καταλαβόντων τὴν ἑξέσιν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

(c) Οὗτος Θεολογικὴ ἐκκλησία.

Εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

Εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

Εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

Εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

Εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

Εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

Εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

Εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

Εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τὴν ἑκκλησίαν.

fore from the sentence of any other Patriarch or Diocesan Primate Appeal was granted, and from him none, except to a General Council, to which, as the African Fathers, in their Letters to * Celestine, affirm it lawfull * Conc. Afric. Can. ult. vel 105.

10. 23. The Tenth Canon * prohibits " Clerks to pass from a Church in one City to another; or if a Clerk be translated to another, to have to do with the former upon pain of Deposition. How the Glofs endeavours to reconcile this Canon with later Laws and Practice is too long here to be shewn, and therefore the Reader may at his leisure consult it. The Eleventh * † Forbids a Clerk or Reader to Minister in any strange place whatsoever without Letters commendatory from his own Bishop. In the Twelfth the Synod taking notice that certain Persons had procured Pragmaticks or Rescripts from Princes, for dividing one Province into two, so that two Metropolitans happened to be in one and the same Province, forbade any Bishop to attempt the like for the time to come, under pain of Deposition. This Canon the Glofs restraineth and limiteth, in * Ut 16. g. 1. Præcipimus, & Diff. 99.

13. or rather the Eleventh, ordains, that " All Indigent Persons shall have * pistolæ or Pacifick Letters, and not Commendatory. The Fourteenth forbids Psalmists and Readers to take Wives of another Sect. If any hath already so done, the Synod commands, that their Children Baptized by Heretics be presented to the Catholic Church, therein to communicate. If they be not yet Baptized, they are in no wife to be Baptized by Heretics, neither to be Married to any Heretick, Jew or Pagan, except such Person to whom they are Married engage to conform to the Orthodox Faith. The Fifteenth declares, that A Deaconess ought not to be ordained till forty years of Age, and then not without diligent examination. If being ordained she had served at all in this Ministry and married afterward, the Canon anathematizeth her, and him that married her. At this Age indeed a Woman might know whether she could bear the condition of Calibate, and consequently those great disorders would be prevented, which have been too common amongst Girls insinuated in this course of life. But so far as Chastity is the gift of God, and in the power of none perfect in either Sex, the humour of this Age is hereby discovered too much admiring and doting on forced Virginity. This the next or Sixteenth Canon farther evinceth, which " Commands that no Virgin which had dedicated herself to God, or Monk, should Marry, under pain of Excommunication; yet they decree that they be gently dealt with if the Bishop of the place think fit.

17. 24. " The seventeenth enacts that Bishops retain those Countrey Parish Churches whereof they are in Possession, especially if they have kept them without violence the space of thirty years. But if within this term of years there hath been or shall happen to arise any controversie about them, it shall be lawfull for such as think themselves aggrieved to traverse their cause in a Provincial Synod. And if any think himself injured by his own Metropolitan, he may either betake himself to the Primate of the Diocefe, or to the See of Constantinople, as was said before, viz. in the 9th. Canon. But if any City be altered by the Authority Imperial or shall be altered for the time to come, the order of Parish Churches shall be conformable as to Civil and Publick Orders.

18. " The eighteenth forbids upon pain of Deposition all Affiliations and Conspiracies amongst Clerks or Monks against Bishops, made it seems in behalf of Eutyches and his Doctrine. The nineteenth commands the Bishops to hold Provincial Synods twice a year, according to Ancient Canons. The twentieth commands a Clerk ordained in one Church there to stay, and not betake himself to another, except out of Necessity when they lose their former places. If any Bishop hereafter receives any such Clerk belonging to another Bishop it pleaseth the Holy Synod that both the Clerk and the Receiver remain so long Excommunicated till the Man return to his former Church, agreeable

* Crackenb. Defens. Ecclesiæ Arg. contra Spalat. c. 31.

* 21. g. 1. c. 2. Clericum in duarum Ecclesiis consecratum eodem tempore consecrari non oportet.

† Ibid. 2. c. 3. Signi? am.

Diff. 110. c. 1.

* Ut 16. g. 1. Præcipimus, & Diff. 99.

Diff. 32. quoniam in quibusdam.

27. g. 1. Disconsum non debere c. 23.

27. g. 1. Septima origo. c. 22.

16. g. 2. c. 1. Per singulas Ecclesias.

11. g. 1. c. 1. Conjuratorem & conspirationem quod epus Græcos, egeret dicitur, &c.
Diff. 18. c. 6. Pervenit ad nostras aures.
Diff. 11. Clerici. c. 4.
Caus. 2. g. 7. c. 49. Clericos aut Laicos.
12. g. 2. c. 43. Non liceat Clerici.

" agreeable to what the Nicene Fathers had formerly decreed in their 16. Canon. The one and twentieth requires that such as accuse Ecclesiastical Persons be not lightly admitted except they be Men of known repute. The twenty second forbids Clerks to rifle the goods of their deceased Bishop (which it seems was at this time practised and had been prohibited by former Canons) under Pain of incurring Deposition. This Canon was long after reinforced by the Laterane Council (Cap. 4.) under Innocent the second. In the twenty third the Holy Synod taking notice that certain Monks without any order from their Bishop and sometimes by him Excommunicated, repair to the Royal City of Constantinople, where they disturb the Peace of the Church, and corrupt several Houses, ordaineth that they first be admonished to depart the Town, if they refuse, to be forced out and compelled to return to their own places by the Defensor.

24. " The twenty fourth Canon commands that such Monasteries as had been so made by consent of the Bishops continue such and be not again changed to secular uses. By the twenty fifth notice being taken how certain Metropolitans neglected their Flocks, and deferred the Ordination of Bishops, it therefore ordains that Consecration of Bishops be made within three Months except there be absolute Necessity of protracting the time, under pain of heavy censure. As also that the whole Revenue of the vacant Church be collected and laid up by the Stewards thereof. In their twenty sixth the Fathers signify how they are informed that in certain Churches, Bishops manage the Revenues thereof without any Oeconomia or Steward, therefore they resolve that every Church having a Bishop have also its Steward, or Dispensator, one of its own Clerks who by the consent of the Bishop shall Administer the Income thereof that there may be witness how it is managed, lest walle be made of its substance and the Priestly dignity be ill spoken off. The twenty seventh censureth such as commit Rapes and thereby get themselves Wives, as also such as assist them if Clerks with Deposition, if lay Persons, with the Anathema. Besides these 27 Canons are three more, extant in the Tome of the Councils whereof the first confirms the former Decree of the Ephesine Synod about the Privileges of the See of Constantinople. For, following in all things, as the Canon runs, The Decrees of the Holy Fathers and acknowledging that lately read, of this Age, the 150 Bishops lovers of God, we also decree and ordain the same things concerning the Privileges of the most holy Church of Constantinople being New Rome. For on the throne of Ancient Rome, because that City was the seat of the Empire, the Fathers deservedly bestowed Privileges. And the 150 Bishops moved by the same consideration gave equal Privileges to the most holy Throne of New Rome, rightly judging that the City which was honoured with Empire and a Senate and enjoyed equal Privileges with the Ancient Lady Rome, ought to be extolled and magnified no less than the also in Ecclesiastick matters, being the next to her, and that the Metropolitans only of the Diocefes of Pontica Asiana and Thracia, as also, the Bishops of the said Diocefes amongst the Barbarians should be ordained by the foresaid Throne of the most holy Church of Constantinople, each Metropolitan of the said Diocefes together with the Bishops of the Province ordaining the Provincial Bishops, as it is delivered in the Divine Canons. But as is said the Metropolitans of the forenamed Diocefes are to be ordained by the Archbishop of Constantinople convenient Elections being made according to Custom, and thereof Notice being given to him.

26. By this Canon the first dignity and Precedence was confirmed to the Roman Patriarch as bestowed on it by the Ancient Fathers, not out of any consideration that his Church was founded by St. Peter or any other, but out of a secular respect to the Dominion and Sovereignty of that City, as Mistress or Sovereign of the Empire, the Polity of the Church corresponding as near as possible with that of the State. Now that Constantinople was put into the same Capacity with Old Rome as to Majesty, Sovereignty and Dominion, the Fathers found the same reason for conferring the same Privileges upon her, though much to the regret and stomach of Leo his Legates, who not being present when the thing passed, came into the Council the next meeting and protested against it. But this would not do, their alleging the Nicene Canons signified little, the Fathers having in their Memory what had passed between the Bishops of Africa and the former Roman Prelates. They urged that the subscriptions to this Canon were forced and wrested from the Bishop by plain constraint which was flatly denied by such as had subscribed. Then did the glorious Judges interpose and gave sentence that the chief Honour

16. g. 1. c. 17. Quidam Monachi nihil habuerunt.

19. g. 3. Quæ semel sunt.

Diff. 75. c. 2. Quoniam quidam Metropolitani.

Diff. 89. c. 3. Quia in quibusdam.

21. Quoniam in quibusdam ubi videque notatur in glossa de Episcoporum & aliorum Oeconomis.

Caus. 36. g. 2. c. 1. Eo qui.

Can. 205. Eccl. de ipsa universitate.

Itaque.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

De his qui.

was to be given to the See of Old Rome, yet Primacy and the like Privileges to that of the New, which now as well as the other was ordained with the Faſces of the Empire, ſo that the Biſhop thereof ſhould have power to ordain Metropolitan in Aſiana, Pontica and Thrace, leaving the Authority to the Metropolitan of each Province to conſecrate Biſhops. Yet would not the Legates be ſatisfied, but required that the Decree might be ſuſpended till the Judgment of Leo might be had about it, to which it's ſaid the Synod Aſſented. But Liberatus affirms that the contradiction and Proteſtation of the Legates was rejected, and how little account was made of it, or of the oppoſition of Leo himſelf appears by the practice of following times, as well as what formerly has been ſaid of this Subject. As for this Canon none either have called in queſtion the truth or the force and validity of it, except thoſe concerned in behalf of Rome. Its found in all Greek Copies, beſides ſeveral Latin ones, as one above a thouſand years Old in Juſtellus ^{Quod vidiffe teſtatur Dr. Baſſier.} his Library, another in that of Monſieur de Thou, which abundantly diſcovers to us the truth and ſincerity of thoſe Roman Copies wherein it is wanting. There are beſides thoſe 28 Canons two other mentioned, whereof the firſt forbids a Biſhop to be reduced to the Decree of a Priest making it Sacrilege and requiring that if any Biſhop be for juſt cauſe degraded, he loſe alſo the Prieſtly Office. The laſt contents what the Fathers relolved concerning the Agyptian Biſhops who deſired their ſubſcription to the Epiſtle of Leo might be reſcinded till their Metropolitan was choſen.

All which are confirmed by the Emperour's Ediſt.

An Epiſtle ſent to Leo to diſcuss to what had been done at this Seſſion.

27. All buſineſs being now diſpatched, the Synod deſired of the Emperour that he would confirm what they had done. He accordingly gave his Royal Aſſent which was followed by Acclamations often ingeminating I ſou haſt confirmed the Orthodox Faith. The Fathers alſo cauſed their Synodical Epiſtle full of reſpect to be written to Leo the Roman Patriarch wherein letting him know that they were aſſembled by the Sanction and Decree of the Emperour, they tell him what they had done and deſire him to honour them with his Approbation. For it was requiſite for the Peace of the Church that ſuch Biſhops as could not be preſent in theſe Oecumenical Councils ſhould approve and confirm what had been done therein. Not that there was any need of judicially determining and defining any controverſie or giving the Deciſion full and perfect Authority, for that had been already done in the General Aſſembly wherein all Biſhops were either perſonally preſent or implicitly and juſtly ſuppoſed to be there. But when they ſhould give their expreſs conſent to what they had formerly ratified but implicitly, this would ſtop their mouth for the time to come, remove or prevent all objections ariſing from difference and oppoſition, and whereas we are apt to be drawn more by Example than precept, gain greater repute and conformity to the Decrees. Therefore did this Council ſeek the Approbation of Leo, who being moſt eminent for the dignity of his See, and very conſiderable for his perſonal Qualifications, might be more capable through his Example of doing good or hurt; after by conſenting to procure Peace and Conformity, or by diſſenting to make a rent and ſchiſm in the Church. On this ſame account did Theodoſius the Emperour and Cyril labour ſo much to have John the Patriarch to conſent to the Decrees of the Ephreſine Synod againſt Neftorius, for they knew it would be a great means to draw in the reſt of the diſſenters, as indeed it proved. The truth was, all the Fathers could doe was little enough to preſerve the Church in quiet, and prevent that extravagance both in opinion and practice which the luſts and paſſions of Men fo frequently procured. Therefore to revive the Memory of former Decrees did each Council, as it were, preſent a new Table of what had paſſed in ſuch as had been before it. So did the Council of Conſtantinople confirm that of Nice with the Faith decreed therein, and this of Chalcedon all three preceding Oecumenical Synods, and the ſecond Nicene Synod or Conventicle all the fix which had been before it, although each of them was of as great Authority before, and as to their intrinsic value needed not the Confirmation of the ſubſequent eſpecially of the later Sanſto.

28. Farther, the Ancient Chriſtian prudence of theſe Fathers, for theſe very reaſons, directed them to make uſe not onely of General Councils but of Provincial Synods, not onely of Patriarchs but particular Biſhops to confirm their General Synods, and the Decrees thereof. Thus the great Nicene Council was confirmed, as they themſelves phraſe it, by Eusebius Biſhop of Nicomedia and Theognis of Nice two exiled Biſhops for the cauſe of Hereſie in token of their repentance and converſion. So the Synod Aſſembled at Milan confirmed the Acts of the firſt Ephreſine Council, as Binius himſelf obſerveth. And this very Council of Chalcedon Quod vidiffe teſtatur Dr. Baſſier.

In perpetuum que a vobis ſervavitur Orthodoxam fidem confirmat.

Regamus ut decretis noſtris honoris iudicium, Ep. Synod. ad Leonem, pag. 16.

Can. 1.

Confirmare decrevit, apud Socr. l. 1. c. 10. Not. in Conc. Rom. 3. ſub Synodo.

Chalcedon at the inſtance of Pope Leo, when ſome began to carp at its Decrees, was confirmed by an Ediſt of the Emperour Leo, who commanded alſo the ſeveral Biſhops to declare their Judgments concerning its Doctrine, that the Council of Chalcedon might be again confirmed, ſaith Binius, by the Conſent and Conſeſſion of all theſe Biſhops. In obedience to his Command ſome did it of themſelves, as Anatolius, Lucianus, Sebaſtianus and Agapetus, beſides ſeveral others, ſome jointly as the Biſhops of Egypt and Europe in their Synodal Epiſtles, which are joynted to the Acts of this Council. It is not to be imagined, that the Teſtimony of ſingle Biſhops could give any Authority to an Oecumenical Synod, nor yet Provincial Councils which conſiſted but of 19 Biſhops as that of Milan, or but of ſeven as that of Syria, or fix as that of Meſſia, five as that of Syria Secunda, or no more than four as that of Oſroena. But much advantage was gained by theſe Teſtimonies, and this may be added to what we have formerly mentioned out of Dr. Crackanthorp, that every one hereby either approved himſelf to be Orthodox in Judgment, or upon reſuſal appeared to be heretical in Doctrine, and ſtood ſufficiently convicted, ſo that ſuch a Wolf could not doe miſchief in Sheep's clothing, the Church having ſufficient notice and warning of him. But thus as the forementioned Learned Perſon obſerveth, Confirmation of Synods by Biſhops was twofold. The Confirmation of thoſe preſent in Council is Judicial, the latter Confirmation by the Abſent is Pacific. The former Authoritative, ſuch as gives the whole Authority to any Decree, the latter whether by ſucceeding Councils, or abſent Biſhops is Teſtificative witneſſing them to be Orthodox in that Decree. The former joynted to the Imperial Confirmation (which is neceſſary to the making of a Lawfull Council) is Eſſential, eſſentially making both the Council an approved Council, and alſo the Decrees thereof approved Synodal and Oecumenical Decrees: the latter is Accidental which graceſ a Biſhop, but little or nothing the Synod, and being denied doth neither diſgrace the Council, nor impair the Dignity or Authority thereof, but extremely diſgracing the party that denies it, pulls down upon him both the juſt Cenſures of the Church, and the Civil Punishments due to Hereticks and Contumacious Perſons.

A twofold Confirmation of Synods by Biſhops.

29. So ſmall reaſon is there for Baronius to infer, that becauſe the Fathers deſire the Aſſent of Leo, therefore they thought their Acts invalid without his Confirmation. But thus ended this famous Chalcedonian Synod, which our Learned Crackanthorp tells us he never read or almoſt remembered, but with a kind of Amazement; he admired the rare Piety, Prudence, Integrity, Moderation and Gravity of thoſe moſt Glorious Judges, who ſupplying the Emperour's place in his Abſence were the Imperial Preſidents in this Council. Had they or ſuch been wanting at this time it may juſtly be feared, conſidering the eagernels and temerity, not to ſay the inſolency of the Pope's Legates in this Synod, that this Council of Chalcedon had proved a worſe Latrocinium, than was that ſecond of Ephreſus. All being diſpatched, the Fathers returned to their ſeveral Churches. Dioſcorus was baniſhed to Gangra, a City of Paphlagonia where he died. In memory of the Condemnation of the Eutycheſian Hereſie, the Greeks ordained an Anniverſary ſolemnity on the 16th. of July, as appears by their Menology. And Martianus the Emperour to follow on the ſtroke, and add the ſecular Arm to the Spiritual ſword, publiſhed an Ediſt directed to Palladius the Prefectus Prætorio, bearing date on the 26 of January, or the 6th. of February next following. For it is extant at large in the Acts of the Council, and part of it in Juſtinian's Code, being there falſly aſcribed to Valentinian and Marcian together, and here falſly dated with the Conſulſhip of Patricius and Richimeres, whereas it appears by the Faſti Conſulares, that in the ſecond year of Marcian, Heracleianus and Aſporatius, bore the Conſular Office. This Law, ſeveral expreſſions whereof are taken out of the Synodal Acts, forbids all Perſons whatſoever to diſpute of Chriſtian Religion in Aſſemblies, ſeeking thereby occaſion of tumult and perſeſiouſneſs. He adds a reaſon that this would offer manifeſt Injury to the Judgment of the moſt Reverend Synod aſſembled lately at Chalcedon by his (a) Command, which followed therein the Apoſtolicall Doctrine according to former Decrees of the Nicene and Conſtantinopolitan Councils. The Offenders both as Faction and (b) Propagating the venerable Myſteries before Jews and Pagans, if Clerks ſhould be depoſed, if Souldiers de-

An Ediſt confirming the Eutycheſian Hereſie.

Aſſ. 3. Cod. de ſumma Trinitate l. 4. & in Synod. ſi Baſilicon. 1. Tit. 1. c. 4. Adde hanc leg. ritalem integram, Cod. Theod. de his qui Religione contumaces, lib. 16. Tit. 4.

(a) Qui Chalcedonem convenierunt per noſtra precepta.

(b) Sed etiam Judæi & Pagani ex baptiſmatis certamine prophanos venerant de Myſteria.

prived

prived of the Military girdle; Others if Free should be banished from Constantinople, and otherwise punished, if Slaves chastized with the greatest Severities. Thus much of the Fourth Oecumenical Council, concerning the Integrity of the Acts whereof let the Reader Examine what Dr. Crackantop applieth to the frivolous objections of Baronius. This and the three former, as made in the purest Ages have been delivered had in greatest esteem, and of strongest Authority by all sober Christians. The Pope of Rome at his promotion (as appears from what Deusdedit, the Cardinal noteth in his Collection of Canons) of old time swore, according to a former, exemplified by Gratian in his Decree out of his Day-book, To observe these four Councils to a Tittle, professing to follow and preach what they held and decreed, and both with Heart and Mouth, to condemn what they condemned. This ancient Oath as our Divines observe, badly agreeth with the late Bulla Iena, wherein the Roman Patriarch forbids Appeals from himself to a General Council. So doth the Prohibition of Zozimus, formerly mentioned. But from that ancient Oath, a Learned Man inferreth that the Roman Bishop cannot justly plead that he is superior to these Councils, except he arrogate to himself Power over the four Gospels.

Another to the same purpose, but ordering the Writings of Eutychians to be burnt.

Proterius elected in the Seat of Dioscorus, upon which a Tumult arises at Alexandria.

Juvenalis Bishop of Jerusalem, deposed by the Monks, who set up Theodosius.

Who commits several Outrages there.

By the Emperor's Protection and Power, Juvenalis is a sufficient Power to redress the former Abuses, commanded him to depose as many as Theodosius had advanced to the Priestly Order. But the Bird Canones 4. Concil. pro legibus habentur, vide c. de sacerdotibus Ecclesiis. l. 4. c. 12. §. 1. Novell. 151. c. 2.

Dist. 16. c. 8. Ex diurno Libro Prefecti Romani Pontificis.

Seschaferius in Confess. P. 4. c. 12.

Art. Conc. Chalced. 3.

Cod. lib. 1. Tit. 2. de Episcop. & Clericis.

Lib. 2. c. 4. de Episcop. & Clericis. Breviar. c. 15. Niceph. lib. 5. c. 19.

flown over the Souldiers could lay hands on him, and though he was gone, yet the effects of heretical and cruel demeanour still continued, as in other places the same furious humour raged amongst the Eutychian Hereticks, where they could get advantage. This same year being the 454 of our Lord, Valentinian and Martian, the Emperours published an Edict, whereby They decreed that the Privileges granted to all Churches by their Predecessours, should remain firm and inviolable. All pragmatick Sanctions, which through Favour or Ambition had been procured against the Ecclesiastical Canons, they command to be void, and of no effect. And because it concerned them in point of Humanity, to have a care of those that stand in need, and take order they want not maintenance, the Salaries which divers ways had been formerly paid to the Churches out of the publick Stock, they command still to be continued and discharged without any failing or defalcation whatsoever.

By this Edict it appears, that all Privileges granted by Emperours which were agreeable to the Sense of the Church, conducing to Order and Government, and not contrary to the Canons were so far from being null'd and revoked, that they were strengthened and confirmed, onely those which had clandestinely and surreptitiously contrary to Ecclesiastical Decrees, been as were wrested from Imperial Powers. What reason then Baronius hath to conclude that this Rescript was purposely, and at the Request of Leo Bishop of Rome granted against Anatolius and the See of Constantinople, the Reader will easily apprehend, seeing that the Primacy and Jurisdiction thereof, was so far from being procured Contra Ecclesiasticos Canones, that it was founded upon the Canons of two several Oecumenical Synods, neither ought the Cardinal to object the Decrees of the Nicene Council, except he will plead that the same Power that makes a Law cannot rescind it, or that the Church Universal supposed it to be in the Synods of Constantinople and Chalcedon, as well as that of Nice cannot according to the Exigency of times, and Comportment of Affairs, bind and loose and change its own positive Laws in things indifferent. The Canons of Nice, whatever Leo or those of his party pretend, were of force to bind any particular Bishop or Patriarch whatsoever, but not a Council as General, as Lawfull, and consequently as Authoritative as it self.

An Edict concerning the Ancient privileges to Churches.

32. But because there is nothing in this Edict can possibly persuade the Reader to be of the Cardinal's opinion, he tells him that this which we find now in the Code he conjectures to be but a parcel of that which the Emperours published this year, meaning indeed that though there be no mention of Constantinople in this, yet in the other Part there was, and Justinian seems to have left it out at the publishing of his Code, because he intended to make a new Law contrary to it, which is that of his thirteenth Novel, the second Chapter. From this must necessarily follow then that Justinian, contrary to former Canons, and consequently contrary to the four first Councils, and the practice before his own time, gave Prerogative and Precedence to the See of Constantinople after that of Old Rome; for if this fragment (as he would have it) which is left contradicted not that which is lost, then nothing was therein forbidden but what was contrary to the Ecclesiastical Canons; and Justinian again recalling what Baronius will have Martian to have disannul'd, must have acted contrary to the said Canons, Councils and, as we may conclude, former practice. See therefore how bravely the forementioned Novel cited by the Annalist makes this out. In the first Chapter of that Novel the Emperour decrees, that *The Holy Ecclesiastical Canons have the force or nature of Laws, he means those which had been made or confirmed by the four Holy Councils, viz. that of the three hundred and eighteen Fathers assembled at Nice, the hundred and fifty at Constantinople, in the first Ephesine wherein Nestorius was condemned, and at Chalcedon where Eutyches, together with Nestorius, was anathematized. For the Doctrines of these four Synods we receive as the Holy Scriptures, and their Rules (or Canons) we observe as Laws: this is the first Chapter of the Novel. Then follows the second in these words: † Therefore according to their Definitions we decree, that the most Holy Pope of the Elder Rome be the first of all Priests: and the most Blessed Archbishop of Constantinople

Privilegia que generalibus constitutis, ubi universis sacrosanctis Ecclesiis orthodoxis religionis veteris Principes praestiterunt, firma & illibata in perpetuum decernimus. Omnes sane pragmaticas sanctiones que contra Canones Ecclesiasticos inventu sunt, revocamus & firmatas vacantes cessare precipimus. Cod. lib. 1. Tit. 2. l. 12. in J. P. Palladio Pp. Dat. Actis & Studio Cof.

* Sanctissimus igitur vicem legum obtinere Sanctas Ecclesiasticas Regulas que a sanctis & conciliis expressa sunt aut firmatae, hoc est in Nicena 318, & in Constantinopolitana Sanctorum 150 patrum, & in Ephesine prima in qua Nestorius est damnatus, & in Chalcedonia in qua Eutyches cum Nestorio anathematizatus est. Praedictum cum a Synodorum dogmata sive Sanctas Scripturas accipimus, & regulas suas leges observamus.

† Ideoque sanctissimum secundum eorum definitiones sanctissimum seniorum Rome Papam primum esse omnium sacerdotum: beatissimum autem Archiepiscopum Constantinopolitani being New Rome, have the Second Place after the Holy Apostolick See of Old Rom; as to be placed before all other Seats. These words, Therefore according to their Definitions, manifestly shew that what the Emperour Justinian did, was not contrary to the four Councils, but agreeable to, and founded upon their Decrees, and what the Emperour being entirely contrary to them, the Primacy of Constantinople by that Part of the Edict. Then for the practice before I have said, Reader consider what we have formerly said of that subjugation to the see of Constantinople, from another Novel of that

33. In the latter Part of that Edict of Valentinian and Martian, they take care that the Accustomed Salaries be paid to Churches, and that || our of consideration that it became them as an All of Humanity to provide for those in distress, and doe their endeavour that maintenance may not be wanting to the Poor. Seeing therefore that Churches were long before this time endowed not only with Titles, but with good Laws and Revenues; this Law seems especially to provide for the Inferiour sort of Clerks or Ministers in the Churches, such as the Clerici copiatæ formerly mentioned. That such provision had been formerly made by Christian Princes out of nopoleos novae Romae secundum habere locum post sanctam Apostolicam senioris Romae sedem: aliis autem omnibus sedibus praeparatur. Auth. Collat. IX. tit. XIV. Nov. CXXXI. p. 184. Cod. Justin.

¶ §. 2. Et quia humanitatis nostra es-sigenis prospicere, ac dare operam, ut pauperibus alimenta non desint: salaria etiam quae sacrosanctis Ecclesiis in diversis specibus de publico haecenus ministrata sunt jubemus nunc quoque in eo cuncta & a nullo profus imminuta praestari: liberalitateque hucui promississimam perpetuam erubimus firmitatem.

* Theod. 4. 4;
vide quæ an-notantur ad hanc legem per Interp.
† Lib. 1.
‡ Lib. 2.

An Edi&t against Paganism.

Setting forth the Ceremonies thereof.

e Nemo venerandi adorandique animo delubra, &c.
Cod. Justin.
l. 1. tit. 11. l.
7. De. Paga-nis.

* Libra Ar-genti valet 3 l. Auri 36 l.
obrix 37 l.
10 s. continet
libra 12 un-grana 6012.

Budeus de Affelib. 5. & Brierwoodus nostras de Nummorum pretiis c. 21.

34. From the wording of this Law the Reader may observe, as to the state and condition of the times, that the Old Pagan Superstitions were not quite defunct, else there had not needed any such Edict against the Superstitious Ceremonies thereof. Yet that it was at the last gasp appears by the long time that the Chapels had been shut up, expressed by the word olim, and especially from the severe remedy provided by this Rescript against the evil. For in this case there is some conformity betwixt the ordering of the Body Natural, and the Body Civil. In both, desperate, acute and sudden distempers must have desperate remedies, quick and active applications, such as search, and either kill or cure. But in distempers of a state which have been long and general, the Physician must proceed as in inveterate Difcates which are founded in the Bloud, and radicated in the complexion of the Parts, in the curing of which he muſt proceed pederſtim, and Purge gently, left by evacuating the bad he drive out alſo the good humours, and praſtice rather an altering than a purging courſe, left in a very foul and plethoric Body the humours being let afloat and driven into a fermentation, prove too headſtrong and turbulent for nature to govern. This appears from what Conſantine the Great preſcribed in this caſe, who at the beginning of the Reformation ordained the terror of death as a Medicine againſt this Sacrificing Evil, puniſhing in like manner the Governours of the Provinces if they neglected to apply this Caution to that Cancer diſtemper. But his Succellours who had time and opportunity to ſee the operation found it too violent and therefore laid it aſide till by applying of more gentle and altering Medicines the whole body was able to bear it, and therefore now did Marcian renew (rather than make any new Law) when the ill humours were ſo diminiſhed that by putting them into a motion and diſturbance no dangerous fever or other Symptome could be feared. But neither did this ſuddenly effect the cure without ſome other Applications as we ſhall ſee hereafter. In the mean time from this Law, the Reader may obſerve what were the Ceremonies of Paganism and the Worſhip of Idols in their Temples, and Chapels.

35. About this time Proper a Priest of Aquitain in imitation of Eusebius composed his Chronicon wherein he briefly notes what passed from the beginning of the World to the eighth Consulship of Valentinian (which was the last year of his Life) and that of Antemius or the 455th, year of the ordinary Æra of our Lord. The third Edition as Bucherius and Miræus observe reached to this year. For there had been two former whereof the first ended at the 14 Consulship of Theodosius which he bore with Maximus or the year 433, as appears from his summing up the Epochs of all the former years, which is not usually done but at the end of Books. The second Edition contained the space of 12 years more reaching as far as the 6 Consulship of Valentinian and that of Nonius or the year 445, at which his ordinary Chronicon went to be joyned with those of Eusebius and Jerome receive their period. The third Edition reaching as low as the year above mentioned, of which Miræus mentions three several Manuscripts, is much better than the two former, containing besides a short and pithy account of things from the beginning of the World the Facts of the Consuls from the 15th. year of Tiberius downward. But in this Age flourished three or four several Persons bearing the name of Proper, concerning whom Bucherius disputeth at large.

Several Edicts
of the Emperours concerning Testaments.

36. This same year, viz. 455 before the Death of Valentinian did he and Martianus publish an Edict or a General Law as they call it whereby they restore Ecclesiastical Persons to their Ancient Liberty of having and enjoying what should be left by the Testaments of Women, which as we have formerly seen had been taken away by former Emperours. This Law directed to Palladius the Præfectus Prætorio, Julinian hath put into his Code, but the Note upon the Text tells us that at this day the Case is altered by two Authenticks immediately following which the Reader may consult at his leisure: The year following Martianus made another Edict, whereby he gave (a) liberty to the Adour or Plaintiff to implead the Clerks of Constantinople either before the Patriarch or the Secular Judge, for where the Reus or Defendant hath several Courts not privileged jure Communi or by Common Law the Election is in the power and discretion of the Plaintiff. The next year by a constitution in Greek, (b) he declares that thinking it to be a point both of Humanity and Piety he permits Heretics to be buried in the Sepulchres of their Ancestours. There's yet another Edict of this good Emperour which because it respects pious uses and is very short, though it bear no date, we shall add to the former. This ordains that what is left to the Poor either by Testaments or Codicils shall not come to nothing as left to uncertain Persons, but remain good and firm to all intents and purposes. For though their Persons be uncertain yet the Poor never failing there are always certain objects of charity, and as Baldus saith upon the place, the Poor are like a College, which represents a certain Person. The Le-

(a) Cod. lib. 1. tit. 3. c. 23.
Dat. 8. April. Varari & f.

(b) As Epistola de iure Test. per Augustinum Imperatorem. Causa 1. de iure iurisdictionis. Lib. 1. tit. 1. tamen C. Sacrii. 12. extra. de Id quod pauperibus Test. dicilis relinquitur, non ut sunt reliquitur evanescant, modo ratum firmum; consuetudine.

1. Tit. 3. l. 24.

Placuit omnibus locis atque urbibus iniversis claudi protinus templa, &c. Dat.
Cal. Decembris. Constantio IV. f. 3. Constante, A.A.Coff. viz. A. D. 342. Cod. f. 4.
tin. lib. 1. tit. 11. l. 1.

In Chron. Bel.

*Ad Victorii canonem 6.
vide Mursum.*

Generali lege Sancimus sine viana, &c.
Cod. lib. 1. tit.
2. l. 13

(a) Cod. lib. 1. tit. 3. c. 25.

Dat. 8. April. Varari & Joanne Cost.

(b) Ἀνδρώπινον καὶ ὅσον τῷ λογισμῶν, τὸς Αἰγυπτίους ἐπὶ τῇ ἐκτασίᾳ τῶν νεκρομυσμῶν τῶν τάφω. Lib. 1. tit. 5. l. 9. Vide tamen C. Sacris. 12. extra. de sepultura.

Id quod pauperibus Testamento vel codicillis relinquitur, non ut incertis personis relictum evanescat, sed omnibus modis ratum firmissimq; consistat. Cod. lib. 1. Tit. 3. l. 24.

gacy may be said to be certain as left to God himself: it may be done also by privilege; or the Testamentary Executor, or the Executor by Law, viz. the Bishop, may easily find out certain poor Persons on whom to confer the designed Legacy.

A Persecution in the West.

37. Thus went matters in the Eastern parts under the care and Inspection of Martianus the Emperour. In the Western and Southern there was no such serenity; a dismal Cloud of persecution having overspread Africa, since the invasion of that Country by Genfericus that Arian Captain. Most glorious were the confessions and sufferings of many Martyrs as well here as in other places, as Italy, Sardinia, Greece, Epirus, Illyricum and Spain, or wherever the forefaid Rover touched. Deogratias the Bishop of Carthage removing in this direfull persecution to a place of more repose and security, after he had steered that weather-beaten Church some three years, the Tyrant would suffer none to be chosen in his place, who having driven the Priests and other Ministers of the Church several ways as they shifted for themselves, commanded the Doors of the Church to be shut, and plainly forbade any Bishops to be ordained in other Provinces, so that when Vidor wrote the story the number of 164 was reduced to three. But this good came of so great an evil, that these Orthodox Confessours retiring farther into the Inland Countries there preached the Gospel, and though they became Martyrs many of them for so doing yet their Blood as in other cases proved the seed of the Church, many Barbarians who had never formerly heard of Christ being converted to the Faith and encouraged by the constancy of their Teachers. At such time as this mighty Tempest raged in Africa a storm was also raised in Egypt by another and contrary sort of Hereticks who, as Genfericus denied the Divinity of Christ, would not acknowledge his Humanity. These were of the faction of Dioscorus Libanus in whose Deposition they extremely grudged, so they sought all ways to be revenged on Proterius his Successour. At length they understood that Martian the Emperour was dead, through whose encouragement they had been condemned in a Synod by Proterius, they came down to Alexandria headed by one Timotheus Elurus formerly a Monk, since that a Priest of Alexandria, whom they Create Ed. Bishop of that See though Proterius was yet living. But long they intended he should not be, for setting upon him in the Church being then in the Baptistry on the high Feast of Easter, and the day whereon the Supper of the Lord was to be solemnized, they there Cruelly murdered him, dragged his dead body through the streets, tore it in peices, tasted of his Intraills, and burning at last what remained scattered the ashes in the Wind. The Villain Timothy to bring about these designs putting on black Clothes wandered up and down by night in the Cells of the Monks, and calling each of them by their names through an hollow Cane that his voice might not be discerned, told them he was one of the Ministering Spirits sent expressly to tell them all that they should not Communicate with Proterius but make Timotheus Elurus Bishop of Alexandria.

And thus at Alexandria by the faction of Dioscorus.

Proterius Bishop thereof murdered by Timotheus Elurus who seized on the See.

38. Being thus prosperously though wickedly seated in the Chair, out of fear of a Competitor, and lest he should receive the same measure he had given to others, he sought to prevent his own ruine by the destruction of those whom he had sufficient cause to believe incensed against him. Therefore did he rage in Alexandria, and all Egypt with a cruel Persecution against the Orthodox of all Ages, Sexes and Conditions, banishing such Bishops as he could not otherwise Master. On the dead Emperour he railed exceedingly, reviled the Chalcedonian Council, and vilified the several Fathers assembled therein. The Orthodox Christians herewith acquainted the new Emperour Leo, giving him a perfect account of what had passed. But those Eutychian Hereticks were as buie as they, writing Letters to the Emperour by Messengers of their own, wherein taking no notice at all of the Murder of Proterius they magnifie that peace and settlement which the Government of Timotheus had brought to the Church of Alexandria. And whereas the Emperour required that all Metropolitans should give him an account of their Faith, to see how they stood affected to the Council of Chalcedon, they gave him boldly an account both of their own belief and that of Timotheus, professing to receive the Nicene Creed and the Ephesine Synods (as well the second or Predatory as the first) but absolutely rejecting the Chalcedonian. Leo the Emperour not knowing how in this case to steer his course, by his Encyclical or Circular Letters consulted not only all the Bishops (whereof Anatolius especially) but other Persons eminent for learning, or Godliness at this time. Leo the Roman Patriarch blasted their project of having another Council assembled, by shewing that there would be no end in gratifying Hereticks by those very things wherewith the universal Church had been once satisfied, and whereas they much De Persec. Vandal. lib. 1. & Procopius de bello Vandal. lib. 1.

Enagrus lib. 2. c. 1.

Enagrus lib. 2. c. 1. & Theodorus lect. collectan. 1. 2.

Epp. viii. ill. p. 100. Chalc.

Vide epist. a. 1. & Enagrus lib. 2. c. 8.

Leo Epp. 73. &c.

much talked of the Council of Nice, he proved that this Synod defining only the Controversies at that time, relating to the Divinity of Christ, when his Humanity was not once questioned, it was not sufficient to own its Creed, but the Profession of the Fathers of Chalcedon also, wherein matters relating to his humane Nature were determined. Not only Leo, but all the rest disallowed of the Election of Timothy, as contrary to the Canons of the Church, and approved the Decrees of the Council of Chalcedon. Only Amphilochius Bishop of Sida wrote an Epistle to the Emperour, wherein he inveighed against the Election of Timothy, yet approved not the Council of Chalcedon, which things (saith Enagrus) Lib. 2. c. 10. are written by Zachary Rhetor, together with the Epistle of Amphilochius. Simeon also (he meaneth Simeon Stylita, who at this time lived in a Pillar) a Man of worthy Memory wrote concerning the aforesaid Controversies, two Letters, one to Leo the Emperour, another to Basilus Bishop of Antioch, whereof that to Basilus, being but short, herewith.

Basilus Patriarch of Antioch dies, Acacius succeeds. Anatolius Patriarch of Constantinople dies, to whom Gennadius succeeds. A Synod held there.

Acacius of Antioch dies, Martyrius succeeds him. Timotheus Elurus banished and Timothy Solifacioli is made Bishop of Alexandria.

Leo Bishop of Rome dies.

Hilarus succeeds him.

39. This year being the 457 of our Lord upon occasion of the Controversie about Easter two years before, Victorius or Victorinus of Limoges in Aquitania (both which at this time were held by the Wijegoths) being then at Rome, as he himself witnesseth in the Preface, published his Paschal Canon, which Bucherius a Jesuit caused to be printed at Plantin's Printing-press in Antwerp, with a Commentary thereto adjoined of his own Labour and Study, in the year 1633. This year died Basilus the lately mentioned Patriarch of Antioch, in his second year, to whom succeeded Acacius: As also Anatolius Patriarch of Constantinople, after he had governed that See almost Nine years, into whose place was promoted Gennadius an eminent Priest of that Church, not the Ecclesiastical Writer, but a Man very Wittry, Eloquent and Learned. The year following his Election was held at his City of Constantinople, a Synod of 73 Bishops summoned out of the neighbouring Provinces, wherein the Legates of Leo being present, the late Chalcedonian Council was confirmed. The Acts of it are all lost, one Canon made against Simoniacal Persons excepted. This same year died Acacius the newly ordained Bishop of Antioch, and was succeeded by Martyrius. And the next after when Leo the Emperour was now fully satisfied concerning the Chalcedonian Synod, and the Heretic as well as other Villanies of Timotheus Elurus, he commanded him by a Rescript directed to the Præfatus Augustalis to be banished (several mention several places) and then was chosen into his place, another Timothy surnamed Basilus Solifacioli or Allus. At this time died Simeon called Stylita from his having lived in a Pillar about 80 years, who by Theodoret and others is celebrated as the wonder of the World, for his extraordinary Sanctity. To him succeeded in the like strictness of Monastical Life, Daniel, who not far from the Borders of Constantinople, ascended the Pillar. The year following was the last of Leo Bishop of Rome, who died on the Eleventh of April, a Man of unblameable Life, excellent Endowments of Mind and indefatigable Industry, not only for the Primacy of his See (wherein he shewed himself zealous far above reason) but the good of Christian Religion. Out of his Epistles the Centuriours of Magdeburg have collected many Decrees, which the Reader if he please may consult, there being nothing in them to highly material as to bring them into our Institution. His eminent Parts, and his great diligence have got him in later Ages, both the Name and Reputation of the Great.

40. After the Death of Leo, the See was vacant seven days, saith Platina, but rather so many Months as Baronius gathereth both from Marianus Scotus, and a Roman Council assembled under his Successour, from which it appears that the Chair was not filled by another Bishop, till November following. This was Hilarus the Son of Crispinus a Sardinian by Birth, whom when yet a Deacon, Leo sent one of his Legates to the Synod of Ephesus, being the 438th. Bishop of Rome according to Platina, the 45th. according to Pawinius; and as Marianus reckons the 46th. This Bishop is very much commended, for vigorously executing his Pastoral Office amidst all the great Troubles, wherewith Italy in his time was imbroiled. For repairing the Churches which the Barbarous Huns had defaced when they took the City. In his expences he was rather profuse than sparing. He built some Monasteries, and added to certain Churches the Chapels which he called Oratories. He also as Sabellius will have it collected the Pontifical Decrees into one Body, and dispersed them into all Countries. To him certain Epistles are attributed, wherein he confirms the three General Synods of Nice, Ephesus and Chalcedon, condemns the Heresies of Nestorius, Eutyches and all others, and according to the Custom of his Predecessors

Consult Suri-um si placet & Baronium ad hunc Ann.

ed and received him. At this time the condition of the Churches in Gall was very sad, the Arian Goths making havock of all things. And not only there, but in the West, generally things both Ecclesiastical and Civil had a very bad face, the Barbarous Nations overturning all, and filling all places with their Cruelties and Heresies. These disasters put an end to the Roman Empire in the West, Augustulus being deposed by Odoacer, and confined to a Castle near to Naples. The Church, blessed be God, had not just the like measure; but Church and State are so nearly allied, and so much sympathize, that if the one languish, the other can scarcely be in an healthy condition. As the same causes produce the same effects in both, so aswell the remedies are alike, as such preservatives as keep both in life and vigour. Therefore did Ancient and Primitive prudence as Twins cloth them with the like forms and fashions of Government, which dayly experience applauds as most agreeable. And because such is their Alliance and agreement we shall limit and terminate our observations of both with the same Periods, those matters last mentioned falling out the year preceding the deposing of Augustulus.

Augustulus and the Empire in the West overthrown by Odoacer.

F I N I S.

THE TABLE.

A

A Cadius Bishop of Antioch 135, dies, ibid.
 Aetius and his Heresie Condemned 71.
 Alexander Bishop of Alexandria 39, banisheth Arius 40, ordains Athanasius and upon his death appoints him his Successour 47.
 Alexander Bishop of Constantinople refuses to admit Arius 43, dies 56.
 Ambrose Bishop of Milain is present at the Council held at Aquileia 111, opposes the Petition of the Pagans for restoring their Idolatry 114, forbids it in his Diocese 120, Baptizes Augustine 124, makes Theodosius suffer for his cruelty 131, makes the Funeral Sermon of Valentinian the Second, 134, dies 135.
 Anastasius Bishop of Rome 134, dies 139.
 Anatolius Bishop of Constantinople 185, dies 205.
 Ancyra a Synod held there 74.
 Andæus, and his Heresie Condemned 6.
 Anthropomorphites who 50.
 Antioch a Synod held there 57, its Canons and Decrees 58, 59, another 61, a third 77, the Inhabitants and Julian quarrel 87.
 Apollinarius and his Heresie condemned 77.
 Apollo his Temple at Daphne burnt 87.
 Arcadius Roman Emperour 114, forbids Christians to use Pagan Superstition 119, demolishes the Pagan Temples 137, and banisheth several Hereticks 138, banisheth Chrysostome Bishop of Constantinople 141, but soon after dies 143.
 Archierosyna what 119.
 Arius and his heretical Tenets 39, condemned by the Alexandrian Council 40, and that of Nice 42, rejected by Athanasius 48, raises Tumults at Alexandria and Constantinople 153, and dies, ibid.
 Arfacius Bishop of Constantinople 141, dies 142.
 Athanasius his Birth-place 46, his Education and Preferment 47, several false Accusations against him 49, which causeth him to be banished 52, is sent home 56, but condemned by the Arians, and banished 58, received into Communion by the Synod and Orthodox Bishops at Rome 61, cleared by the Council at Sardica 62, protected by Constantine the Emperour 65, admitted to return 66, accused again by the Arians 67, summoned to Rome, and excommunicated at Arles 68, condemned by Constantine 69, writes two Apologies for himself 70, returns 83, is banished, but returns the third time 91, is forced to shift for himself 97, returns 98, his Character and Death 99.

 Atticus Bishop of Constantinople 142, dies 159.
 Audientes who 124.
 Augustine his Birth-place and Youth 102, is reformed from his loose course of life 124, ordained Priest 134, made Bishop of Hippo, ibid. converts Felix the Manichee 142, dies 163, his Works 164.
 Augustulus Roman Emperour in the West deposed 208.
 Auruspicina prohibited by the Emperours Edict 4.

B.

Baptism how used in the Primitive times 127.
 Basil Bishop of Casarea in Cappadocia 95, suffers under Valens his Persecution 96, comforts the Orthodox Bishops 97, dies 102, his Works 103.
 Basilus Bishop of Antioch 205.
 Bishops what 24, the manner of Electing them 25, of Postulating them 26, their power in the Church 33, and other privileges 34, 35.
 Boniface Bishop of Rome pretends to the Title of receiving Appeals from the African Churches 151, which is rejected 152, &c. Preaches contrary to his own practice 157, his Works and Death 158.
 Bourdeaux a Synod held there 115.
 Briceus Bishop of Tours 135.
 Burying the manner of it, and place where 89.
 Ec Carthage

The TABLE.

Carthage a Council held there 135, the Canons thereof 136, two more 137.
Catechumeni who 125.
Celestinus Bishop of Rome claims the right of Appeals from the African Churches 151, which is rejected 152, &c. sends St. Patrick to convert the Irish 169, dies 172.
Celicolæ who 143.
Cæsarea a Synod held there 51.
Chalcedon a General Council summoned there 185, the several Sessions, Acts and Decrees thereof 186, &c. and all confirmed by Martinianus the Emperor 198.
Choropitepi who 35.
Chrysofome Bishop of Constantinople 133, is deposed 140, recalled, but not after banished 141, his Character and Death 142, his Corps translated to Constantinople 174.
Church, its Polity, Government and Governours 21, &c. its division 29, and 65, its maintenance 37, and jurisdiction 38.
Churches when first in use, with the method of placing the Congregation 132.
Collegia a Synod held there 62.
Competentes who 125.
Confirmation what and how used 127.
Conflans Roman Emperor 56, calls a Council at Sardica 62, writes to Constantinus concerning Athanasius his return 65, is murdered 67, his Ecclesiastical Laws 80.
Constantine Roman Emperor 1, converted to the Faith 2, provides for the well being of Christians 3, prefers them to places of Honour 4, forbids their partaking in the Sacrifices of the Lilitra 6, regulates swearing 11, resides at Bizantium, alias Constantinople 12, adorns it with Churches 13, provides for the Inhabitants 14, his farther care for the Church 15, an account of his pretended donation to the See of Rome 16, &c. he confirms the Canons of the Council of Nice 46, is baptized and dies at Nicomedia 53, cleared from the aspersions of Arianism 54.
Constantinus Roman Emperor 56, favours the Arians, and persecutes the Orthodox 57, banisheth Andreas the Heretick 60, and displaceth Paul Bishop of Constantinople, ibid. calls a Council at Sardica 62, admits Athanasius to return 66, banisheth Paul from Constantinople 67, summons a Council at Arles, and at Milain 68, condemns Athanasius 69, calls a Synod at Sirmium 72, another at Ancyra 74, another at Seleucia 75, another at Constantinople 76, and dies, ib. his Laws Ecclesiastical 79.

Councils Oecumenical the first summoned to Nice in Bithynia 41, the second to Constantinople 107, the third to Ephesus 164, the fourth to Chalcedon 185, &c.
Creeds, the Nicene Creed made 43, four made by the Arians at Antioch 58, one more at another held there 61, another at Sardica 63, another at Sirmium 72, another at Nice in Thrace 74, another at Seleucia 75, another at Constantinople 76, how many in all, ibid.
Curatas whence so called 36.
Cyril Bishop of Jerusalem 89, is present at the second General Council 107, dies 121.
Cyril Bishop of Alexandria 146, quarrels with the Prefect of the City 148, calls a Provincial Synod there against Nestorius 162, is accused as an Heretick by him 163, presides at the third General Council at Ephesus 165, receives the Eastern Bishops into Communion 169, Dies 177.
DAmasius Bishop of Rome 94, dies 115.
Daphne the Grove destroyed 80.
Deacon his Office 37.
Dieccesis what 36.
Diofcorus Bishop of Alexandria 182, presides at the Council of Ephesus 113, is condemned by the Council of Chalcedon 186, banished 187.
Domnus Bishop of Antioch 177, appears at the Council of Ephesus 183, is condemned and deposed 184.
Episcopal Jurisdiction promoted 95.
Evagrius Bishop of Constantinople ousted by Damophilus the Arian 86.
Eudoxius Bishop of Germanicia in Syria is translated to Antioch 71, deposed 75, succeeds Macedonius in Constantinople 76, is condemned by the Macedonian Sect in a Synod at Lampfacus 92, dies 96.
Eusebius Bishop of Cæsarea furnisheth Constantinople with Church Books 13, vindicated from the calumny of Baroni-Eusebius Bishop of Nicomedia fides with Arius 40, slanders Athanasius 48, is banished 50, but recalled, he adds new Forgery, ibid. is translated to Constantinople 56, dies 60.
Eutyches and his Heresie condemned at Constantinople 182, quitted at a Synod held at Ephesus 184, condemned by the Emperor's Edict 199, by another his Works ordered to be burnt 200.
Fastidius Priscus Bishop of London his Character and Death 161.
Fideles who 128.

Fla-

The TABLE.

Flavianus Bishop of Constantinople 182, is banished and dies 184.
Gennadius Bishop of Constantin. 205.
Germanus Bishop of Auxerre in Gall confounds the Pelagians in Britain 160.
Gladiators their combating prohibited 12.
George intrudes into the See of Alexandria 69, his Character 70, Death 83.
Government paternal first instituted 21, that of the Jewish Church 22, that of the Christian Church 23.
Gratian Roman Emperor 102, restores the banished Orthodox 103, his Laws 105, calls a Synod at Aquileia 111, another at Saragossa in Spain 112, forbids Pagans to sacrifice 113, takes away the Allowance for it, which caused them to murder him 114.
Gregory Bishop of Nazianzum 98, is translated to Constantinople 103, quits his See 109, his Character and Death 128.
Heresie and its first promoters 77.
St. Hierome 104, dies 155, his Works 156.
Hillary Bishop of Poitiers is banished by Constantius 70, writes against him, and is recalled 76, dies 95, an account of his Cradle, ibid.
Hillary Bishop of Rome 205, dies 206.
Honorius Roman Emperor 135, forbids Pagan Superstition and Worship in the Temples 137, condemns several Heresies 138, but permits the secular Games and Spectacula to be celebrated 142, makes an Edict against the Jews and Pagans 143, another 144, a third 149, summons a Synod at Ravenna 154, dies 158.
Hypostasis what 104.
Iberians converted to the Faith 48.
Iohn Bishop of Jerusalem 121, is of Origen's Opinion 133, dies 149.
Indians lower converted to the Faith 48.
Innocent Bishop of Rome 141, dies 149.
Instructi who 128.
Iohn Bishop of Antioch 165, is reconciled to Cyril, and the Orthodox 169, dies 177.
Jovian Roman Emperor 91, his management of Affairs and Death 92.
Ireland its Ecclesiastical Government what 170.
Julian Roman Emperor 82, his Polity and practice against Christians 85, his care for the Temple of Apollo at Daphne 86, his Cruelty 88, he endeavours to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem 89, his Death and Character 90.
Julius Bishop of Rome 52, calls a Synod there 57, receives Athanasius into Communion 61, joins with the Arians in making a new Creed 63, assists Athanasius in his return 66, dies 68.

Juvenalis Bishop of Jerusalem 183, hath Patriarchal power confirmed to his See by the Council of Chalcedon 189, is ousted by the Monks, but restored by the Emperor 200.
LAmplacusa Synod held there 92.
Leo Bishop of Rome 176, dies 205.
Leo Roman Emperor 205, his Ecclesiastical Laws 206, and Death 207.
Liberius Bishop of Rome 68, subscribes to the Arian Creed 73, but declaring against the Arians is afterwards received by his Flock 93, dies 94.
Luciferians who 84.
Lucius the Arian Bishop of Alexandria 99, is expelled 102.
Lutra what 7.
MAcarius Bishop of Jerusalem 46, dies 50.
Marcus Bishop of Rome 52.
Martinianus Roman Emperor punisheth the Sect of Eutychians 184, summons the fourth General Council 185, condemns Diofcorus Bishop of Alexandria 186, banishes him 187, confirms the Confession of Faith made by the Council 189, and all its Canons and Decrees 198, puts forth an Edict against the Eutychian Heresie 199, another ordering the Books of Eutyches to be burnt 200, confirms the privileges of the Church 201, puts forth an Edict against Paganism 202, is farther kind to Churchmen 203, dies 204.
Martin Bishop of Tours 115, is persecuted by the Hereticks 117, dies 135.
Martyrius Bishop of Antioch 205.
Maximianus Bishop of Constantinople 168, dies 178.
Maximus Bishop of Antioch 185, his Patriarchal Jurisdiction 189, concludes the Dispute concerning Athanasius Bishop of Paros 194, dies 205.
Maximus Bishop of Jerusalem refuses to come to the Council at Antioch 57, dies 67.
Nectarius Bishop of Constantinop. 109.
Neophyti who 128.
Nestorius Bishop of Constantinople 160, his Heresie condemned at a Synod held at Alexandria 162, he accuses Cyril to the Emperor 163, is deposed by the third General Council at Ephesus 165, and banished 167, his Works burnt, and his miserable Death 173.
Nice in Bithynia, a General Council held there 41.
Nice in Thrace a Synod held there by the Arians 74.
Nynnianus Venedota a famous Clergyman of Britain 161.
 Pagani

The TABLE.

P Agani who 80.
 Paracia what 36.
 Paul Elect of Constantinople 61, is banished and murdered by the Arians 67.
 St. Patrick converts the Irish to the Faith 169.
 Patriarchs who 28, their Power and Titles of Honour the same 30, with other qualifications 31.
 Pelagius his Heresie what 146.
 Peter Bishop of Alexandria is driven out by the Arians 99, restored and dies 102.
 Philippi, the Arians meet there 62.
 Photinus and his Heresie condemned 71.
 Præcators their Tenets 78.
 Presbyters who 24, their Office in the Church 33, their Original and several Names 36.
 Primates who 27, their privileges and power 32.
 Priscillianus and his Heresie condemned 112, he is executed 115.
 Proclus Bishop of Constantinople 173, dies 182.
 Proteus Bishop of Alexandria 200, murdered 204.

R.

R egium a Synod held there 176.
 Rome, Constantine's donation to that See 16, a Synod held there 57, which receives Athanasius into Communion 61, another 172.

S.

S abellius and his Heresie condemned 40.
 Sardica a Council held there 62.
 Secular Games omitted 3.
 Seleucia a Synod held there 74.
 Semarians who 67.
 Serapis at Alexandria demolished 129.
 Shaving Priest what, laid down 131.
 Simplicius Bishop of Rome 206.
 Siricius Bishop of Rome 115, dies 135.
 Sisinus Bishop of Constantinople 159, dies 160.
 Sixtus Bishop of Rome 172, dies 176.
 Sylvester Bishop of Rome 52.
 Synarchia what 8.
 Synesius Bishop of Ptolemais his Works and Character 145.

T.

T heodosius Roman Emperour is baptized 105, calls the second General Council to Constantinople 106, and a Synod there 109, which places the Bishop thereof next to him of Rome 111, he forbids the Pagans to sacrifice 113, calls another Synod to Constantinople 114, suppresseth the Arians, and forbids Christians to use any Pagan ceremony 119, endeavours to suppress Paganism by demolishing their Temples 129, is cruel, and for it undergoes Ecclesiastical censure 130, dies 134.

 Theodosius Roman Emperour 140, puts forth an Edict against the Jews 142, and against Hereticks 144, banisheth the Jews from Alexandria 147, other Edicts against them 149, stops a Persecution against the Christians in Persia 155, by an Edict sets forth the prerogative of Constantinople 157, several other Edicts 158, makes Nestorius Bishop thereof 160, summons the third General Council 164, banisheth Nestorius 167, promotes Union in the Church 168, commands the Books of Nestorius to be burnt 173, sets forth an Edict against Paganism 175, calls a Synod at Ephesus 183, dies 184.

Theopachite what 55.

Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria 117, exposes the ridiculousness of Paganism 130, banisheth the Origenists 138, makes a breach 'twixt Chrysostome and Epiphanius 139, farther prosecutes Chrysostome 141, dies of a Lethargy 146.

Tirones who 128.

Toledo a Synod held there 138.

Timothy Bishop of Alexandria 102, comes to the second General Council 107, dies 117.

Timotheus Alurus Bishop of Alexandria 204, banished 205, recalled 207.

Timotheus Solifaciolus Bishop of Alexandria 205 banished 207.

Tyre a Synod held there 51.

V.

V alen a Synod held there 177.
 Valens Roman Emperour 92, calls a Synod at Lampiacus, ibid. makes several Laws 93, is baptized 94, persecutes the Orthodox 96, designs to masacre them 97, is severe toward Monks 101, burnt alive by the Goths 103.

Valentinian the first, Roman Emperour 92, makes divers Laws 93, dies 100, more of his Laws 101.

Valentinian the second, Roman Emperour 101, his Laws 102, his farther care of the Church 105, prohibits Pagan Sacrifices 113, favours the Arians 118, forbids Pagan Superstition 119, is murdered 134.

Valentinian the third, Roman Emperour 159, confirms the privileges of the Church 201, puts forth an Edict against Paganism 202, is farther kind to Churchmen 203, dies 204.

Z.

Z eno Roman Emperour 207.
 Zozimus Bishop of Rome 150, pretends to the right of receiving Appeals from the African Churches 151, which is rejected 153, dies 154.

FINIS.